Arthur Train's Famous Novel Coming Here in Film Version.

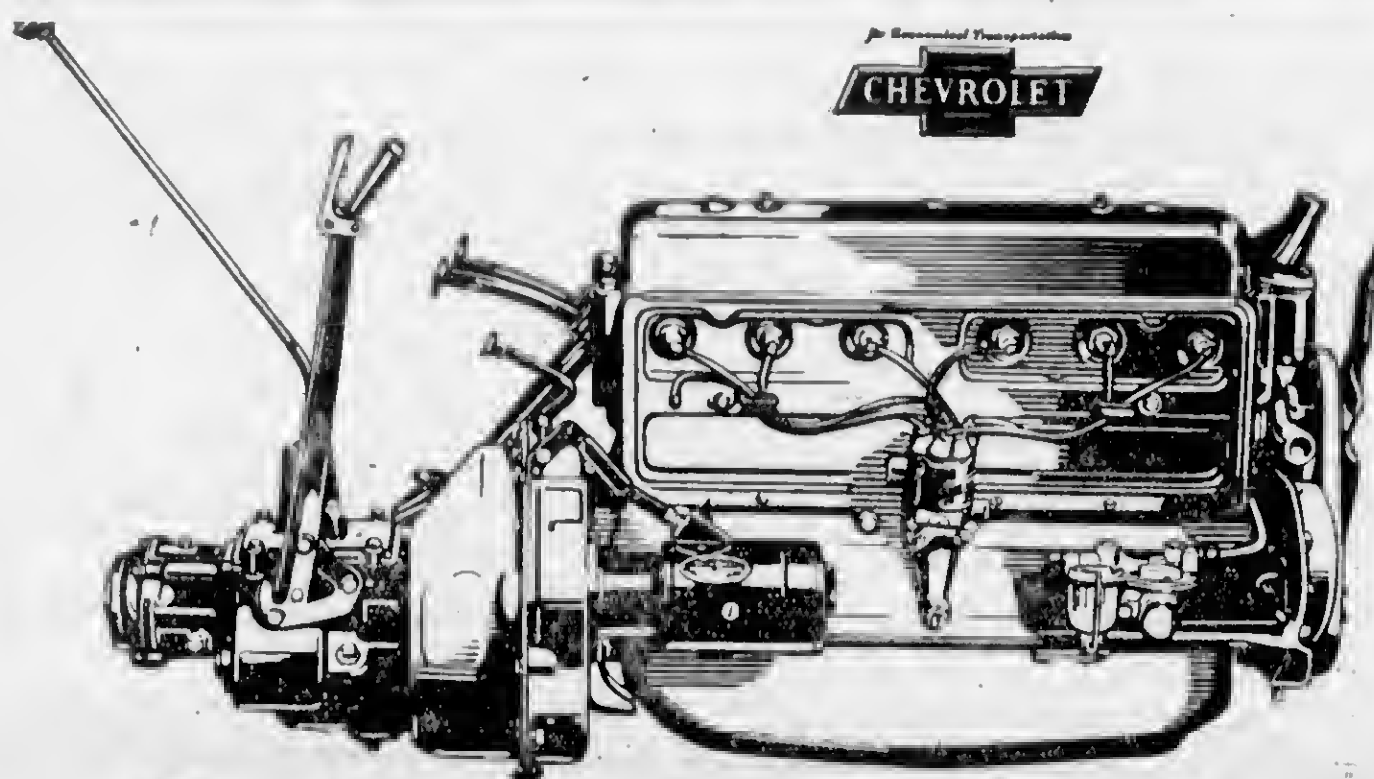

Arthur Train's famous novel, "Illusion," will be seen and heard in its film form at the Palace Theatre as the main feature Saturday and Sunday next.

The story, which was serialized in the Ladies' Home Journal, deals with the fortunes of a young magician who becomes the lion of the society circles in which he practices his art as a professional entertainer. He finds himself drawn by two worlds—the world of bedizened dowagers and haughty sophisticates—and the world of troupers, show-people, his own kind.

A cast of eminent actors, many of them veterans of the speaking stage, support the featured pair. Among them are June Collyer, Kay Francis, Regis Toomey, Knute Erickson, Eugene Besserer, William Austin, Emilie Melville, Paul Lukas, Eddie Kane, Michael Visaroff, Katherine Wallace and Maude Turner Gordon.

50 horsepower six cylinder engine

Not until you drive the new Chevrolet Six can you appreciate what a wonderful improvement has been made in its famous six-cylinder valve-in-head engine. With its capacity increased to 50 horsepower, it has great reserve energy for sweeping up the steepest hills—for swift acceleration —and for sustained high speeds. Its power flows evenly and smoothly. And it is extremely flexible in traffic. In fact—it does everything you could possibly want a motor to do. Yet it is remarkably economical in its use of gasoline and oil. Come in today for a demonstration.

Charlevoix Invites Good Citizens!

There is always room in any ambitious town for new citizens. And Charlevoix invites people of good character to come and live here.

Folks from large and medium sized cities are looking countryward for their future homes. They prefer the peace and contentment of the smaller towns, the pure, unsullied air, the better surroundings for children, and the increased joys of living.

Charlevoix can bring many of these home seekers into its fold. But we must show them the things that are desirable to new citizens.

Honest government good schools and churches, a physically and morally clean city, plenty of employment, attractive streets, opportunities for growing children, civic pride and genuine co-operation toward a constantly advancing community—are the things that induce substantial citizens to make their homes here.

Attaining and maintaining these civic qualities depend on the individual effort and co-operation given by our present citizens. Let's all work toward our Ideal City and then be enthusiastic in boosting our town orally at every opportunity.

We, the undersigned, Believers in Charlevoix, heartily endorse the above:

WAIT UPWARD TREND.

At just what period the country will emerge from the present industrial slump is still mostly a matter of speculation. It is the general impression in Washington that no remarkable changes will take place before April 1, after which a general forward movement is confidently expected, or hoped for.

The unemployment situation continues the greatest problem facing the administration, without much hope of relieving the actual distress of the workers for several months. Several bills have been introduced in congress for the purpose of creating a permanent policy towards unemployment, but none of these is expected to result in actual legislation at this session.

The terrible momentum of business last summer prevented any accurate survey of surplus stocks, which forced a number of industries to actually pile up their stocks during the last few weeks of the year. The two most affected were radio and motor, but the latter started cleaning house early and at this time are well along towards stability.

The increased buying power of agriculture is expected to have a beneficial influence during the next few months, and together with early expansion plans of utilities augmented with civic, state and national building programs is expected to produce a substantial upward trend all along the line before the year is far advanced.

WHEN COURTS DEMUR.

Governor Fred W. Green has instructed Atty. Gen. Wilbur M. Bruckner to begin an immediate investigation into the conduct of certain public officials charged with refusing to enforce Michigan's prohibition law known as the Cuthbertson act.

This is the first time that a statewide investigation of this nature has ever been deemed necessary by a governor of Michigan. The courts are supposed to interpret the laws and hand out justice in accordance with the penalties provided by law for each class of crime. Great leeway was given them in this respect, and until the advent of drastic prohibition measures their competency to deal with crime of all kinds was never questioned.

It seems a strange thing that the only laws which the courts are charged with ignoring are those relating to prohibition enforcement. We have the spectacle of judges sentencing robbers and guntoters to prison without mercy, who in return rebel at being compelled by legislative enactment to impose heavy penalties upon first time violators of a law purely social in nature, regardless of whatever extenuating circumstances that may have been uncovered while prosecuting the case.

The Cuthbertson act was Michigan's reply to what amounted to a national charge that we were a commonwealth of fanatics engaged in sending men and women to prison for life for four violations of the liquor laws. At that time Governor Green was accused of being in league with the bootleggers because he sought to have such a drastic penalty reduced, and a certain gentleman from Detroit drew much attention to himself by hurling this charge against the chief executive.

It is possible that under the lash of certain lobbyists our legislators were cowed into enacting legislation they knew was so drastic that it would defeat the very purpose for which it was intended? That seems to be the case.

The investigation proposed by the governor will serve a useful purpose if it results in throwing some helpful light on this question which is in the minds of many people interested in the welfare of Michigan.

FEED THE BIRDS.

Don't forget your feathered friends while the snows of winter are piled high upon the earth.

When feeding places are covered thousands of birds perish every winter. If we would have the summer paradise we would like every effort should be made to save their little lives.

Make it feeding sanctuary out of your back yard. Get in the habit of scattering feed of some kind for them every morning. You will be surprised how quickly the "news" spreads and how many visitors will come to partake of your hospitality. And next summer they will come back to sing sweet songs in green boughed trees. Your reward will be ample if you make a little contribution in kindness and thoughtfulness while winter days are here.

MAKE THAT VISIT NOW

We see it so often. The folks come to the funeral. The parents come or the children come. The brothers and sisters come. Relatives come.

Many of those who come to the funeral never come to visit the deceased in his or her lifetime. We know of cases in which a son had not been back to the old town for 20 years. But he came to attend his mother's funeral. We have heard of brothers who never saw anything of each other since early manhood. But after death had laid his hand on one the other came to see his brother in the coffin.

Of course people should attend the funerals of the relatives. It is a mark of respect. But how much better it is to see the folks, the loved ones, the friends, while they are still alive. Then it is that the visit is most appreciated. Folks who are dead do not know those who attend their funerals. But there is many a heart that is yearning for a visit with some member of the family, with some friend.

HIGHWAY DEPT. WEATHER STATION BURNS

Caught Fire While Attendant Was Away on Errand.

The state weather station three miles from Elmira, caught fire and burned last Monday forenoon. It was a new building about 10x20 feet, built this summer. The weather man in charge has been called back to Lansing, and it is understood no effort will be made this winter to replace the station.

All the station instruments were lost, thermometers, barometers, wind gauge, snowfall gauge etc. The weather man in charge of the station had gone to Alba on an errand, and the station burned during his absence. It is presumed the fire caught from the stove or the "Michigan chimney" with which the building was provided. Valuable records and information were lost.

This was the only highway department station in the state, and Michigan is understood to be the only state in the union where weather and snow reports have been taken in connection with highway programs. Highway departments of other states have been much interested in the work of the station.

The dozens of tests made with various styles of snow fence have more than paid for the entire expense of the station without doubt. Other states in the snow belt of the country have profited also.

To Lighten Your Burden

Little more than a generation ago wise purchasing—even of the family necessities—required a great deal of time and effort. Manufacture was limited. Exact articles for particular needs were hard to find. And often one product after another had to be tried before the right one was found.

Today—manufacture that seems limitless has filled our stores with excellent articles of every nature. There are many brands for every need. The discriminating buyer can choose from a great array of goods that are continually being spread before his eyes.

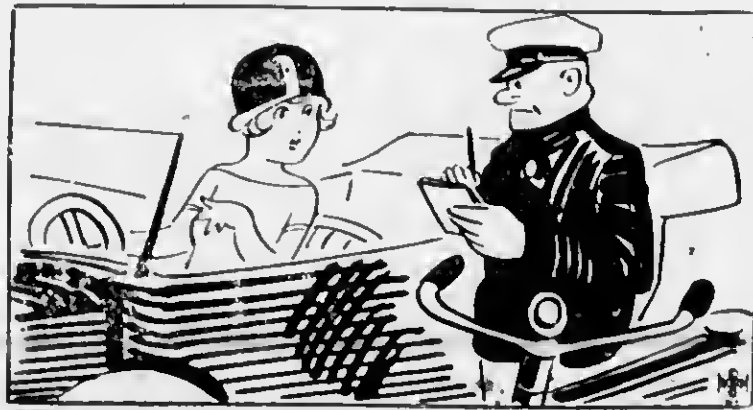

But to buy wisely one must read the advertisements. In the pages of this newspaper, progressive merchants and manufacturers are telling you—truthfully and concisely—about their products. They are anticipating your needs. They know that they must meet your exacting requirements.

Read the advertisements regularly and carefully. They are the daily measure of business progress. They are the means to discriminate buying. They will help you to get the greatest value for every dollar you spend.

FUNERAL THURSDAY
FOR MRS. W. P. HICKEN

Death Came Tuesday Morning Following a Year's Illness.

Funeral services will be held Thursday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock from the Congregational church for Mrs. William Park Hicken, whose death occurred at 5 o'clock Tuesday morning at the Charlevoix Hospital. Rev. W. H. Rauch of the Baptist church will have charge of the services and interment will be at Brookside cemetery.

Mrs. Hicken had been ill from an incurable disease for nearly a year, and while her death brought grief to the husband, three small children, and other relatives, it was not unexpected.

Lucy Belle Stevens was born April 23, 1892, at Charlevoix, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Stevens. She spent her girlhood here and went with her parents at the age of 10 years to Minneapolis. In subsequent years the family resided at Grand Rapids, Minn., and it was here that she was married October 23, 1915, to William Park Hicken. Prior to her marriage, she taught school four years at Warba, Minn. (Mr. Hicken was then employed as cashier of a bank at that place. Before coming to Charlevoix in August, 1928, Mr. and Mrs. Hicken resided at Warba, Floodwood and Duluth.

WASHINGTON NEWS LETTER.

Hooverizing the Weather.

President Hoover will soon be the most comfortable White House executive that the country has ever had. Neither the damp chill of Washington winters or the intense heat of Washington summers shall penetrate the interior of the White House office building, now being restored after the Christmas eve fire. It's simpler than it sounds. An air conditioning system, similar to that already installed in both houses of congress, will manufacture weather of exactly the right temperature and relative humidity for presidential comfort.

Not only for the sake of the Hoover efficiency, but for that of his expanding office force and the visitors who wait to see the president or his secretaries, is this health giving system being adopted. Through the several offices of the executive suite will be circulated at all times of the year the atmosphere of balmy spring with relative humidity around fifty percent, which is regarded as ideal. It will even be possible to keep the windows closed and shut out all noise without having to worry about the ventilation.

A Good Little Customer.

Where in the world do all our textile products go? Here we have an industry turning out goods valued at more than eight billion dollars yearly, involving 1,694,000 workers whose purchasing power is placed at over a billion and a half dollars—our major industry, in fact. Surely, the population of the United States cannot absorb the production of such a gigantic enterprise. Well, it doesn't. The continuance of this industry, as in the case of many outstanding industries, depends upon foreign purchases.

Of the foreign consumers of American textiles, the small country of Cuba is our second greatest customer. Exports of cotton cloth, duck and tire fabrics to Cuba totaled 50,213,000 square yards during the first half of 1929, according to the department of commerce. This is a notable increase over cotton exports to Cuba in the preceding year. In spite of the island's money depression caused by our tariff legislation against Cuba's most important commodity, sugar, the republic continues to accept textiles in such quantities that our most important industry is able to maintain its huge production and to furnish employment to thousands of people in this country.

The Cathedral of Mount St. Alban. In our capital outlet for its many monuments and buildings of architectural beauty there will soon be completed a vast cathedral which may rival some old world temples of worship that required centuries of hard labor. This is the Washington cathedral upon Mount St. Alban. Work upon it has already progressed so far that one can stand near and grasp the vision of the whole design in its perfection.

Interest in the cathedral has by no means been confined to the capital. In the Cathedral Book of Remembrance are inscribed approximately 30,000 names of persons who have made some contribution to the building fund. Worshippers and pilgrims have come from every state in the union during the past year to visit Mount St. Alban. More than 300,000 admirers traveled to Washington in 1929 to satisfy their desire for a glimpse of the great American cathedral in its making. In a small brochure recently issued by the executive committee supervising the project are recorded expressions of pride and gratification from many national leaders regarding this religious and architectural masterpiece. Each of the six recent presidents has set forth his views as to the significance of the cathedral in our country's spiritual life.

Wyoming's Fort Francis E. Warren. Until last month an army post near Cheyenne, Wyoming, bore the name of a man who was killed in action during the Civil War, D. A. Russell of the Union army, appointed a Major General by President Lincoln the very day that he died. The war department has changed the name to that of a former soldier who died while a statesman, the late Senator Francis E. Warren of Wyoming, also a Civil War veteran.

Fort Francis E. Warren has "a history dating back to 1847. It was so situated as to prove an ideal location for a military camp and supply depot for soldiers battling the first transcontinental railroad as well as for the troops who protected them from roving bands of hostile Indians. When the construction of the Union Pacific railroad had been completed, Fort D. A. Russell, as it was then known, grew in size and importance. It became one of the largest army depots in the United States, and it is recorded that at one time its corrals held more than 1,000 mules. When the World War burst upon us, this fort was considered the largest exclusively military post in the whole United States. Troops stationed at Fort Francis E. Warren at present include the Twentieth and First Infantry regiments and a battalion of the Seventy-sixth Field artillery.

The War Department, in changing the designation, did not forget to make provision for continuing the memory of Major General Russell in historic nomenclature, and a cavalry post at Marfa, Texas, has fallen heir to his name.

As a soldier, Senator Warren won the Congressional Medal of Honor, the highest military distinction conferred by the United States government for conspicuous bravery at the battle of Fort Hudson, May 27, 1863.

More and Better Bird Cafeterias.

This is the season of hard times for birds, the Biological Survey of the Department of Agriculture reminds us. The tiny, feathered things that peck around ambitiously but futilely in the snow are likely to starve if their human friends don't come to their relief with food. Suet or other fat, pork rinds, bones with shreds of meat and seeds are some of the materials most pleasing to hungry birds at this season, the Biological Survey adds.

There are various ways of constructing "bird cafeterias" out in the open. One is to make low hutsches or wigwag-like shacks of corn or grain sheaves under which food may be scattered. The opening should be on the south side, and it will be inspected occasionally to see that it is not blocked with snow.

Alders and birches bear in their cones a supply of seeds eagerly sought by redpolls, siskins, and goldfinches in winter. When these trees are pruned, the bird-food might easily be saved for feeding time. Pine and evening grosbeaks are very fond of the seeds in ash tree and boxelder fruits, while crossbills enjoy larch, pine and other conifers. With a little attention to such details, it will not be hard to cater to the tastes of your feathered friends.

Once Upon a Time in Mississippi.

Another disintegration of party lines and principles is evident from recent votes on tariff schedules in the senate. Representatives and senators who regard themselves as suliminated messenger boys for the special interests in their own bailiwicks are coming in for criticism from those who believe that once a person is elected to congress, his duty as a statesman is to the whole country in accordance with the English theory of representation.

A few still remember the eighties when L. Q. C. Lamar was senator from Mississippi. The Mississippi legislature passed a resolution instructing him to vote for free silver. Answered the senator, who subsequently became secretary of the interior under Cleveland and later a justice of the supreme court:

"I hold my commission from the legislature of Mississippi. I am ready to return it if they desire it. My conscience and my judgment are my own and I shall vote for nothing that does not meet both my conscience and my judgment. I shall therefore not vote for free silver."

The next day the legislature rescinded the resolution.

"NO MEDICINE IN THE WORLD LIKE KONJOLA"

Lady Was Told She Must Have Operation—New Medicine Scores Complete Victory.

MRS. FRANK LETSON.

"In my estimation there is no medicine in the world like Konjola," said Mrs. Frank Letson, 130 South Third street, Saginaw. "For a long time I suffered terribly from indigestion and eventually my heart was affected. Then other troubles developed, and I was told that I would have to undergo an operation. I suffered such agony that I had to walk the floor. I dreaded the operation and determined to keep on taking Konjola."

"This medicine had greatly relieved my indigestion and I had a world of faith in it. Well, one day, after I had suffered an unusually bad attack of pain, I noticed a change. It seemed to be the turning point, and thereafter I improved rapidly. Day by day I got better, and today I am not only blessed with a fine digestion but the other trouble has disappeared. Is it any wonder that I praise Konjola?"

Konjola is sold in Charlevoix at P. J. Fessenden's drug store and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

McGEACH SCHOOL NOTES

Libby Kerechuk has been ill the past week.

The eighth graders are spending all spare time on history and arithmetic note books.

The seventh grade received their reading books, "Sandy Macdonald's Man." They find it very interesting.

The fifth and sixth grades memorized the poem "Today." The third and fourth grades learned "The Night Wind."

The fifth and sixth grades wrote letters to railroad companies for booklets on other countries. They will use the pictures for geography projects.

The attendance has been real good in spite of the cold weather. However, the three little huggins, Evelyn Ager, Albert Webster and Teddy duncha, are not with us since Christmas.

The spelling contest or spell-down last Friday showed up some of our good and poor spellers. Even though some difficult words were spelled, the whole school went down on the word "necessary."

We have a half holiday today, due to the furnace pipes being worn and coming apart. No damage was done, as the trouble was found in time. However, the boys and Mr. Heise have very sore eyes as a result of working in the smoke.

The Shapton family have all been suffering with flu. Evelyn, who came to school though not feeling well, is quite ill now with pneumonia. We all extend her best wishes for a speedy recovery. The rest of the family are better now.

AUTOMOBILE NEWS

Dodge Production Increases 116 Per Cent.

Substantial increases in production schedules for January were announced recently by Dodge Brothers. Orders placed by Dodge Brothers dealers at their recent convention in Detroit and the splendid reception the new six and the new eight received from the public at the New York automobile show, has made necessary an increase of 33 per cent in the original production schedule of the new low-priced six, and an 83 per cent increase in the original production schedule of the eight-cylinder models. "These increased production schedules," said C. W. Matheson, the general sales manager, "bring to light the interesting fact that American industry apparently is returning to its normal stride more rapidly than was anticipated in appraisals made prior to January 1st by business and industrial leaders in all parts of the country."

"In spite of these large increases the output for the month will still be insufficient to meet the demands," continued Mr. Matheson. "The reception that has been accorded Dodge Brothers new six and new eight wherever they have been shown has been enthusiastic beyond all expectation. The fact that these pronounced increases in production had to be made before the new cars were universally announced and displayed affords ample proof of this statement. In many sections of the country the new cars will not be shown to the public for another week or more."

"Apparently the heavy demand for these cars is due largely to their brilliant performance. Letters from dealers in every part of the country proclaiming the unusual power, economy and flexibility of the new sixes and eights are pouring into the factory daily."

"The instant popularity of these new cars proves that the diagnosis of the 1930 motor car market by Dodge Brothers in particular and by the industry in general was correct."

"In reentering the popular priced field where the outstanding reputation of Dodge Brothers was established, an enthusiastic market exceeding every forecast has opened up for the new six, which is the lowest-priced closed car and the lowest-priced six-cylinder Dodge Brothers has ever produced. Invading with the new eight-in-line, an entirely new field, we have found that the trend of the industry toward a popular priced eight-cylinder automobile is fully justified."

PATENT MEDICINES.

Year after year they continue to flourish these thousand and one varieties of "patent medicines." Prosecution under a federal or state pure foods act may force a certain type of cure-all into hiding for a few weeks or months, but before long the same old bottle reappears, with possibly only a minor change in label. The urgency with which patent medicine manufacturers continue to prepare and dispose of their goods is matched only by the gullibility of the purchasers of their concoctions.

To those of our readers who still blindly use patent medicines, without other knowledge of their properties than the extravagantly worded text of an advertisement or the recommendation of a well-intentioned, if misguided friend, we refer the following warning issued by the Michigan Tuberculosis Association:

"Never treat yourself. You may treat just the wrong thing, or give just the wrong medicine. Never buy any medicine without a doctor's prescription. Never buy patent medicines. They are worthless, mildly harmful, or dangerous."

Patent medicines usually are mixtures sold without a doctor's prescription. Almost always they are made from a "secret recipe" of cheap ingredients, widely advertised, and sold at prices far above what it costs to make them. They are generally sold to make their manufacturers rich and not to help those who suffer.

Medicines are inventions. A medicine may help one person and be harmful to another. Do a good name. Do a good deed. Do a good deed. Do a good deed. Do a good deed.

ACCEPTS THE CHALLENGE.

Detroit accepts the challenge of gangland. The Detroit police, backed to the limit by an organized minority, has declared war unto death upon the criminal element of the city, with no quarter asked or expected.

The attempted assassination of Detective Inspector Garvin reveals with startling clearness that gangsters, emboldened by constantly increasing numbers have decided to wage war upon the uniform.

There is only one answer to such open defiance of the law and that is to drive the gangster out into the open and either shoot him to death or put him behind prison walls for long terms of years. No compromise can be accepted in this latest struggle between organized society and the powers of the underworld.

When crumens assert they are not only beyond the law, but are the law itself, they are taking a step that will not be tolerated either in Detroit or any other community. The safety, the peace-of-mind, the very life of every man, woman and child demands that crime be struck such a blow that it will never again dare to bare its murderous fangs in the face of constituted authority.

THE PUBLIC WILL CONTROL.

How long will the public stand for abuse of the air as an advertising medium.

Those who listen to radio programs realize that they are made possible through their advertising service. No one objects to the discreet use of advertising on the air. However, as the dials are turned and in one place coffee is offered, in another place silk stockings are for sale, and in another, candy is the article merchandised, there is complete disgust.

Recent reports to the federal government indicate that most of the radio stations are now operating at a reasonable profit. The losses which most of them incurred a year and two years ago have been eliminated. There should be no profit, except that which is sufficient to maintain service and equipment, in any radio station. As a radio station becomes strong financially its task should be to draw very strict rules concerning the use of advertising.

If they do not, the public will rise up and control or entirely abolish the privately owned station.—Grand Rapids (Minn.) Herald-Review.

CRIME DOES NOT PAY

An inmate of the Michigan reformatory at Ionia, just a mere boy, but serving a long term for robbery, armed, has in his possession two letters that cry out with a voice of thunder, "crime does not pay."

These two pitiful letters were written by his brothers; one younger than himself, the night before they were to be executed for murder. Almost their last acts on earth was to write their brother beseeching him to "lead a better life; to go back home at the end of his prison term and devote the remainder of his life in living down the tragedies of the past."

If there is one time in life when the average human being speaks the truth without reservation, it is in an hour like that. These two boys, with life's prospects before them, deliberately chose a life of crime. Too late came the awful realization of what their folly had cost them.

Their warning, written in tears of blond, should cause every young man on the brink of a criminal career, to ponder deeply before taking the fatal plunge. No, crime does not pay.

TIME TO BEGIN.

That the race will protect itself is seen in the growing distaste boys and girls are beginning to have for flunk toting and gin parties set to jazz music. These things are no longer as popular as they were a few years ago. In this the children seem to be exhibiting more sense than their elders who are still conducting cellar saloons and turning the night into rihald revelry. Not the majority of parents can be charged with this kind of conduct, but a sufficient number in every community to cause alarm.

It's about time we quit turning our social problems over to state legislatures and begin getting busy ourselves. We are all interested in better boys and girls and Dr. Samuel S. Drury, rector of St. Paul's School for boys at Concord, New Hampshire, has set down from his long experience in dealing with youth some excellent precepts which every parent can follow with benefit to the family circle. Dr. Drury says:

"1. Make the second decade of youths' lives breezy, wholesome and simple."

"2. Provide the spur of necessity for them, especially if you are wealthy."

"3. Don't invite other people's children to parties primarily arranged for elder people."

"4. Don't destroy young people's characters in order to make one of your parties 'successful.'"

"5. Don't offer children in their 'second decade' liquor, unless they are your own children. (Which rule Dr. Drury really directs to members of the 'second decade' themselves. It runs: Don't drink unless at your father's table.)"

"6. Give your boy or girl at least a month in camp, a cruise on a tanker, or a course at a citizens' training camp during the summer vacation."

"7. Don't postpone your child's education. Begin in January what you contemplate for him in July."

"8. Don't hesitate to place your boy of from 16 to 19 in unsupervised situations in life. There is an inner armor boys possess during these years that keeps them from the smirch of the world."

"9. Don't put the smirch that creeps into older minds into the minds of those in the 'second decade.'"

"10. Give your growing boy a thrilling job, one that taxes his powers and puts him on his own responsibility."

"11. Don't 'fiddle around' with your 'boy or girl.' Theirs not to make reply' during the 'second decade.' There should be no rule without reason. But YOU SHOULD RULE."

Get your nuction bill printed here.

SOME DAY IT WILL HAPPEN.

During the days when the world is covered with snow and ice there is a noticeable decrease in fatal automobile accidents. Throughout this period motorists instinctively sense the danger that lies in excessive speed, or in taking unnecessary chances of any kind.

Why is it not possible to carry this inner fear into the season when the highways are free of the hazards of winter driving? To do this would cut down our traffic toll to a point where it would not cause the feeling of horror that it did before the beginning of the winter months.

The individual motorist, not the legislator, is the person who can most help in cutting down this enormous loss in human life. Not only does he endanger his own life, but the lives of innocent people when he indulges in reckless driving.

Unless this class of drivers are willing to do this of their own accord, drastic action will be taken in sheer self defense. Strict examination in order to procure a driver's license, barring reckless drivers from operating a machine, and other safeguards will be provided in addition to what we now have unless there is an immediate and radical change in the conditions which existed while traffic was at its height last year.

The Michigan sugar beet grower is downcast. Somewhere along the line senators pledged to his support deserted the high tariff ship and went over to the buccanier barge of his enemies.

However, there is hope that the lower house of Congress will be more sympathetic to the plea of the growers, and the sugar beet industry in Michigan and other sugar beet growing states saved from utter ruin.

It does not take a prophet to see what would happen to the price of sugar in this country if our entire supply should fall into control of the Latin-American sugar monopoly.

CHEBOYGAN EDITOR RAPPS SPEAR RULING

TELLS READERS VALUE OF FISH
AS TOURIST ATTRACTION.

Thinks Farmer Who Hasn't Time for Fishing a Bit in Summer Is Leading Tough Life.

Al Weber, editor of the Cheboygan Observer, hasn't any use for the present law which allows spearing on the state's inland lakes. He not only raps the ruling, but gives some very sound reasons for his opinion. Following is his story:

One of the leading news stories sent out from the Log Cabin office of the Northeastern Michigan Development Bureau last week was from Supervisor Edwin A. Riggs of Burt township, in which Supervisor Riggs proceeded to attack all those who have been bold enough to say that the legislature committed a dumb-bell act when it provided for winter spearing of fish through the ice on our inland lakes. Supervisor Riggs is right. It is the farmer who is responsible for that act being on the statute books. But he is all wet when he points out that the farmer has no other time to fish, that it's the farmer who has made those lakes inviting and accessible to the resorter, cleared up the country, built the highways, etc., etc. If the farmer can't squeeze in a day now and then to go fishing during the summer months, he is certainly living a hard life. If he can show us what the farmers have done toward making Burt Lake, or Mullett Lake or Black Lake or Douglas Lake accessible to the summer visitor, then maybe we can save the county a lot of money and we won't have to build county roads to reach those wonderful bodies of water. Don't confine your search for those farmer built roads to your own county, extend that search down into southern Michigan and then come home and the next time we meet on a trip over our county roads entertain me please by telling me wherein and whereby and wherewith the farmer has made our lakes and streams inviting and accessible to the resorter. Whenever a farmer has cleared up the country around a lake he has been after the cedar or the pine or hemlock or beech or maple or birch out of which he could get some ready money. The trouble is he cleared up too much of the country.

Take the resorter away from your township and how would you feel? Deprive those hundreds of resorters and tourists that visit your township every summer, that own wonderfully pretty homes there and spend money there, of the opportunity to catch a fish and what would they do? Every single fish they catch on their visit to you each summer is worth more to Burt township and to Cheboygan county than all the fish your farmer friends catch with spear in the winter months, even if each man takes home his limit every night.

We can well afford to deprive ourselves of that pleasure of fishing, because it is those summer visitors that bring the money into our community that enable us to remain here, and enjoy it here, and build more roads and enjoy more happy trips over the country together.

If good fortune would permit one of your resorter or tourist friends to catch with hook and line just one fish like will be taken from any fish coop that may be hauled out on the lake this winter, he will have enjoyed an experience that will last him until another summer comes, and he may bring a friend along too to build a summer home alongside of his own.

We don't care how plentiful fish are in Burt Lake, every one caught through the ice in the winter time by the farmer or the city guy that hasn't any time to fish during the summer months just robs your community of a mighty big magnet and the most active agency that entices thousands of people with thousands upon thousands of dollars of new money into our state every summer.

W. C. T. U. SPONSORED ANNIVERSARY MEET

Observed 10th Anniversary of Prohibition Last Friday.

The Women's Christian Temperance Union sponsored a celebration of the 10th anniversary of national prohibition last Friday evening in the social rooms of the Methodist church.

There were over 100 present to partake of the delicious supper planned by Mrs. Harrington and Mrs.

Hooker, and after the supper, the following program was presented:

Devotions, led by Rev. W. H. Rauch.

Community singing in charge of Mrs. Novatney.

Selection by Girl's High School Glee Club, with piano and violin accompaniment by Mrs. McKee and Mrs. Dan Soule.

Readings by Mrs. Shockley.

Violin solo by Mrs. Dan Soule.

Mrs. Stelter, accompanist.

Addresses by Rev. J. E. Lockyer and Supt. Otterbein.

Rev. Lockyer spoke on the economic benefits of prohibition and gave statistics from reliable sources showing a great increase in wages, in savings accounts, in life insurance, in home building, home conveniences, etc.

The national prosperity of the last ten years must be credited largely to prohibition. Working men are spending little or nothing for drink and a great deal on their families.

Other nations are looking enviously toward the United States, for they know a wet nation cannot be the economic success a dry nation can be.

Supt. Otterbein in his remarks dwelt on the fact that of the nine principal programs advanced by the drys during the past 100 years to mitigate the evils of intoxicating liquors, eight of them have been finally agreed upon by the wets, according to their own testimony.

They even agree now that the saloon was a bad thing, and it is to be hoped that they will eventually be converted to prohibition.

LOTT HEADS WESTERN ASSN. TENNIS LIST

John Hennessey Again Ranks Second—Others Known Here Rated.

George M. Lott, Jr., of Chicago, held his top position in the Western Lawn Tennis association's official list revealed Saturday. John Hennessey of Indianapolis, again was second. Leaders in other events listed by the association, which includes Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan, Indiana and Ohio were:

Men's doubles, George O'Connell and Fred Royer, Chicago. Women's singles, Clara Louise Zinke, Cincinnati. Women's doubles, Miss Zinke and Ruth Oexman, Cincinnati. Junior singles, Wm. Schommer, Milwaukee, Wis. Junior doubles, Fred Brace, Pontiac, Mich., and Nate Ganger, Cleveland. Boys' doubles, Parker and Robert Hudington, Lawrenceburg, Wis. Girls' singles, Muriel Adams, Indianapolis.

Lott and Hennessey, leaders in the men's doubles rankings in 1928, were not included in the 1929 ranking because they failed to compete in a representative number of doubles matches.

Miss Zinke also topped the women's single players in 1928, as well as the doubles division, with Miss Oexman. All the leaders in the boys' and girls' classes were newcomers, most of the previous leaders having passed the age limit.

With the exception of George Lott, all players in the Western Lawn Tennis association ranking are well known at Charlevoix. Lott has never played here, but Hennessey has been winner of the local meet for several years. Others rated are also among the participants in the annual Riviera tournament held each summer at The Inn courts.

On Polar Bear Day, February 6th, the Methodist Ladies' Aid will serve lunch and sell baked goods in the See building on Bridge street, from 11 a. m. to 9 p. m.—Adv. 5t1.

MOTHER, FIVE CHILDREN FIRE VICTIMS

Succumbed Saturday When Flames Destroyed Their Home.

Mrs. William Kent, 43, and her five children were burned to death at Atlanta, Mich., early Saturday, when fire destroyed their small frame house.

The dead, besides Mrs. Kent, were: Oneth, 14, Agnes, 11, Tom, 9, Lucille, 6, Billie, 5.

Bruce Kent, 18, discovered the fire when he returned home shortly after midnight from a basketball game. The small house already was a mass of flames. In his efforts to arouse and save the family he was severely burned. He rushed into the house and located his mother. He almost got her to a doorway when she collapsed and fell back. He was unable to pull her out of the house.

When neighbors arrived the flames had gained such headway it was impossible to go near the house. Later it was impossible to identify the individual dead except the mother, so badly were the bodies charred.

Two other sons were not home the night of the fire. William Kent, the husband and father, is reported at Flint, where he is employed in an automobile plant. An overheated stove or defective flue is blamed for the fire.

The Lady Maccabees will give an old-fashioned dancing party Tuesday evening, February 4th. Grandparents are especially invited.—Adv. 4t2

PETOSKEY INVITES ALL TO CARNIVAL

BIG TWO DAY EVENT OPENS THERE NEXT TUESDAY.

World Champion Ski Jumpers and Nation's Best Skaters Are Coming—Big Ice Carnival.

The greatest winter sports carnival in all history is planned for Petoskey on Tuesday and Wednesday, February 11 and 12, and with all Northern Michigan assisting it promises to be a glorious success. The Petoskey Winter Sports club has provided a program covering forenoon, afternoon and evening of both days with only enough time left for dinners and luncheons. The event will bring to Petoskey and Northern Michigan the world's champion ski jumper, Henry Hall of Detroit, and a party of the nation's finest and fanciest skaters, direct from the national ice event at Elgin, Ill.

The two-day program opens Tuesday forenoon with a great fox hunt on Little Traverse Bay, in which fox hunters from all over Northern Michigan and some from Ohio will participate. The sport of watching dogs work out the trail of Mr. Fox promises to be one of the exciting parts of the program. Fifty or more dogs are looked for.

Tuesday afternoon is given over to winter sports activities at the Petoskey City park, where there is a hockey rink, large skating rink for the races, a fine ski slide and hills over which the snow-shoes and ski fans will trek in races and special events. There also are places for bobsled racing and toboggan fans coast down through the flying snow with keen enjoyment. Northern Michigan ski championships will be run off, starting at one o'clock. At three o'clock will come the hockey game between Petoskey and Traverse City Winter Sport Club teams. Tuesday afternoon at 4:30 the visiting skating champions will stage an exhibition race. There will at least be 20 in this party and probably more.

The Grand Carnival Ball, with music by the famous Fischer's orchestra of Kalamazoo, is on the program for Tuesday night at 9:00 o'clock at the new high school gymnasium.

Wednesday forenoon at 10 o'clock occurs the annual Winter Sports Parade and the crowning of the Petoskey Snow Queen. The parade, which promises to excel those of the last 2 years which have been pronounced the finest in the world, will pass through the business section of the city.

Wednesday afternoon at one comes the skiing events for the young folks, boys and girls at the City Park slide. Following this at 2:30 o'clock will take place the regional skating championship races in all classes and also the fancy skating contest. The contests are open to all skaters of this region and ribbons and prizes will go to the winners in each class. These events will occupy the entire afternoon.

The annual masked ice "carnival" is billed for 7:30 o'clock at the ice rink in the City Park. Included in this wonderful display of fancy skating costumes will be an exhibition of costumed skaters from Detroit in a spectacular whirling demonstration, comedy acts and barrel jumping exhibitions. Prizes will go to the best costumed man and woman.

Closing the great two-day carnival will be a display of fireworks on the hills surrounding the Petoskey City Park.

AGED ELLSWORTH MAN CHOSE DEATH TO COUNTY HOUSE

Orville Clark of Ellsworth, aged somewhere between 70 and 75, committed suicide Monday of last week or the night before by drinking a mixture of paris green and water. He had been a resident of Ellsworth about 35 years.

The previous Saturday, Mr. Clark, who lived alone, was told by his guardian, George Klooster, that it would be best for him to go to the county infirmary at Bellaire. Mr. Clark objected, stating he was happy with his cat where he was.

On Monday morning when Mr. Klooster went to the old man's home to take him to Bellaire, he found him dead in the bed, with the cat curled up on his chest, and the cup of the poison on the table.

hill will be the scene of conasting parties on both Tuesday and Wednesday evenings with bob sleds provided for all who wish to take part.

All roads will lead to Petoskey on February 11 and 12 for winter sport fans from all over Northern Michigan.

BIG BALD EAGLE BEAT GULLS OUT OF DINNER

A big bald eagle secured a fine fish dinner out on the ice of Little Traverse bay last Friday, but not without first having to fight it out with a flock of sea gulls. One of the members of the fishing colony captured a big dog fish and tossed him out on the ice. No sooner had he landed than the gulls began gathering in for the feast. But they figured without Old Baldy. The king of birds swooped down, scattered the gulls and made off with the fish. While dog fish are not considered very good eating by fishermen, the gulls and eagles are not adverse to enjoying a feast. Quite a large number of dog fish have been landed by the fishing colony thus far this season.

A. E. RUEGSEGER IS PROBATE JUDGE

APPOINTED MONDAY BY GOVERNOR
NOR FRED W. GREEN.

Fills Vacancy Caused by Resignation of Servetus A. Correll, Judge
Since 1912.

A telegram Monday morning from Lansing, brought the information that Governor Fred W. Green had appointed E. A. Ruegseger, Boyne City attorney and former prosecuting attorney, to the office of probate judge for Charlevoix county.

The appointment was made to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Servetus A. Correll, which went into effect that day. Mr. Ruegseger assumed his duties at once, taking the oath of office before County Clerk Fenton R. Beulow at 2:00 o'clock Monday afternoon.

The news of Mr. Ruegseger's appointment and the resignation of Mr. Correll came as a distinct surprise to the majority of Charlevoix residents. Mr. Correll, who passed his 80th birthday last summer, had held the office since 1912. For several months past, however, he has been ill at the home of his daughter, Mrs. H. H. Belding of Belding, Michigan, and this condition is thought to have brought about his resignation. That he performed the duties of his office to the entire satisfaction of the voters of this county is proven by his re-election for so many years. It may be said that he leaves an enviable record for his successors to attain. Before his resignation, Mr. Correll was the dean of Michigan probate judges.

Mr. Ruegseger, who succeeds Mr. Correll, is well known to residents of Charlevoix county. He has practiced law with offices in Boyne City for many years and was formerly prosecuting attorney of this county.

HOOT OWL PICKS UN- USUAL ROOSTING PLACE

Raised a Lot of Dust When Rudely Disturbed From Slumbers.

Emrey D. Gimble, member of the laundry firm of Sorensen & Gimble, had a peculiar experience Monday forenoon.

When he opened the clean-out in one of the chimneys in the laundry to take out the soot, a swirl of this unwelcome and dirty dust greeted him. After he had wiped out his eyes sufficiently to look around, he saw a small black bird which later turned out to be a hoot owl.

The owl had evidently found a warm roosting place in the chimney and was not at all pleased with the confusion. Mr. Gimble found out why the chimney wouldn't draw and has the edge on a good many of us for the reason that we all cannot have a live feather duster to keep our chimney clean.

KIPKE'S CAGERS TRIM MANCELONA

BURIED VISITORS SATURDAY EVENING 40 TO 4.

Antrim County Team No Match for Local Tossers—Boys City Here Saturday Night.

Charlevoix high school basketball team won their first class C competition last Friday evening on the home court by smothering Mancelona high 40 to 4 in a lop-sided contest. Lack of home support for the high school squad was evidenced by the small crowd of fans present. The attendance was the smallest at any game this season.

Presenting a team of apparently green and inexperienced players, Mancelona never gave Kipke's men any opposition. The visitors substituted freely throughout the contest, but never found a line-up with any punch in it. Aside from Charlevoix's greater superiority, the game was featured by frequent fouls made by both squads, many penalties for steps and other ragged playing not usually shown by the local cagers.

Mancelona's only scores came via the free throw route and they might have had more if they could have found the meshes in their many free chances. Charlevoix led 11 to 1 at the quarter, 20 to 1 at the half, 32 to 3 at the third intermission and 40 to 4 at the final whistle. Eight of their points came from free throws. Nuvak, center, scored 18 points for Charlevoix. Supernaw and Ance each marked up 8, McCall 5 and Kelderhouse 1. Kipke used all his reserves before the contest ended. John Ferenz of Traverse City, handled the game nicely as referee.

In a close and interesting preliminary game, the senior girls triumphed over the juniors by a score of 22 to 19. The contest was a nip-and-tuck affair most of the way. "Johnny" Ripley officiated as referee.

One of the feature games of the season is promised Saturday night when Kipke's team plays the Brother-ton-coached Boyne City team on a local court. Second teams of the two schools open the program at 7:00 o'clock and the main go is at 8:00 o'clock. Let's see a good turn-out for this contest.

SUMMER RESORTER DIED IN FLORIDA

Fremont Woodruff Had Been Summer Visitor Here 30 Years.

Fremont Woodruff, a member of the Belvedere Club since 1906, died Wednesday, January 28th, at St. Petersburg, Fla., after a brief illness. His remains were brought to Detroit, where the funeral was held February 1.

Mr. Woodruff was born in Detroit on February 14, 1857, and spent his entire life in that city. Educated in the public schools, he read law and was admitted to the bar before the Supreme Court of Michigan in 1878. After practicing law in Detroit three years he engaged in the real estate and mining business and was identified in these circles until he retired from active business three years ago.

Mr. Woodruff was a public spirited man and belonged to all the leading clubs in his home city, where he was very popular.

Next Tuesday, February 11, is the date when Dr. Leahy, the Optometrist, will be at the Hotel Charlevoix. One day only.—Adv. 611.

POOR SCHOOL DIS- TRICTS TO GET AID

CHARLEVOIX COUNTY'S SHARE OF MONEY IS $35,911.

Money Allotted Under Turner Act Goes to 1,900 School Districts—Totals Listed Below.

Approximately 1,900 poor school districts in Michigan will benefit under the $2,000,000 Turner act, Webster H. Pearce, superintendent of public instruction announced at Lansing last Tuesday.

The districts are those which previously had been paying a school tax of more than $10 per $1,000 and whose school attendance is in excess of the state average.

While Pearce announced this district allotments, there is, however, a considerable difference of opinion as to when checks will actually be mailed. Pearce appeared confident that the districts will get their money some time this week, but Auditor General O. B. Fuller holds a more pessimistic outlook.

Two counties in the upper peninsula—Houghton and Delta—will receive one-eighth of the total allotment, and Houghton's total of $146,497 is four times that of Wayne whose districts will receive but $35,590. One district will receive a check for 60 cents.

FATHER AND SON BANQUET TUESDAY

SLIGHT CHANGES IN WEEK'S OBSERVANCE IS MADE.

Date Set Ahead Because of Conflic-tion—Remainder of Program as Announced.

We once more call attention to the Father and Son Week program announced in last week's issue. Due to conflicting dates, the schedule of event has been changed somewhat, but otherwise, the program is to be carried out as originally planned.

Monday evening will be given over to indoor sports and community singing at the gymnasium. Leaders have been chosen and an interesting program is planned.

The annual Father and Son banquet, originally set for Wednesday night, has been set ahead one day to Tuesday night. This change was made necessary because of the basketball game Wednesday evening between the Polar Bears and White (Printing Company of Grand Rapids. The Methodist Literary and Sewing club will serve the banquet. Louis C. Reimann, director of Camp Charlevoix, is the speaker. Tickets are now on sale at $1.50 per couple. The number is limited, so get yours now.

On Thursday evening, the Association of Commerce winter sports committee is arranging a special program for the benefit of fathers and sons. It will be an outdoor night of entertainment.

For one of the other of the remaining two evenings of the week, fathers and sons are asked to observe a "home night," following a program of mutual interest to both.

Sunday, February 23, the final day of the week's observance, is "go-to-church" Sunday. Seating arrangements at whatever church fathers and sons choose to attend are being made so that those in attendance will be grouped. The sermon will be along the line of the week's observance.

PHENOMENAL HAULS OF TROUT ARE MADE

Several Hundred Taken From "Big Hole" in Past Week.

Phenomenal catches of mackinaw trout have been made in what is known as the "Big Hole" in Lake Charlevoix during the past week. After several weeks of poor fishing, local anglers are reaping a reward for their patience.

It may be safely estimated that in the neighborhood of three hundred trout have been caught since the big fellows started biting last Thursday. Dick Marshall brought in 26 in four days, Clarence Usher 14 in three days; Pearl Johnson said Sunday he had caught 16 trout and several whitefish, and so on down the line.

Charlevoix sportsmen certainly are lucky to have such good fishing waters so close by. The sport has attracted many from nearby towns, also.

POLAR BEARS TRIM HARBOR MERCHANTS

DOWNED VISITORS MONDAY NIGHT BY 35 TO 6 SCORE.

Emmet County Lads No Match for Lanky Charlevoix Five—Team Goes Down-Stage Wednesday.

Expected opposition from the highly-touted Harbor Spring Merchants failed to develop Monday evening and the Charlevoix Polar Bears rumped off to another easy victory on the Charlevoix court. The final score of 35 to 6 is a good indication of the relative strength of the two teams.

With the exception of the opening quarter, the Polar Bears played circles around the visitors. Both teams played careful ball during the initial period with the result that the contest got away to a slow start. Charlevoix marked up 1 points and Harbor n free throw and the period ended with the count 4 to 1, Charlevoix.

Throwing caution aside, the Polar Bears cut loose in the second stanza. Brown and Davenport each came through with a pair of goals and Davenport added to their total with three successful tosses from the foul line. The count at the half was Charlevoix 13, Harbor 4.

The last two periods were nothing more than a walk-over. Charlevoix broke through Harbor's defense repeatedly to score. Some of the counters came from close in and others from nicely placed long shots. Close guarding checked every advance the visitors made and during the last half they were allowed a single goal and that after substitutions had broken up Charlevoix's team work.

Brown led the local attack with 12 points. Hens scored 10, Davenport 9 and Nolvik 4.

The evening's program opened with one of the most exciting preliminary games seen on the local court this year. A pick-up team defeated the Baptist Sunday school five after the contest had gone into an overtime period. The play was fast and furious and the crowd went wild with excitement. The pick-ups won 24 to 23, but the sympathy of 150 crowd was with the Baptists.

After topping over all opposition in the region while marking up 12 straight victories, the Polar Bears left Wednesday on a barn-storming tour of southern Michigan. They play Manistee Iron Works on February 5, Clare Independents the 6th, Ferris All-Stars the 7th, Midland Independents the 8th and Alpena Independents the 10th. Their next home game is February 12 with the White Printing Company five of Grand Rapids.

HUGE PIKE SPEARED FROM MULLET LAKE

Burton Baier, youthful Mullet Lake resident, is a proud fisherman, for he speared a 30 1/2 pound pike through the ice on the lake Thursday of last week. Now he stands ready to tell one and all that Mullet Lake has giant funny beauties that will give a thrill to any fisherman. This is one of the biggest fish ever landed in that vicinity. The biggest Northern Pike on record to be landed with fishing tackle weighed 32 pounds.—Cheboygan Tribune.

OFFICERS TAKE GUN SMALL BOY USED IN THREAT

The latest addition to the police department's store of confiscated and surrendered weapons is a .22 pistol taken from a 12-year-old boy who levelled "it loaded at a playmate and said, "Maybe I'll kill you."

The boy didn't pull the trigger. The tragedy that would have paralleled the most horrible of the "I-didn't-know-it-was-loaded" stories did not ensue. It appears that the boy did know the pistol was loaded. He put it back in his pocket and went on playing and but for a passerby he might have the pistol yet.

Police found the still loaded pistol when they answered the passerby's call. Questioning the boy they found he had stolen the pistol at an oil station.—Traverse City Record-Eagle.

THE STATE POLICE

We have heard no criticism of the request by the department of public safety for an appropriation from the state administrative board sufficient to equip the state police with machine guns and other equipment enabling them to speak to the modern criminal in his own kind of language.

In recent years the state police have arisen to an enviable position as a law enforcement body. We no longer hear them spoken of in terms of contempt. In hundreds of instances they have demonstrated their value in trailing down criminals and bringing them to justice. Nothing so discourages the wrong-doer as the fear of prompt detection and speedy punishment.

There was a time when the majority of our citizens, especially the rural districts, looked upon the state police as an arrogant body of untrained, uneducated, and unskilled men. These annual meetings have been held at the college for the past eight years. During that period an important change in student attendance has been noticeable. There is a steady increasing enrollment in the classes devoted to agriculture. At the same time enrollment in these departments fell to such a low ebb that the word "agricultural" was wiped out as a part of the college name, although it was the oldest institution in the country devoted to the science of agriculture.

For a long time, the graduate of an agricultural college was the subject of much ridicule in his neighborhood when he returned home following graduation. Other boys on the farm, unable to secure these advantages, sneered at the idea of a college education being necessary to successful farming. It took almost three generations to wipe out this belief.

This increasing attendance of agricultural students was discussed by the editors. Some said that it indicated a growing interest in agriculture and the desire for young people to succeed on the farm. Others claimed that the tendency revealed a desire to secure an education and get away from the farm.

THE MATTER OF CREDIT
A recent of the community was talking about one of our local institutions the other day. He said that it was not popular.

We tried to analyze the reasons for this opinion. We finally found that business enterprise was inconsistent that those who bought from it paid for what they got. Of course, such a course is not always popular.

This question of retail credit is becoming more and more complex. A business which is not careful will soon have itself in bankruptcy with goods on the shelves and many accounts on the books. Those who wish credit and do not wish to pay have a way of finding out who will be kind to them. Soon such a merchant wonders that he does so much business and has so many customers. Then he wakes up, usually too late. Most of these customers are on his books to stay.

Our sympathies are with the merchant. With him credit is one of the largest problems with which he contends. He slips in his attention to this feature of his business and he is in the hands of his own creditors.

The reason for slow payment of many accounts is that there is no money left for many of the necessities after the unnecessary things are paid for. The installments on the car or the radio must be met, come what may. The gasoline merchant gives no credit. The manufacturer of automobiles gets his cash. The car makers have had some enough to keep the credit problem out of their business or to handle it in a way that they make some money on credit service.

In some respects the situation is improving. Merchants have better ideas than they once had. Several years ago credit was used as a bait for business. It still is. But there is not the competition for the book accounts that there once was. Business is learning that it is not the gross but the net that counts.

AGRICULTURAL STUDENTS ARE INCREASING

The business session of the Michigan Press Association is held each year at Michigan State College. The 1930 convention took place last week. There is a mutual bond existing between the college and the publishers of Michigan's community newspapers—both are vitally interested in the agricultural sections of the state.

These annual meetings have been held at the college for the past eight years. During that period an important change in student attendance has been noticeable. There is a steady increasing enrollment in the classes devoted to agriculture. At the same time enrollment in these departments fell to such a low ebb that the word "agricultural" was wiped out as a part of the college name, although it was the oldest institution in the country devoted to the science of agriculture.

FOR MORE SAFETY
Systematic traffic regulation is seen as the only remedy for reducing the rapidly growing list of automotive accidents, which during 1929 surpassed all previous years in the number of fatalities occurring.

This action was determined upon by the executive committee of the National Conference of Street and Highway held recently in New York, where the committee considered a comprehensive program for meeting this situation through uniform traffic laws and regulations, including drivers' licenses, enforcement, education, improvement of traffic facilities, protection of grade crossings and highway intersections, and the better maintenance of motor vehicles.

Plans were laid for completing and bringing up to date reports on all these phases, and a nation-wide movement to bring about the application of these remedial measures will be put under way immediately.

PROSPERITY CONFERENCE.
Probably no more notable assemblage of business, labor and agriculture leaders ever met than the gathering which listened to President Hoover in the building of the United States Chamber of Commerce. It was notable for its numbers, for the eminence in their respective fields of those who attended and most of all for the manifest unity of purpose which it reflected. These men had not come together to quarrel with each other. They were not there to seek legislation. They were not guiding their opinions by the question whether their courses would promote or retard the prospects of some party or aspirant in some future election.

It was a gathering which represented the community of interest in the general welfare. It typified the idea that prosperity is not made by dragging somebody down but by lifting somebody up.—Buffalo News.

It is true there is a growing desire by the young men on the farm to seek an agricultural education and then enter commercial activity that deals with agriculture. The education is useful and the tasks that are performed are useful.

However, the fact is established that most of the boys receiving an agricultural education are essentially boys who are to return to the farm, stay there and gain success. The old time prejudice against the college trained farmer has disappeared. That is a hopeful sign for the future of the farming industry.

THE DEADLY SPEAR

Thoughtful citizens, living in the inland lake regions of Michigan, are protesting the use of the spear during the winter months on the inland lakes of the state, especially those lying close to state trunkline highways.

Residents of these sections, mostly in the northern counties, say that good fishing for the summer tourist is being destroyed by these poor sports, too lazy to row a boat during the summer season, but not too lazy to sit all day long in a warm shack on the ice and deplete the lakes of their finest specimens, including the female fish filled with spawn at this time of the year.

We have faith in the men who are voicing these protests. We know them to be good sportsmen, willing to forego a part of their own pleasure that strangers may enjoy themselves during the vacation period, when they set forth to nature's paradise with visions of getting one of the big fellows on their hook.

The Michigan Department of Conservation should lose no time in putting forth restrictive measures to curb the use of the spear. It is a relic of barbaric days and should have been abolished years ago.

GOVERNMENT IN BUSINESS.

We may believe that our Government is the best in the world, but it does not follow that we believe it best fitted to do all our public work. It can do many things well. But of some things, which it attempts to make a pretty sad mess. However efficient it may prove itself in some directions, it is rather all-powerful and all-wise.

This is a country of delegated powers and rights and functions, and our historic policy has been not to concentrate too many of them in one person or one legislative agency. We have never wished to create in the United States a system like that which used to prevail in Russia, when a man could not build a house in Vladivostok until he had got his plans approved at St. Petersburg.

If everything is loaded upon the Government, it loses what little efficiency it has and gets congestion of the brain, while the extremities are paralyzed.—From the New York Times.

The Federal Farm Board, appointed by President Hoover, is slowly gaining a reputation for being a reliable body. Right now the board has a corps of economists at work trying to arrive at a scientific method of determining the cost of production of the reasonably efficient producer. No decision has been reached, but the board tends to believe:

The cost of production must determine the base for marketing loans. The price must be high enough to yield a profit, but not so high as to stimulate production.

The feasibility of the program depends on restriction of production. While various devices will be employed to control acreage, it is clear that a continuous educational campaign is the chief reliance. Organization of the potato growers was the latest step taken by the commission.

THE BUSINESS FUTURE
Late reports summarizing conditions in a number of industrial and trade groups substantiate to an appreciable degree earlier promises of orderly adjustment and continuation of normal activity, with hesitancy, which has existed in some lines, rapidly disappearing. In virtually all of the industries reporting changes, since the first Business Survey Conference was held at Washington, are in the direction of improvement and gathering momentum and the outlook is correspondingly clear. Psychological as well as actual factors, manifested in the greater degree of certainty in anticipating future conditions, appear most favorable.

Customs Change In Medicine, Too

Whole Trend of Modern Medical Practice Is Away From Needless "Dosing"

Back in the old "horse and buggy" days, it was the custom to give large doses of internal medicines for colds and almost every human ailment. Then Lunsford Richardson, a North Carolina pharmacist, originated Vicks VapoRub—the better method of treating colds externally.

From the very first, Vicks has been appreciated, especially by mothers of young children, because it checks colds without the risk of upsetting delicate stomachs. Just rubbed on, Vicks acts through the skin like a poultice or plaster; and, at the same time, it gives off medicated vapors which are inhaled direct to the inflamed air-passages.

Today, the whole trend of medical practice is away from needless "dosing," and millions of families in more than 60 countries use Vicks for all cold troubles. Ever-increasing demand for this better method of treating colds is shown in the familiar Vicks slogan. Made famous when Vicks reached "17 Million Jars Used Yearly"—later raised to "21 Million"—there are now "Over 26 Million Jars Used Yearly."

Michigan Lady Tells How New Medicine Put Speedy End to Her Suffering.

MRS. C. SEAMAN.

"I suffered terribly from stomach and kidney ailments," said Mrs. C. Seaman, 419 Webber street, Saginaw. "The simplest of foods caused gases to form in my stomach. I bloated and belched and the pain and discomfort was almost unbearable. I was bothered with shortness of breath and frequent dizzy spells. My kidneys weakened and my back pained me frightfully. I finally went to bed thoroughly ill and discouraged, and remained helpless for a long time."

"It is amazing, but three bottles of Konjola actually helped me so much that I was almost myself again. I no longer bloat after eating, and I can eat what I wish. Pains from the kidney and stomach weakness have disappeared, and I sleep well. I wish I could tell everyone about Konjola."

COUNTY NORMAL NEWS.

Miss Baker conducted a very interesting picture study for the training room and Normal class. The subject was "The Gleaners," by Millet.

The Normal class is looking forward to Friday when a play, "Important Days," in February, and a short talk on Edison will be given under the direction of Miss LaCount and Mrs. Andrus.

The Normal class will have completed at the end of the week their study of School Law, taught by Mr. Palmer.

Daily enunciation drill is being conducted by Miss Trimble.

The class in psychology have been learning many things about themselves, which they think will lead to a better understanding of how to control children and themselves at the same time. As a result of the study and discussion of instincts and emotions the class have decided that a good motto for the furtherance of health and long lives is "to keep as calm under all circumstances as nature permits."

Anger takes so much more energy than joy and so beware! Those angry frowns are the doctor's main source of revenue. If people would exercise their fourteen "smile" muscles they would save on doctor bills.

The class have also decided that perhaps after the study of facial expression is over that they would be able to solve the "riddle of the Sphinx."

AT THE MOVIES.

Sharp Contrasts in Billy Dove's Latest Picture.

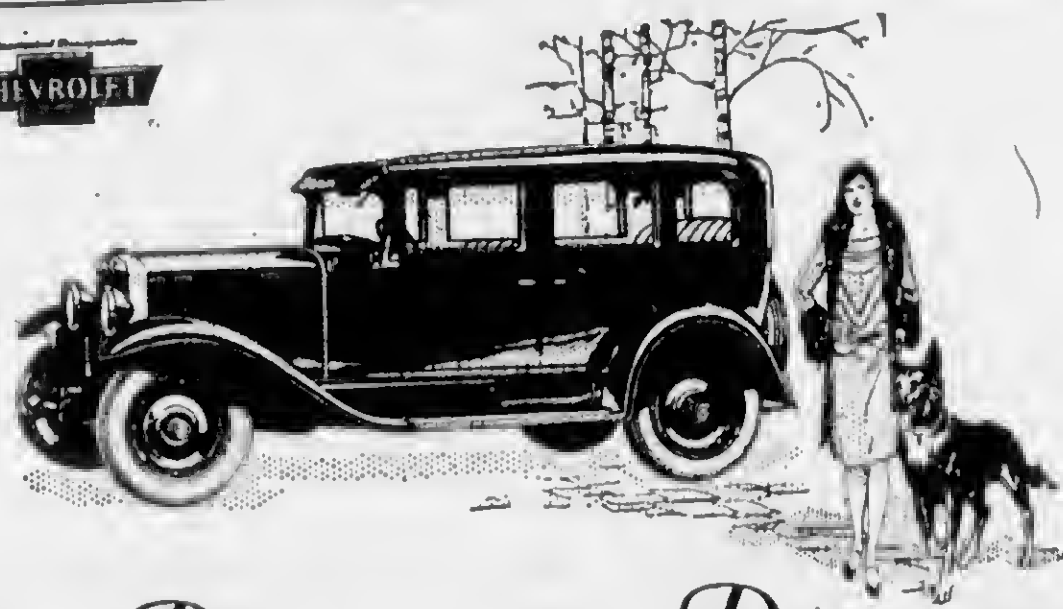

Billy Dove, who was born in New York City, and is of Swiss descent, plays a titled English lady in "Her Private Life," the first National picture which comes to the Palace Theatre February 8-9.

However, it is declared by qualified critics that no English actress in Hollywood could be better fitted for the role of Lady Helen Haden in this story of Britain and New York than the beautiful First National star.

Walter Pigeon plays opposite Miss Dove, and Alexander Korda, the distinguished Hungarian director, was at the megaphone on "Her Private Life."

The big cast includes Montagu Love, Roland Young, Thelma Todd, Brandon Hurst, Zasu Pitts, and Holmes Herbert.

To Lighten Your Burden

Little more than a generation ago wise purchasing—even of the family necessities—required a great deal of time and effort. Manufacture was limited. Exact articles for particular needs were hard to find. And often one product after another had to be tried before the right one was found.

Today—manufacture that seems limitless has filled our stores with excellent articles of every nature. There are many brands for every need. The discriminating buyer can choose from a great array of goods that are continually being spread before his eyes.

But to buy wisely one must read the advertisements. In the pages of this newspaper, progressive merchants and manufacturers are telling you—truthfully and concisely—about their products. They are anticipating your needs. They know that they must meet your exacting requirements.

Read the advertisements regularly and carefully. They are the daily measure of business progress. They are the means to discriminate buying. They will help you to get the greatest value for every dollar you spend.

THE ADVERTISEMENTS IN THIS NEWSPAPER ARE A MOST VALUABLE GUIDE TO WISE BUYING.

WASHINGTON NEWS LETTER

2000 Times to Mars and Back.

The automobiles of America will travel approximately 156 billion miles during 1930, according to a computation made by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce. "Oh," thinks the modern American who is used to spinning miles during a single day, "that isn't so much; just remember how many automobiles we have." Those 156,000,000,000 miles, however, represent more than 4,000 times the distance to Mars, states Alvan Macaulay, president of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, and if one contrasts the distance with that motor-traveled in another country, it gains significance. In China, for instance, all the people, with the exception of a comparatively handful, are born, exist and die within a radius of twelve miles!

While we are congratulating ourselves on the progress and freedom that have been brought about by the motor, an enterprising historian has traced the automobile's origin to France and the year 1769. The blessed pneumatic vehicle was actually invented as a military necessity by Nicholas Joseph Cugnot, a French captain of artillery, who was used for some means of moving heavy cannon more rapidly. Captain Cugnot designed a crude tractor form of machine that could carry four persons and even ran on it at the terrific rate of two and a quarter miles an hour! The vehicle was steam driven. This was at the same time that Watt was striving to improve his steam engine. The year 1769 is also, incidentally, the year of Napoleon's birth.

Radio Makes Contiguous Next Door Neighbors.

When a voice from an alien land floats through the loudspeaker in your living room, distances and national boundaries shrink to relative insignificance. The broadcast of King George's brief speech opening the naval parley at London was a high-water mark in trans-Atlantic radio relaying and opened a vision for the future of international communications. Now comes another nation, the Republic of Cuba, with the announcement that she has consummated an "association of interests" with the United States by which the island will enjoy direct connections with this country and the most important European and Central and South American nations. Two leading radio companies, the Radio Corporation of America in this country, and the Cuba Transatlantic Radio Corporation have made all necessary arrangements.

Juan Fernandez De Castro, president of the Cuban company, stated in Havana that: "In accord with the program of our illustrious president, General Gerardo Machado Y Morales, in encouraging the development of Cuban enterprises, and who has recently stressed the great importance to the commercial and economic Cuban life of enlarged and improved communication facilities, it gives me great satisfaction to announce a program of major importance in the further development of the communication facilities of Cuba."

Stacy De Castro then sets forth the details of the development and the advantages arising therefrom. "With modern radio," he concludes, "the country will be beyond the distance reached by Cuba's latest communication."

Woodchuck Villain in Movies. Boys who adore roller skating, the gun and the wild for fun have come to look upon the thing as fun and sport beside the pleasure of automobile driving and its opportunities for recreation. Because of this change in pastime, the woodchuck, or "groundhog," has profited, says the department of agriculture. This rodent, which was once hunted persistently, is the subject of a two-reel motion picture released by the department under the title, "The Eastern Woodchuck and Its Control." Coming as it does just in advance of Groundhog Day, on February 2, it is an especially timely film.

How alfalfa fields, fruit trees and garden crops are damaged by increasing numbers of woodchucks is vividly depicted in the department's motion picture. There are also shown the methods of control that were worked out by the biological survey of the United States after intensive study. Farmers who are desirous of reducing the woodchuck menace, especially in and near cultivated fields, with comparatively little labor and cost, will find any amount of helpful advice in this Hollywood version of modern scientific control.

The People's Business. An organization "on guard for the people," as it aptly describes itself, supported by the people, and furnishing information solely for the benefit of the people—that, in brief, is the makeup of the People's Legislative Service located at the national capital. This service is under the direction of Mercer G. Johnston, who is also editor of the organization's publication, The People's Business. It labors to throw some genuine light on the way legislation is conducted in Washington and to protect the man on the street from tariff raids, the power of monopolies and trusts, and similar oppression. The very first 1930 issue of The People's Business is dedicated to a subject that illustrates its zeal on behalf of Mr. Average Citizen; it is entitled "Fighting Facts About Sugar." A few excerpts from the article are especially worth reprinting:

"The tariff on sugar is a sales tax on an essential human food."
"That sales tax now is 2 cents a pound, refined basis. This is equivalent to a poll tax of upwards of $2. from which not a soul escapes from the cradle to the grave. It is a family tax rapplied with drastic disregard of ability to pay of upwards of $10 a year on every American family."

"Included in the $283,000,000 taken from the pockets of consumers, $137,561,560 goes as a subsidy to sugar companies (fabulously prosperous with minor exceptions)."

"Two-thirds of this subsidy goes as 'pure velvet' to Porto Rico, Hawaii and the Philippines."

"Only one-third remains in the United States proper."

"But wait," says some foolish or hocus friend of the farmer. "You are forgetting the farmer!"

"Indeed we are not. We have him both in mind and heart. We are sincere in our desire to see him get a square deal in this tariff business. At the same time we are sincerely convinced that the farmers (together as a whole or in special groups) do not have to become a part of crookedness in the eyes of the general consumer in order to get a square deal."

Women Who Fly High.

Women who are learning how and why airplanes fly carry on a variety of work at the same time. Glance over the list of fifty-four women students who have registered for ground school courses at the Curtiss-Wright Flying Service school in New York City, and you will find representatives of no less than eighteen different occupations.

Artists and lawyers, telegraph and advertising copy writers are among those numbered in the aviation school. No less than twenty careers have enrolled among the ambitious students of aviation. Two housewives, two airplane saleswomen, three students, a manager, a teacher, a department store worker, an accountant, a librarian, and a teacher of physical education, find the prospect of doing things in new way of occupations, more exciting than their present occupations. There is a waitress, who is also taking flying instruction and will be ready to fly shortly. She goes off at the end of the week from the restaurant where she works and then goes out to the field for her flying lesson. Twice a week, in the evening, she attends ground school.

System Marks Social Evolution.

Children who are suddenly made dependent by the death or disability of parents are not so likely now to be adopted haphazardly by any family in the community or slung off into a handy almshouse. In both county and state administration an organized welfare service has been growing tremendously during very recent years. For this, the forces that fight delinquency, dependency and neglect are thankful. Miss Grace Abbott, chief of the Children's Bureau in Washington, calls the two

CAN'T TALK TO WIFE, TOO CROSS AND NERVOUS

"Even my husband couldn't talk to me. I was so cross and nervous. Vinol has made me a different and happy woman."—Mrs. N. McCall.
Vinol is a compound of iron, phosphates, cod liver peptone, etc. The very FIRST bottle makes you sleep better and have a BIG appetite. Nervous, easily tired people are surprised how QUICK the iron, phosphates, etc., give new life and pep. Vinol tastes delicious. F. J. Fessenden, druggist.

movements, county and state, "the most significant in organized social service at the present time."

The chaos that once raged around the care of helpless individuals makes one more appreciative of a new order. Town and city "poor houses" harbored adults and children alike. Homes were unnecessarily broken up. Inadequate records, or no records, were kept of the children's identity or exactly what had been done with them.

About 300 counties in the United States have organized their social service on a county basis. These counties are in the North, South, East, West and middle West, a fact that shows social progress to be national in scope. A closer co-operation between state departments of public welfare and county welfare work is another encouraging feature in this field of endeavor.

Soft Music, Soft Lights, Soft Silk.

While people are pointing to lengthened skirts and more conservative ensembles as healthy symptoms of reaction in a time of extremes and exaggerations, it is pleasing to note another feature of growing popularity that does not quite harmonize with our jazz age. That is the reluctance of leading tea rooms and restaurants to ruin good digestions by forcing their patrons to eat to the hectic din of jazz orchestras. It was once thought essential to cater to "modern youth" by punctuating every mouthful of food with the tom-tom beat of a primitive drum rhythm and the shriek of a saxophone gone mad. The old order is passing. In the dining rooms of large hotels, now, one eats peacefully to the low melody of stringed orchestra and converse is pleasantly without having to scream for attention.

Our national capital is taking the lead in routing the dervishes of hysterical music at meal times. Go to the dining room of any fashionable Washington hostelry—the Mayflower Hotel for instance, and what do you find? Low lights, soft voices, an undertone of violin and flute, and the occasional chirp of a canary. The painful blare and crash of dance tunes may be all right on the dance floor, but not in the posh-dine atmosphere of tea rooms and dining rooms. Washington restaurants and hotel managers are to be congratulated on their discrimination.

and down to the last few dollars— isn't that an unsound financial basis for anybody? Practically no cash on hand to ease the strain of an emergency, or to seize an opportunity if it should present itself.

There's a way to avoid such a condition—a way as logical as it is easy. It is simply to enlist the aid of your checking account—to use its accurate record of income and expenditures as a basis for a budget designed to keep earnings always greater than expenses—and to allow for the steady growth of a reserve fund in your account.

Isn't that a wise method? Why not adopt it today?

WORKER INJURED

Stick Thrown From Saw Pierced His Jaw; Lost Several Teeth.

Jack McKinnon, feeding the slitter in the square-mill of the Antrim Iron Company shortly after beginning work last Monday morning, was painfully injured by one of the inch squares coming back and striking him in the face.

The square struck him on his lower jaw, making a hole and two other jagged wounds at the end of his mouth, and carrying away three teeth.

The inch-square piece of timber went through an inch board of the boxing covering the gang of saws, before striking Mr. McKinnon, which shows the force with which a piece is thrown sometimes by saws. Also this shows what the result would have been if no boxing had been there, as was customary in the old days before many companies installed all the protective devices they could arrange for.—Mancelona Herald.

DYKSTRA BILL IS WARMLY OPPOSED

ROAD MEN WILL FIGHT ATTEMPTS TO PASS MEASURE.

Northern Michigan Road Commissioners' Assn. Organize Against Proposed Change.

The Courier wishes to call the attention of its readers to the action of Michigan municipalities, chiefly Detroit and Grand Rapids, in their attempt to put before the legislature and voters a proposition, which, if passed, would change the distribution and benefits this and other sparsely populated counties derive from the automobile weight tax.

Interests in Detroit and Grand Rapids have secured the endorsement of the League of Municipalities for the Dykstra bill, and plan to present it to the next legislature, and if rejected there, to submit it to a referendum.

Briefly, the Dykstra bill proposes to split the auto weight tax into three equal parts, one to go to the state, one to the counties and the other to the cities. True, the bill says, cities, villages and townships, but the latter would get very little, the bulk being swallowed by Detroit, Grand Rapids and perhaps one or two other towns.

At a meeting of the Northern Michigan Road Commissioners' Association held in Cadillac last Tuesday, and to which R. T. Davis and W. E. Byers of the Charlevoix county road commission were in attendance, it was voted unanimously to oppose this bill and all similar attempts, to the limit. A fund of $2,500 for publicity was voted, to be raised and expended under direction of a committee composed of Geo. W. McCabe of Petoskey, Charles A. Francis of Arenac and Marius Hansen of Grayling.

Committees were appointed to work with similar ones already chosen by the Michigan Good Roads Association and the State Association of Commissioners and Engineers, and the Northern Good Roads Association of the upper peninsula.

A set of resolutions was adopted, declaring the position of the body. Deputy State Highway Commissioner Burton, former commissioner Rogers, and Auditor F. D. Fitzgerald attended the meeting and spoke.

The attendance was large for such a meeting at this time of the year. Twenty-three of the thirty-two counties answered the only roll call taken, and some were out of the room at the time.

HENRY O. JOHNSTON DIED LAST SATURDAY

End Came Following Illness of Approximately Four Weeks.

Charlevoix lost a respected citizen last Saturday in the death of H. O. Johnston, who passed away at the Charlevoix Hospital following an illness of about four weeks.

Deceased was born at Buffalo, N. Y., September 25, 1856, the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Johnston. He came to Michigan with his parents at the age of 18 years, the family settling at Eastport. Several years later he moved to Charlevoix to follow the carpenter trade. He subsequently entered the employ of the Charlevoix Lumber company and was with that concern for 35 years. During that time his duties were varied. He was sash and door man, flier and millwright, in fact, filling whatever position required. About seven years ago he opened a wood-working and blacksmith shop on Mason street and conducted this business until ill health forced him to quit.

On March 17, 1884, Mr. Johnston married Miss Florence M. Cole of Charlevoix. To this union were born three children, all of whom, together with the widow, survive him. They are Mrs. Albert Taylor and Earl Johnston of Charlevoix, and George Johnston of Long Beach, Calif.

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock from the home on Mason street. The services were under the auspices of the Odd Fellow lodge, of which order deceased was a member, with Rev. John E. Lockyer of the Methodist church officiating. Interment was at Brookside cemetery.

In Memoriam.
In sad and loving memory of our wife and mother, Mary A. Stephens, who passed away 10 years ago today, February 5, 1920:

When mother breathed her last farewell,
The blow was more than tongue can tell.

This earth seemed quite another place,
Without the smile of mother's face.
We think of her as one who sleeps,
All free from grief and pain;
And know the happy day will come,
When we shall meet again.

SMALLER SCHOOLS HAVE CONFERENCE

ORGANIZE LITTLE SIX SATURDAY AT BOYNE CITY.

To Award Trophy in Basketball and Have Championship Track Meet Next Spring.

The Little Six athletic conference, talked of for some months, came into being at a meeting at Boyne City Saturday afternoon and today is a full-fledged organization with a definite program, officers and directors, etc. The conference is patterned somewhat after the Big Six conference of class B schools, but holds the added advantage in that all six members are right in this region and the distance to travel for games is short.

The conference is made up of Boyne City, East Jordan, Charlevoix, Mancelona, Gaylord and Harbor Springs. The officers are: President, A. J. Duncanson, East Jordan; vice president, O. P. North, Charlevoix; secretary-treasurer, Ivan Tillotson, Gaylord.

At the Saturday afternoon meeting it was voted to award a trophy cup to the member school with the best record in basketball and to hold a Little Six track meet at East Jordan on May 31 and award a trophy cup to the winning school. Football was gone into and by a vote of the conference the football schedule meeting will be held at East Jordan on May 31. At that time an effort will be made to have each member school play all other member schools in football next fall. While this may not be possible, because of games already booked with other schools, it is the aim of the conference to reach this goal no later than 1931.

The schools present went on record as recommending $15 as the correct sum to pay athletic officials, both basketball and football, for class C games.

The basketball trophy cup will be awarded the Little Six class C champion sometime during the Petoskey regional tournament next month.

FRANK O. GALLAGHER ILL AT THE BEAVERS

Plane Rushes Sister from Grand Rapids to His Bedside.

Floyd Becker, Michigan Air Express pilot, arrived here at 1:30 Wednesday afternoon with Miss Melody Gallagher of Chicago, who was rushing to the bedside of her brother, Frank O. Gallagher, who is dangerously ill at his home in St. James.

Miss Gallagher sped by train from Chicago to Grand Rapids, where she transferred to the waiting plane. Following a short stop here, Pilot Becker flew directly to Beaver Island.

Gallagher was operated on Tuesday noon for ruptured appendix by Dr. Russell Palmer, state-employed physician on Beaver Island. Only in cases of emergency are major operations performed at the island. A telephone message from St. James Tuesday evening stated Gallagher's condition was very serious.

Subject, "Spirit."

Wednesday evening at 7:45, first Wednesday of month only.

Reading room Tuesday and Saturday, 3:00 to 5:00 p. m.

The public is cordially invited to all services.

"Love" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Christian Science churches on Sunday, February 2.

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake: for their's is the kingdom of heaven" (Matt. 5:10).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "The followers of Christ drank his cup. Ingratitude and persecution filled it to the brim; but God pours the riches of His love into the understanding and affections, giving us strength according to our day" (p. 5).

BELOVED NORWOOD WOMAN DIED FRIDAY

Community Shocked by Sudden Passing of Mrs. Wm. Richardson.

Citizens of the entire community were shocked to learn of the death of Mrs. Wm. Richardson, who passed away very suddenly at her farm home near Norwood, Friday morning, January 31st, at the age of 50 years.

Kate Darling Vandusen was born near Norwood, April 6th, 1879, the fourth child of a family of five children, namely: Lyman of Lansing, Mrs. Maul Goodrich of Richmond, Vermont, Mrs. Alice Mayne and Mrs. Ruby Alward of Norwood. She spent her girlhood days on the farm home near Norwood, and at the age of 17 years was united in marriage to Wm. Richardson, also of Norwood, who survives her. To this union were born five children, Hazel Paulow of Lansing; Frances Walter of Chicago; Ruth, who died in infancy; Marjorie and Catherine, and an adopted son, Martin, now living at home. She also leaves a number of other relatives and a host of friends.

She was a loving wife, a kind mother and a friend to all who knew her, and will be greatly missed in our community.

Friends of both Norwood and Charlevoix join in extending their sympathy to the family.

Funeral services were conducted by Rev. G. P. Stanford, Monday afternoon, at the residence, with burial in the family lot, which overlooks the beautiful bay at Norwood.—Contributed.

WINTER CARNIVAL WAS SUCCESSFUL

NICE CROWD OUT FOR PROGRAM LAST THURSDAY.

Parade Was Outstanding Feature of Day's Activities—Competition Keen in Sport Events.

Charlevoix's 5th annual winter sports carnival, staged here last Thursday by the Association of Commerce, marked another successful bid to exploit winter entertainment in the Northern Michigan region. The event opened the carnival season and is being followed by other communities who are sponsoring similar programs.

A colorful winter parade, which won the approval and admiration of the throngs attending the carnival from the entire region as well as down-state, was the opening event on the day's program of festivities. Cool, crisp weather was another feature which added greatly to the success of the affair.

The school band led the long procession of beautiful floats, whose decorations, almost every instance, typified this region in winter time. Prominent in the parade was Miss Angie Scott, Charlevoix's queen of winter sports, who won her crown when she was recently chosen by vote as the most popular girl in the city. In costume befitting the occasion, the queen occupied a prettily decorated throne on one of the floats. "Attending her" was Miss Dorothy Griffin, her lady-in-waiting, whose honor came through being chosen the city's most beautiful girl.

Mayor W. P. Vight and Mrs. W. C. Naylor of Boyne City, and Herman Myers of Boyne Falls, were judges of parade entries. They awarded first prize to a float entered by the crew of the steamer Marquis Roen, in winter quarters here, which depicted a Norwegian Viking boat in full rig. It was a clever reproduction. Second prize went to a float entered by the Charlevoix county road department. A winter highway scene, showing the use of picket fence, were the features. "Miss Charlevoix" was awarded third prize. Little Barbara Jane Bradley, four-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fay Bradley, drove a miniature Polar Bear from her seat on the cow of an automobile. Honorable mention was given the Polar Bear. George Bergman's comic entry, and to a float entered by the Charlevoix Hardware Co., carrying Joe Oliver, local Indian lad, in full Indian regalia. There were many other interesting entries in the parade, which has been proclaimed the best ever shown here.

The afternoon program opened with dog races on Bridge street. Around 15 entries were out, but the inclination of the canines to fight rather than race, made it necessary to conduct the events in heats, two at a time. Gordon Neff and his dog "Wooley," a police dog-buskie mixture, was the winner. "Bee," an air-dale owned and driven by Albert Thorpe, was second.

George Bergman won the cross-country ski race over a course of approximately three miles. Harold Newman was second.

In the horse races, held before a large crowd on Antrim street, Ralph Bacot drove "Ella Brino" to victory over Jesse Smith's "Peter Thompson" in both heats. Cash prizes of $10 and $5 went to the participants.

Contemplated ski-joring races were not held as advertised on the program. Coasting on Bridge street hill

TREASURER'S OFFICE IN BANKS TWP. POPULAR ONE

There seems to be a diversity of opinion as to how the funds of Banks township should be handled.

One of the warmest political scraps in history is now waxing furiously in that district and to guess or even suggest publicly the outcome would not be safe in view of the present feeling. Seven candidates have thrown their hat in the ring to do battle for the office of township treasurer. The voters will have their pick from the following line-up: Harry Bos, John W. Brown, Henry Elzinga, Abe F. Speckman, Martin Groeink, Wm. Kooyer and Jack Parsons.

The price of votes will probably hit a new high record before the issue is settled, and right now, we hear, the price of cigars is mighty cheap.

was substituted and a large crowd enjoyed this sport throughout the afternoon.

Skating races at the municipal ice rink closed the afternoon program. Keen interest was shown in these events, and many of the prizes went to outsiders. Following are the results:

Boys' races, 11 years and under: 1st, Ted Dombroski, Petoskey; 2nd, Robert Pearl, Charlevoix. 13 years and under: 1st, Gerald Lesher, Petoskey; 2nd, Drew Young, Charlevoix. 15 years and under: 1st, Frank Smith; 2nd, George Smith, both of Charlevoix. 17 years and under: 1st, David Livingston; 2nd, Frank Smith, both of Charlevoix. Men's free-for-all: 1st, Charles Kleinhenz; 2nd, Bert Hloker, both of Petoskey.

Girls' races—11 years and under: 1st, Monica Mclough; 2nd, Adeline Bellinger, both Charlevoix. 13 years and under: 1st, Byrnee Lamphear; 2nd, Janet Livingston, both Charlevoix. 15 years and under: 1st, Byrnee Lamphear; 2nd, Janet Livingston, both Charlevoix.

A hockey game between Charlevoix and Petoskey teams, which was the opening feature of the evening program, was won by the visitors. The first two periods of the contest

FATHER AND SON WEEK PROGRAM ON MONDAY NIGHT.

LARGE CROWD OUT FOR SPORTS MONDAY NIGHT.

All Attendance Records Broken at Father and Son Banquet Held Tuesday Evening.

Charlevoix fathers and sons have entered wholeheartedly into the Father and Son Week program sponsored by the Community Men's Club.

Activities Monday evening, which opened the week's observance, were centered at the school gymnasium, where a crowd estimated at around one hundred fifty gathered for the program arranged. Everyone apparently had a great time. Basketball, volleyball, indoor baseball, races and a tug-of-war were enjoyed.

Fathers reluctantly bowed to their sons and heirs in all of the competitive events. "Youth will be served," John Nordrum had charge of the evening's program and carried it out in a creditable manner.

All attendance records were surpassed at the annual Father and Son banquet held at the Methodist church Tuesday evening. Ticket sales mounted to the new-high total of nearly two hundred, which would bring out a crowd of four hundred people. Many fathers brought several sons. Those who didn't have one of their own borrowed, someone else's, so there were few who missed this wonderful event.

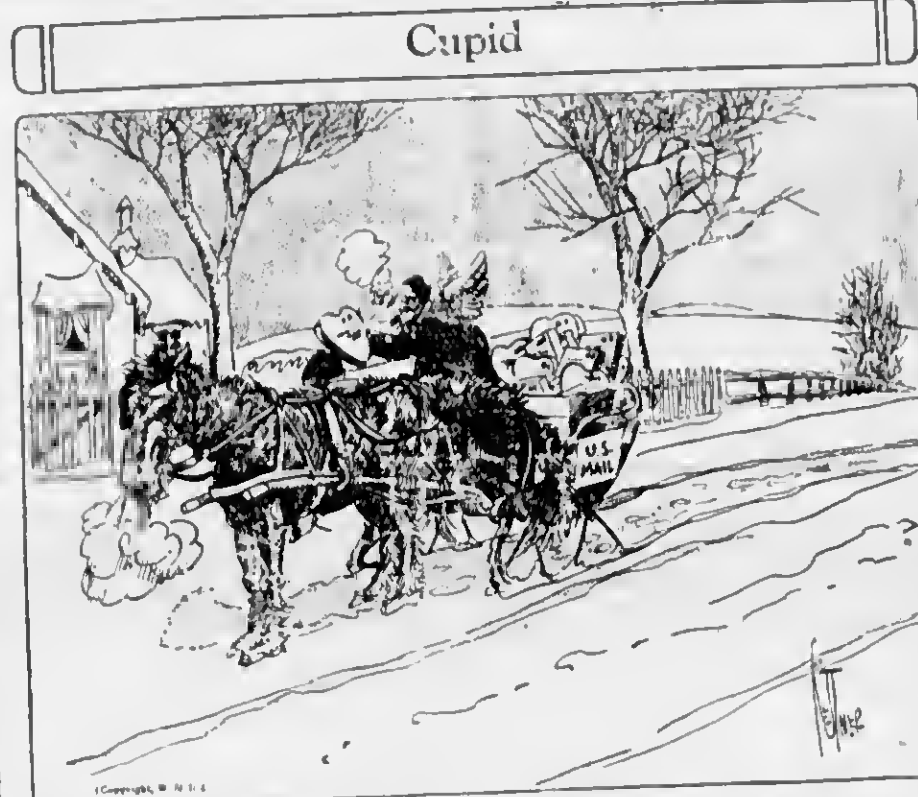

Ladies of the Literary and Sewing Club served a wonderful banquet dinner. During the banquet and prior to the opening of the program, Bellinger's orchestra played musical selections which were greatly appreciated.

O. P. North, president of the Men's Club, opened the program by introducing City Attorney Lisle Shanahan, toastmaster of the evening. Mr. Shanahan, in turn, introduced A. C. Belding, whose remarks compared living conditions and advantages enjoyed by youth of his day and youth of the present age. David Coulter followed by thanking the fathers for the fine affair given for them and for the splendid advantages afforded for their education and progress. Ensign Edward Shanahan, who is home on a furlough from the U. S. navy, gave a short talk, relating experiences encountered and observations made during his training at the Pensacola flying field, from which he was recently commissioned.

Louis C. Reimann, director of Camp Charlevoix, gave the main talk of the evening. He put the relationship of father and son squarely up to his listeners, stressing the duties of one toward the other. His address was punctuated with incidents in his own life—both serious and of amusing nature. His talk could not do otherwise than leave a deep impression.

Lighthouse Guardian, Husband, Whiled Away Dull Hours With Music

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Williams Entertained Young and Old Alike While She Watched Lights at Beaver Island and Later at Little Traverse Bay; Both are Musicians.

Although they have reached the ages of 79 and 85 years, respectively, life is not at all dull for Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Williams, pioneer residents of Charlevoix and northern Michigan. For nearly a half century they led the lonely, eventless lives of lighthouse keepers, first at Beaver Island and later at the lighthouse on Little Traverse bay near Harbor Springs. There were days, weeks and even months of isolation. A dreary existence for some, but not for this couple. They did not find time idle on their hands.

While at Beaver Island, their home was the gathering place for old and young alike. Mrs. Williams owned one of the first organs ever brought to this region and she played it proficiently. Mr. Williams is a fiddler of the old school. Musicians were few and far apart in those days—thus the Williams' were extremely popular and greatly in demand as entertainers.

And, in addition, they had a means of passing away many hours in their lighthouse home which otherwise might have been mighty lonesome.

Led Early Dance.

Mr. Williams, when a lad of 12 years, played for the first Masonic dancing party held in northern Michigan. That was at Cheboygan, in 1863. His father's home was one of the eight residences making up that village. Mackinac Island was the leading trade center of the north, but there were other small settlements located at sheltered harbors along the coast. From these points the revellers gathered for the Masonic party and in every instance they came by boat. Williams was gotten out of bed and that night sat in his bare feet to furnish music for the dancers.

Mr. and Mrs. Williams often tell about a Fourth of July party they played for on Beaver Island. St. James was a lively place in those days. The big independence celebration had been advertised far and near. People came from villages along the Wisconsin shore, from lake ports in the upper peninsula, from Pine River, (now Charlevoix), and other scattered points. The Williams started playing at 7:30 in the evening and the dance didn't break up until 10:30 the following morning. During a free-for-all fight between fishermen from the north shore and a group of Beaver Islanders, all the windows and doors in the place were broken out, but still the dance went on.

Oldest Natives.

Mr. and Mrs. Williams are the oldest native residents of northern Michigan. Both were born at Mackinac Island, the former in 1851 and the latter in 1845. Mrs. Williams' father, Walter Whitney, a ship builder, was born in New York state, served in the Seminole wars and later settled at Mackinac Island, where he married her mother, who lived to be one hundred. Mrs. Whitney was born on the island, of British parents, her father having been an officer in the garrison there.

When Mrs. Williams was a child her family lived on various islands, their habitation being determined by the work her father could find as a shipbuilder. Thus, at the age of four years, she went with him to Beaver Island, arriving there soon after "King" James J. Strang es—(Continued on page 6.)

LOCAL BUSINESS CHANGES OWNERS

George Whitley, Detroit, Buys System Auto Station.

Announcement was made early this week of the purchase by George Whitley of Detroit, of the System Auto Station on Mason street.

The business was established two years ago by Sam King and had been under his personal management since that time. The transaction included the building and up-to-date washing and greasing equipment. The place has had a fine patronage from both local and summer people.

Mr. Whitley, a former local boy, will be remembered as the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Holecheck of Norwood, and son-in-law of Roy Ranger, this city. It is understood that station will be opened for business in the spring. Mr. King has not announced his future intentions.

JUNIOR HIGHS COMING HERE FOR MEET

March 21st Set as Date for Basketball Tourney Here.

Plans are now in progress for a junior high school basketball tournament, to be held in the local gymnasium on March 21. Invitations are being issued to the different schools to compete in this event, which will be similar to the one staged at East Jordan last year.

The schools include East Jordan, Boyne City, and probably Harbor Springs. A cup will be awarded the victor and a consolation cup will also be given. Preliminary games will be played in the afternoon with finals in the evening. Charlevoix will furnish gym, officials and consolation cup.

The Charlevoix junior high has a basketball team which shows unusual ability. They proved this to the fans quite recently by defeating the Boyne City Junior High 12 to 7. The participation of the junior high in basketball tends to give the boys a knowledge of the fundamentals of the game, together with two years of practical experience, which in turn develops higher class material for future high school teams.

POLAR BEARS RETURN FROM TOUR

WIN ONE OUT OF FIVE GAMES PLAYED WHILE AWAY.

Win Over Manistee Balm for Other Defeats—Announce Three More Home Games.

The Charlevoix Polar Bears are back home from their southern Michigan barn-storming tour. The net result of the trip was a win over Manistee Iron Works last Wednesday night and four successive defeats following at Clare, Big Rapids, Midland and Alpena.

The Polar Bears got enough satisfaction out of winning from Manistee who is considered the strongest team on the trip, to offset the defeats that followed. Alpena stole one from them Monday night. The Easterners had a "phony" referee, according to all accounts. Alpena chalked up 22 points out of 26 chances from the foul line. Outside of that department, the Polar Bears played circles around their opponents.

In their other contests, the Polar Bears were defeated by better teams. They lost Thursday night to Midland, 32 to 30, after two overtime periods. In another close contest Friday evening, they bowed to Ferris Institute by a count of 29 to 22. After leading until within five minutes of the final whistle, they dropped their Saturday night contest to Midland by a 34 to 30 count. The score of the Alpena tilt was Alpena 36, Charlevoix 23. Alpena made 7 field goals and the rest of their points came from free throws.

Considering the strenuous schedule of four straight games, with little rest intervening, the Polar Bears do not feel a bit bad over the results of their tour. They put everything they had into that Manistee game. Brown and Ikens received injuries that handicapped them during the remainder of the trip, and the rest of the team were just "burned out."

An outstanding feature was the support given the team by local fans. Without an exception, there was a good crowd of rooters from Charlevoix at every contest. Miles seemed to make little difference.

The Polar Bears play White Printing Company of Grand Rapids here tonight (Wednesday). Next Monday, February 17, they meet Clare on the local court, and on the 25th, play a return game with Alpena.

LOCAL LADS PLACE AT ICE TOURNAMENT

Cop a First, Second and Two Thirds at Grand Rapids Meet.

Charlevoix's ice speedsters, David Livingston and Drew Young, copped off some prizes at the Grand Rapids city skating championships last Saturday afternoon.

Drew won first place in the one-sixth mile event for boys 14 years and under, and placed second in the 100-yard dash for boys of the same age.

David drew third prize in similar events for boys 17 years and under.

Considering the opposition the lads met in city-wide competition, they are deserving of considerable glory.

CHARLEVOIX FIVE STOP BOYNE CITY

VARSITY VICTORS 21 TO 13—RESERVES LOSE 10 TO 8.

Red and White Took Both Ends of Double Header at New Petoskey Gym Monday Night.

Charlevoix high school basketball teams broke even on a double bill here Saturday evening. Coach Kipke's varsity eagles took the measure of the Brotherton-coached Boyne City five by a score of 21 to 13, while the reserves dropped an overtime contest to Boyne's reserves by the close count of 10 to 8.

Boyne's reserves should have won by a larger margin. Their team work was as good as Charlevoix's was poor, but they were unable to cash in on their shots at the ring. The count stood 6 to 2, Boyne, at the half, 8 to 6, Boyne, at the third intermission, and the final whistle tied at 8-all. The two teams battled through two scoreless overtime periods, both missing chances to win the contest. Boyne planted a goal in the third extra period to gain the margin of victory.

The main game was a close and interesting contest. Outplayed in every period, Boyne tasted their second set-back in class C competition this season. They lost to a team generally conceded a "weak sister" in the newly organized Tip of Michigan conference, although Charlevoix's performance Saturday night upheld many predictions we had overheard prior to the game.

Charlevoix took the lead early in the first period and were never seriously threatened after that. "Cornie" McCall, diminutive forward, put his team out in front. While Boyne was watching Novak closely, McCall came through with three goals in the first quarter, and, in addition to his offensive play, kept "M.C." Rouse so closely covered that he got few tries at the ring. By the way, guarding Rouse is no small task, either.

Kipke's eagles led 6 to 3 at the end of the first intermission. They increased their margin by four points in the second period while holding Boyne to a free throw and were on the long end of a 10 to 4 count at the half. In an effort to stop Charlevoix's advance, Boyne opened in five-man defense in the second period. Their attempts to stop the locals in Charlevoix's own territory failed, however. They did succeed in stopping McCall and Novak, but the broken play gave other players on the local squad a chance at the ring and both Anee and Supernaw found the hoop for goals.

The second half was very close throughout. Charlevoix out-scored Boyne by two points, but that was sufficient to win.

As a unit, Charlevoix showed the best they have this season. They have apparently found out there are five men on the squad instead of one and this discovery has improved the play greatly.

McCall led Charlevoix in scoring with 7 points. Novak made 6 and Supernaw and Anee each 4. John Ferenz of Traverse City refereed in his usual satisfactory manner.

Continuing their winning pace, Charlevoix high gave coaches of the region something to worry about Monday night by upsetting Petoskey high, leaders in the Big Six conference. It was a double victory, played at Petoskey, both the varsity and reserves winning easily. We reproduce Editor Lee North's account of the game from the Petoskey Evening News. LOCAL LEGION ASKS ALL VETERANS' AID

Universal Draft Legislation is Favored by Charlevoix Post.

"The American Legion of this city is heart and soul, behind National Commander O. L. Bodenhamer in his attempt to have universal draft legislation passed at this session of congress," Leo W. Powers, post adjutant of the Legion here, said today, following receipt of information from the national commander that every attempt should be made at this time to strengthen the ranks of the Legion in order to have the legislation passed in congress at this time.

The success of this legislation at this session depends a great deal upon the earnestness of the ex-service men, and those who believe in them, as shown by the veterans' subscribing to this part of the Legion's program through their early membership in the organization, for weekly reports of this strengthening of the Legion is made available for the information of representatives and senators in Washington, as indicative of the veterans' sincerity.

How Ford Methods Cut Cost of Distribution

Lower profits in selling save you at least $50 to $75 in addition to the many savings in manufacturing

TWENTY-SEVEN years ago the Ford Motor Company was formed to provide reliable, economical transportation for all the people. That original purpose has never changed. The constant effort in every activity is to find ways to give you greater and greater value without extra cost—frequently at lowered cost. This applies to distribution and similar important factors, as well as manufacture.

For the Ford Motor Company believes that its full duty is not only to make a good automobile at the lowest possible price, but to see that there is no waste, extravagance, or undue profit in any transaction from the time the car leaves the factory until it is delivered to your home. It is obvious that hard-won savings in production will be of little value if they are sacrificed later through excessive selling costs.

EVERY purchaser of a motor car has the right to know how much of the money he pays is for the car itself and how much is taken up by dealer charges. If these charges are too high, one of two things must happen. Either the price of the car must be raised or the quality lowered. There is no other way. The money must come from somewhere.

In the case of the Ford, the low charges for distribution, selling, financing and accessories mean a direct saving of at least $50 to $75 to every purchaser in addition to the still greater savings made possible by economies in manufacturing. Ford charges are not marked up or increased to cover a high trade-in allowance on a used car.

The profit margin on the Ford car has always been fair to both the dealer and the public. Within the past three months, it has been possible to effect still further economies. Today, the discount or commission of the Ford dealer is the lowest of any automobile dealer. The difference, ranging from 25% to nearly 50%, comes right off the price you pay for the car.

THE business of the Ford dealer is good because he makes a small profit on a large number of sales instead of a large profit on fewer sales. He knows, too, that the extra dollar-for-dollar value of the car makes it easier to sell and more certain to give satisfactory service after purchase.

Consider also that the Ford car is delivered to the purchaser equipped with a Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield, an extra steel-spoke wheel, and bright, enduring Rustless Steel for many exterior metal parts, in addition to four Hondaille double-acting hydraulic shock absorbers and fully enclosed four-wheel brakes.

If for any reason you wish to buy certain small accessories, you will find that these, too, are sold at the usual Ford low prices. Replacement parts are also available at low prices through Ford dealers in every section of the country.

THESE are important points to remember in considering the purchase of a motor car. They show why it is possible to put so much extra quality into the new Ford and still maintain the low price. They are also the reasons why more than 35% of all cars sold today are Model A Fords.

FORD MOTOR COMPANY

our mail carriers left at about eight o'clock with a car, and not having arrived at Cross Village by three p. m., uneasiness was felt. Paul Somerville, coast guard, Wilbur Martin and J. Gallagher started out to see if they could find them. Arriving at Cross Village at 8:00 p. m. they found the mail had arrived at four o'clock.

CHARLEVOIX CO. SPUDS HIT TOP

COPPED PRIZES AT STATE POTATO SHOW IN LANSING.

Harry Behling, Boyne City, Outstanding Exhibitor—This County Was Awarded Sweepstake.

By B. C. Mellemcamp.
Charlevoix county farmers won the highest honors at the recent state potato show held at Michigan State College, February 3rd to 7th. In competition with the best exhibits of potatoes from all parts of the state, our quality spuds walked away with the top awards and gave this county statewide recognition.

Outstanding among the exhibitors was the name of Harry Behling of Boyne City, who won the highest honor possible when his peck of Russett Rurals was adjudged the blue ribbon and sweepstakes exhibit of the entire show, competing with all varieties, both early and late.

His peck was unquestionably superior in all respects and reflects the conscientious efforts of Mr. Behling over a period of three years to gain the top rank. He has been one of Michigan's best exhibitors and this high honor could not have fallen in more deserving hands.

To further add to his accomplishments, his bushel sample also won the blue ribbon showing in strong competition. Not content in merely winning first place in the bushel class, the other two samples from Charlevoix county won 2nd and 3rd, giving us a clean sweep. W. H. Henley, Charlevoix, exhibited the splendid quality sample that won second, and George Meggison, Charlevoix, came right along to capture 3rd place.

In the County Exhibit Class, one in which, no doubt, there is more rivalry than any other, Charlevoix county's collection of 10 peck samples won the blue ribbon. This is the first time that any county has broken the Otsego county record string of eight consecutive victories in this same class.

In the Potato Club Class, more prizes were won when Fred Ranney, East Jordan, took 2nd place. Gwendon Hott, East Jordan, secured 4th, and Gordon Boyer, East Jordan, placed 6th in a very strong field.

Following are the exhibitors and awards won:

Class A—Peck of Russett Rurals.
1st. Harry Behling, Boyne City.
2nd. Frank Behling, Boyne City.
3rd. Gordon Boyer, East Jordan.
4th. Geo. Meggison, Charlevoix.
5th. Wm. Behling, Boyne City.
6th. Fred Ranney, East Jordan.

Class B—County Exhibits.
1st. Charlevoix County.

Class C—Bushel Certified Seed.
1st. Harry Behling, Boyne City.
2nd. W. H. Henley, Charlevoix.
3rd. Geo. Meggison, Charlevoix.

Class D—Potato Club Pecks.
2nd. Fred Ranney, East Jordan.
4th. Gwendon Hott, East Jordan.
6th. Gordon Boyer, East Jordan.

Sweepstakes.
Won by Harry Behling, Boyne City.

In addition to potatoes, one sample of corn, shown by Ivan Kortase, Charlevoix county's only club boy, won 4th place from a classy field.

Another outstanding feature of the 1929 year, was the fact that out of eleven farmers who raised 300 bushels or more to the acre, three were from Charlevoix county. They are: Harry Behling, Boyne City; R. V. Liskum, East Jordan; Edward Kowalski, East Jordan.

ARMY PLANE CRACKED ON ICE NEAR ALBA

Was Ship That Flew Over Here at Noon Last Sunday.

A tri-motored army plane crashed on Lake Harold, formerly known as Tead lake, three miles east and one and one-half mile south of Alba, a week ago last Sunday afternoon. The plane was forced down by engine trouble, two of the three motors having quit. It struck a snow-covered stump in landing and tore off one of the landing skis and was otherwise damaged.

Lieutenant Harry A. Johnson of Selfridge field and four enlisted men were shaken up but none were injured. They had been to Manistique with a new motor for the marooned plane of Lieut. Norman D. Sillin, one of the members of the "arctic patrol" forced down on the way back from Spokane, Wash., last week.

The plane has been dismantled and brought to the W. A. Larson garage at Alba on sleighs for loading onto a gondola for shipment by rail to Selfridge field.

Local residents will recall this big ship flying north Friday and returning Sunday about noon. It circled low over the city and swung east over Lake Charlevoix.

After going a short distance down the Arm towards East Jordan, the plane swung about and headed down the lake towards Boyne City. They were evidently in trouble at that time and the crash near Alba explains the queer actions here.

WHILED AWAY DULL HOURS WITH MUSIC

Established his Mormon colony. There were then eight families in Strang's group. After four years on the Beavers, the Whitneys were forced with the choice of joining the Mormons or leaving the island. They moved to Pine River, present site of Charlevoix. After the death of Strang, the family went back to Beaver Island, being the first to live in the "Kings" castle after disbandment of the colony. Mrs. Williams met and married Capt. Van Riper, who later became keeper of the Beaver Island lighthouse. He lost his life while engaged in rescuing sailors from a sinking ship, and his wife was appointed keeper of the light.

Had Many Thrills.

Her experiences as lighthouse keeper were many and varied. Lard oil was used as fuel in the lamp and it needed great care, especially in cold weather, when the oil would congeal and fail to flow fast enough to the wick. On long nights the wick had to be trimmed twice and sometimes oftener. On occasions of severe storms, Mrs. Williams remembers that as high as one hundred sailing vessels sought shelter in Beaver harbor at one time. Besides her first husband, two brothers and three nephews were drowned when sailing vessels sank with their crew and cargo.

Several years after the death of her first husband, the then Mrs. Van Riper married Daniel Williams, who had been following his trade as a cooper at St. James. She still retained her position as lighthouse keeper and in September, 1884, was transferred to the lighthouse at Harbor Point, near Harbor Springs. She remained in the service at that point until her retirement 29 years later. Mrs. Williams gained considerable recognition as the author of the book entitled, "Child of the Sea," a detailed account of life in the Mormon days.

Mr. and Mrs. Williams now reside at 303 Maston street, Charlevoix. In spite of their advanced years, both are enjoying exceptionally good health. Their favorite pastime is music—the same as it was when they lived in the lighthouses on Beaver Island and at Harbor Point. Mrs. Williams plays the piano and a mouthorgan. Mr. Williams is equally proficient as a player of the violin, accordion and organette. Their friends still gather to hear them play and they are happy.

WINTER CARNIVAL WAS SUCCESSFUL

were scoreless, but in the third, Petoskey came through with two goals to win. The game was fast and interesting.

Closing the day's festivities, a very large crowd was out for the free, old-fashioned dancing party at the school gymnasium. Bellinger's orchestra furnished the music for the dance gratis. That the crowd had a good time was evident by their reluctance to go home.

Twenty-five local merchants joined to donate prizes for the various competitive events, and these awards will be given out this week to the winners.

Charlevoix high school basketball team won from Petoskey high, here, last night 17 to 13. The visitors caught Petoskey in a doggy period and proceeded to capitalize on the situation to their advantage. The blue and white lacked fire and life and was entirely off form on both attack and defense.

"Captain Novak carried the weight of the Charlevoix attack and after wearing off the stage fright in the opening half, proceeded to sift through the Petoskey defense in clever fashion for three baskets and four free shots for a total of ten points. Smith, guard, sank one basket and a free one, while Ance, forward, hooked one basket, as did Supernaw.

"Time after time Charlevoix worked through for shots, catching the Petoskey defense napping and getting far in back under the hoop. Only the weakness of the forwards in shooting kept the Charlevoix score down. They missed a dozen or more open shots close up.

"Both teams played carefully at the start and the quarter score was 2 and 2. Charlevoix did not score in the second period, but R. Porter found the net for one. He found it again in the second period for Petoskey's only counter, while Novak and Ance ran the Charlevoix count to nine.

"The last period was a hard fought affair. Petoskey sank three baskets and a free toss and Charlevoix two and four free ones.

"Near the close Petoskey flashed some neat team work, but could not overcome their lapses in defense which allowed Charlevoix to get in close for markers.

"In addition to winning the main affair, Charlevoix walked off with the preliminary game 26 to 6.

The line-up for the main game was—Charlevoix: Forwards, J. Smith and Ance; guards, Supernaw and V. Smith; center, Captain Novak; substitutes, McCall for J. Smith; Smith for Supernaw; Petoskey: Forwards, Captain Ball and Tillotson; guards, R. Porter and Wells; center, G. Porter; substitutes, Neihardt for Tillotson; Hendricks for Ball, Tillotson for Wells.

"Each team scored six field goals and Charlevoix made five out of sixteen free chances. Petoskey counted one out of nine free chances.

"George Tabraham of Cadillac, handled the game nicely.

"In the preliminary McSaubia and Bergman proved too much for Petoskey, hooking in the shots from all corners of the court and demonstrating that Charlevoix has some good men coming up to replace their fine team of this year when these boys finish school.

"The first period was fairly even, the count being Charlevoix 5, Petoskey 3. At the half it was Charlevoix 13, while Petoskey still had their 3. From then on it was just a procession of markers for the slick little visitors. The Indian lad playing forward bank three baskets while the snappy guard shot three and three free ones. In fact, the reserves were superior on basket work than the Charlevoix regulars.

"The line-ups for the opener were—Charlevoix: McSaubia and Beattie, forwards; J. McSaubia, center; Arvilla and Bergman, guards; substitutes, Clark, Foster, Smith, W. Foster and Geneit. Petoskey: Wade and Barnes, forwards; Bachelor, center; Lovelace and Riley, guards; substitute, Hill. Bates refereed this game nicely."

CIVIL WAR "VET" IS 100 YEARS OLD

PASSED THE CENTURY MARK AT FARM HOME JANUARY 24.

Surrounded by Admiring Friends, He Re-lives Pioneer Days in This Region.

To Michael Kowalski of Eveline township, goes the honor of being Charlevoix county's grand old man. This veteran of the Civil war and pioneer of Northern Michigan has passed his 100th birthday and, on January 24th, surrounded by his children, he spent the time recounting past experiences to those who are always willing to hear his interesting narrations.

Still vivid in Mr. Kowalski's memory is the trip from his homeland, Germany, to America, the land of freedom and riches. The journey was made in a sailing vessel and required something over three months. Terrific storms were encountered at sea. Mountainous waves smashed the boat's cabin to bits and, huddled in little groups with nothing but the heavens above their heads, the immigrants prayed they might be spared to set their feet on land again. A son, Lewis Kowalski, was born at sea on that eventful journey, and with the new-born infant and their five other young children, Mr. and Mrs. Kowalski had plenty of trouble to contend with.

Mr. Kowalski was born January 24, 1830, in the town of Free State, Germany, a village 38 miles northwest of Berlin. When still a youth he learned the tailoring trade. When he was 17 years of age his parents decided to come to America, but Michael was unable to accompany them at that time because of the compulsory military training laws in that country. So he was left behind and served in the Kaiser's army 11 years until his allotted training period was completed. In the meantime he was married to Mrs. Minnie C. Oush and in 1851, when they were free to leave Germany, the couple took their five children and came to America.

Mr. Kowalski's parents had taken up a homestead near the present city of Sheboygan, Wisconsin, and he joined them there. This nation was at that time in the throes of internal rebellion. The Civil war was already two years old and two of Mr. Kowalski's brothers had joined the conflict. The family were in a strange country and barely knew what it was all about. Fred, one of the brothers, settled in the south and had joined the Confederate army. Another brother was with the Union forces. Fred was not long in finding out that he was fighting against a righteous cause and a desire to desert the Confederate troops overwhelmed him. He chose a dark, stormy night when the northern and southern armies were camped within sight of one another. He was on sentry duty and when the first opportunity presented itself he slipped away under cover to the northern side. It was but a minute until his absence was noted and the Confederate army opened a barrage of musket fire in the direction he had taken. The commotion aroused the northerners also and when Fred appeared just outside their lines and failed to halt when ordered to do so, he was shot down. He recovered, however, and served the remainder of the war with the Union colors.

Michael also entered the conflict. He enlisted in Company B, First Wisconsin cavalry, and within six days was on the firing line at Hopkinsville, Kentucky, where the Union forces opposed a southern army under General Hood. The Confederates were beating a hasty retreat before the onslaughts of the victorious northerners and Michael was in the battle at West Point, Tenn., where General Hood made his final stand and surrendered just before the close of the war.

Michael returned to Sheboygan, Wis., and was mustered out of service there. In 1867 he sold his farm and came to Michigan. The family settled in South Arm township. The journey was made by sail, boat, bringing their cattle and live stock with them. Charlevoix county was an unbroken wilderness and, with no place to land, they pushed their cattle overboard into the lake and let them swim to shore, following with their household goods in small boats.

That was sixty-two years ago. The nearest trading center was Traverse

City, and Mr. Kowalski made regular trips through the woods a distance of over 70 miles to that point for supplies. Bears and wolves were numerous and journeys through the forest were not without hazard. And then too, there was the ever-present danger of becoming lost. However, settlements soon were established at Charlevoix and then later at East Jordan, so that trips for supplies could be made to either point by boat.

"We were compelled to build pens to house our livestock at night to keep them from being killed by bears and wolves," Mr. Kowalski relates. "We also kept a close eye on them in the daytime, for cows and horses were valuable in those days and were not easily obtained."

Mr. Kowalski now resides with his niece, Mrs. John Cooper, in her home on a bluff overlooking his old home-stand on the south arm of Lake Charlevoix. He has been unable to walk for a period of five years following an automobile accident in which he was quite severely injured. He has a very vivid memory and likes to relate his experiences. He hears well. (Continued on Page Six)

SUMMER PROGRAM BEING OUTLINED

ADVERTISING COMMITTEE AT WORK ON CAMPAIGN.

Complete Reports Will Be Given at
A. of C. Meeting to Be Held Thursday, February 27.

Dr. C. J. Winder, president of the Charlevoix Association of Commerce, has announced that the next meeting of that body will be held the evening of Thursday, February 27th, at the I. O. O. F. hall. The Methodist Ladies' Aid will serve the banquet dinner.

This gathering will be the first one since the annual meeting in January. Following that session, new committees were appointed to carry on the work for the coming year, and at the meeting next Thursday, these committees will report the programs they have outlined. Several annual reports which were not given at the January meeting, will also be heard.

The initial shot towards Charlevoix's efforts to land tourist business for the 1930 resort season was fired last Friday evening. At this time, members of the advertising committee of which Martin Block is chairman, met with Dr. Winder at the Charlevoix Hotel to map out their summer program.

Of primary interest was their recommendation to order a re-run of 5,000 Charlevoix booklets from the forms of a booklet issued two years ago. It is planned to order enough to carry through the 1930 season, and then for 1931, have a completely new booklet, with new views, lay-out, etc. The plan met with enthusiastic response. In addition, a newspaper advertising campaign to be inaugurated in southern dailies in March and advance north with the season, also co-operation with the Michigan Tourist & Resort association by taking space in the directory, were recommended. Several other progressive moves were taken. The committee is now at work and will report at another meeting to be held Friday evening. Following the completion of their preliminary work, the committee will present their program to the city council for approval.

The meeting next Thursday night should result in considerable progress towards the 1930 summer program, and a good turn-out is requested.

TRAVERSE GOES ON WITH AIRPORT PLANS

Plans for a state airport conference to be held at Traverse City under the auspices of the Michigan Municipal League, took definite form last Thursday, with the appointment of Ben L. Taylor, secretary of the Traverse City Chamber of Commerce as chairman of the conference.

Exact date for the meet has not been set, but it will be held late this spring, as soon as Traverse City's newest nine-story hotel is completed. The conference was postponed last year to await better hotel accommodations.

DATES ARE SET FOR GREAT LAKES OPEN

1930 TOURNAMENT TO BE HELD
JULY 15, 16 AND 17.

Plans Call for Invitation Affair With Substantial Increase in Prize Money Offered.

Archie L. Livingston, secretary of the Great Lakes Golf Association, is in receipt of a recent communication from John R. Bowker, of Southern Pines, N. C., the association's executive secretary, stating that dates for the second annual Great Lakes open golf championships have been set for July 15, 16 and 17.

The event comes the week following the United States Association open at Minneapolis, Minn., and is this year sanctioned by the national association. Coming as it does following this big national meet, the local tournament will catch all the big guns of the profession on their return from Minneapolis. The transfer to July will also solve an accommodation problem that threatened to assume serious proportions last August when the city was packed to the rafters with the mid-summer influx of tourists.

While plans are not yet definite, it is proposed to make the tournament an invitation affair this year to about 60 of the leading pros in addition to amateurs and British members of the Ryder cup team. In anticipation of entertaining the nation's leading profession and amateur golfers, the Great Lakes association plans to increase substantially the $3,000 purse money offered last year, and incidentally make the Charlevoix tournament the second largest in the United States for the summer season of 1930.

Of all sport events sponsored as a part of Charlevoix's summer entertainment program, there is none destined to bring the city greater nationwide fame than the Great Lakes Open golf championships. Such golf luminaries as Walter Hagen, Horton Smith, Tommy Armour, and others who took part in the event last August, have carried the praises of the beauties of the local golf courses to all corners of the country, with the result that next summer's event will include as entries all those famous in the profession.

Local enthusiasts of the wood-wielding sports have watched with interest the progress of the many southern tournaments held during the winter. Danny Shute, who won the $10,000 Los Angeles open, was tied for second money at Charlevoix last year. He repeated again in the Texas open, and the runner-up, Abe Espanosa, stocky Spanish money-maker from Chicago, was up among the award winners. Horton Smith, another figure in the Great Lakes open, has been cutting a wide swath during the winter golfing season.

In a recent issue of the Detroit News, Harry Salsinger, noted sports writer who covered the local tournament last summer, gave a detailed account of Danny Shute's second day performance in the Great Lakes open at Charlevoix. He branded it as

CENSUS TAKERS COME IN APRIL

FIFTEENTH DECENNIAL CENSUS TO BE TAKEN THEN.

Long List of Questions Must Be Answered and Penalty Provided in Case of Refusal.

Soon Fred N. Potter of Alpena, supervisor of the census for this district, will announce the census takers who will swarm over Charlevoix and the surrounding region asking questions for Uncle Sam. They will begin ringing doorbells early in April and already housewives are wondering how to act when the census men calls.

Here's how:
Tell him everything he asks.
If he seems to be putting questions that are not any of the government's business you can make him show you the specific question on the official list, but the chances are that he won't go off the list.

Federal law provides that anyone who refuses to answer correctly the questions the government wants answered or answer them to the best of his knowledge, shall be subject to a maximum penalty of a $100 fine and 60 days of imprisonment. No one has ever been penalized under this statute, but census takers have often used the law as threat when answers were refused.

The rest of your conduct, when the census enumerator calls, is optional. You can keep him standing in the doorway or you can invite him to the parlor and serve ice cream and cake.

His only job is to ask the stipulated questions and get the answers as best he can. He has no right to do more.
The enumerators will be around early in April. The 1930 censuses of population, agriculture and employment will be taken simultaneously, beginning April 1. These are the 24 questions they will ask in the population census:

1. Relationship to head of family, including a statement as to the "home-maker" in each family.
2. Whether home is owned or rented.
3. Value of home, if owned, or monthly rental, if rented.
4. Radio set? (Yes or no).
5. Does this family live on a farm?
6. Sex.
7. Color or race.
8. Age last birthday.
9. Marital condition.
10. Age at first marriage, if any.
11. Attended school or college any time since Sept. 1, 1929?
12. Able to read or write.
13. Place of birth. (State or country).
14. Father's place of birth. (State or country).
15. Mother-tongue of each foreign-born person.
16. Year of immigration to United States, if foreign-born.
17. Whether naturalized, if foreign-born.
18. Whether able to speak English, if foreign-born.
19. Occupation of each gainful worker.
20. Industry in which employed.
21. Whether employer, employee or working on own account.
22. Whether actually at work.
23. Whether a military or naval veteran of the United States, and if so what expedition or war.

Whoever is at home to answer these questions must supply the information for everyone living in the house. In most cases, this will mean the housewife as the man of the house probably will be at work when the census enumerator calls.

With reference to Question No. 23, a special form is provided to cover persons who did not work "yesterday or on the last regular working day." There are five questions to be used if this person has "a job." How many weeks since he has worked at that job? Why was he not at work yesterday? Does he lose a day's pay by not being at work? How many days did he work last week? How many days in a full-time week? And four in case the person has "no job of any kind." These are: Is he able to work? Is he looking for a job? For how many weeks had he been without a job? Reason for being out of a job?

The schedule for farmers is a long one, containing 232 questions. It covers the farm operator himself, farm acreage, pasture, drainage, farm tenure, farm rentals, farm (Continued on Page Six)

MICHIGAN TARGET FOR ATTACK

ACCUSATIONS MADE AGAINST GREEN AND OTHERS.

Story in Plain Talk Entitled "Michigan, Soused and Serene"—Denials Are in Order.

A lurid picture of Michigan hedged in with severe anti-gambling statutes and the famous law providing life terms for fourth offenders, yet containing within its borders the greatest gambling industry in the world, the wettest, roughest town in the country and an officialdom honey-combed with corruption is painted by Walter W. Liggett in an article which appeared in the March issue of "Plain Talk."

Mr. Liggett, who is supposed to have gathered the facts upon which he bases these statements during a personal investigation of the state just completed, made a similar investigation of the liquor trade in Washington, D. C., for "Plain Talk" last fall and was called before a District of Columbia grand jury. Later he was sent to Boston with similar results. A trip to Kansas produced a mild cyclone in that state.

In his latest article which is entitled "Michigan, Soused and Serene," Mr. Liggett lays specific charges against Governor Fred W. Green, naming time and place, accuses the Michigan State Police of allowing the gambling joints to stay open for a consideration and reports 30 speakeasies in the main district of Henry Ford's Dearborn, and 20,000 in Detroit plus 25,000 or 30,000 gangsters and innumerable rackets.

While this attack is unquestionably political thunder aimed primarily at nipping in the bud, Governor Green's future political aspirations, and coming from such a source, will be regarded as cheap sensationalism by most people outside of Michigan, it is not to be looked on lightly by the residents of this state.

Such propaganda aside from lowering those officials named in the estimation of law abiding citizens, cannot but react against the welfare of the entire state and particularly that of the state's greatest metropolis. It is easy to imagine the racketeers, gangsters, thugs, hi-jackers and hold-up men, not already wise to the situation, flocking to the city in which they will receive the protection denied them in their usual habitats.

That the Governor will let this propaganda (if that is all that it is) go unanswered and the perpetrator unpunished, is unbelievable. In justice to the state and its citizens it is up to Governor Green to bring to light the complete facts in reference to the charges made, force a retraction if not true, and take such legal proceedings as are necessary to bring to justice those responsible for the slanderous publication. His silence can only mean one thing:

POLAR BEARS WIN TWO FAST GAMES

STOPPED THE WHITE PRINTERS
LAST WEDNESDAY NIGHT.

Took Hard-fought Contest From the Clare Merchants Here Monday Evening—Alpena Coming.

Two well-earned victories, one last Wednesday night and another Monday evening, kept the home record of the Charlevoix Polar Bears unblemished. In the first contest, the White Printers Company five of Grand Rapids, met defeat 35 to 19. In a nip-and-tuck affair Monday night Clare Merchants were sent away on the short end of a 27 to 18 count.

Both contests were typical Polar Bear performances. The early periods were close—in fact, on some occasions, too close for comfort—but last period spurts spelled the margin of victory in both cases.

Against the White Printers last Wednesday, Charlevoix led at the end of the first period by a narrow one-point margin. While the Printers offered strong opposition, the Polar Bears' play was hurried and ragged, resulting in their missing many easy short shots. They hit their stride in the second quarter, however, outscoring the visitors by four goals. The count at the half found them leading 13 to 10.

The visitors made a strenuous bid in the third stanza. They outscored the Polar Bears 3 points to 2, but their strong guarding was equalled by that of the Polar Bears. The effort in that period seemed to sap their strength and in the final quarter, Charlevoix piled up an overwhelming lead.

Davenport played a wonderful game. He led his team with 10 points. Novak scored 7, Ikens and Brown both 6 and Kipke 2.

Monday night's contest was a hat-trick for the Bears. It was a close contest until the final period and the close play kept a packed house in a frenzy of excitement until the final whistle.

The first period was a great defensive battle. Both teams guarded closely and both missed several close, easy shots. The count was knotted 2-2 at the quarter end and a house-full of fans were sitting uneasy.

To the Voters of Charlevoix.
As a candidate for Mayor of the City of Charlevoix, I feel it my duty to publicly apprise the voters interested in Municipal affairs as to my position on business propositions by which we are now or will be confronted in our relations with local affairs.

The fostering and encouraging of industrial development, organizations such as offer employment to wage earning citizens, thereby adding materially to the payroll and making for improved financial conditions, a benefit not only to the wage earner, but to the city as a whole. And further to encourage a far greater extension of our summer resort and tourist trade, both within the city and its splendid surrounding territory.

To put forth a special effort to secure a paved State Trunk Line, easterly and westerly directly connecting Charlevoix with points on Lake Huron, thereby shortening the distance between Charlevoix and Detroit and other southeastern points by nearly 100 miles.

To lend my assistance and endeavor toward the conservation of all public utilities owned and operated by this municipality, and to favor such extensions as will be just and equitable to the city and its citizens, and in this will demand a full dollar in value for every dollar of the taxpayers money expended on any project.

Inasmuch as the citizens of Charlevoix have not adopted a manager form of government, I will accept not more than $50.00 salary (the same as received by each councilman).

I am opposed to any radical changes in departmental employees and no change will be sanctioned by me of such as have and continue to perform their duties conscientiously and faithfully.

I will lend my assistance to the administration of the finances of our city to produce the lowest possible property tax.

It shall be my purpose to extend courteous hearings and treatment to every citizen, summer visitor and casual visitor having business with our city.

I will give of my time all that is necessary to meet every requirement of this office.

My interest in the future of Charlevoix is that of a permanent resident and tax payer, having great interest in the development of our city.

C. J. Winder.

FIRE DESTROYS PRINTING PLANT

Office of Emmet County Graphic is Burned Saturday Morning.

The plant and building of the Harbor Springs Graphic was destroyed by fire Saturday morning, fire being discovered shortly after midnight and raging in the 10 below zero temperature until 5:00 o'clock, when fireman gained complete control. The cause of the fire is undetermined. A new heating plant installed last fall was considered as working perfectly. The building was gutted, upstairs and down, but the walls are still standing. However, it is considered that the building is a total loss and that little if any of the machinery can be made serviceable again. The loss is partly covered by insurance.

The building was formerly used as the Masonic temple and five years ago was sold to the newspaper. It had been repaired and improved considerably since that time. The newspaper plant had received considerable new machinery and equipment during the last three years and also carried a complete stock of supplies for the job printing plant as well as for the newspaper.

Elmer Hanna, owner and editor, said his future course had not yet been determined. It is expected, however, that as soon as the insurance can be adjusted, workmen will start clearing away the debris and getting out the damaged machinery.

QUALITY beyond all previous standards

In entering the 1930 market, Dodge Brothers were keenly conscious of two fundamental facts: First, that this year more than ever, value will be the basis of sales. Second, that the public is today better qualified than ever to judge value.

Dodge engineers met these conditions by designing two new cars with features that not only satisfy the demands of a thrifty and motor-wise public, but set the standard of values far ahead of any previous conception. Specifically these engineers have achieved:

SENSATIONAL VALUES

A NEW SIX

$835

AND UP, F. O. B. FACTORY

—the lowest-priced Six Dodge Brothers ever have offered.

—the lowest-priced closed car of any model Dodge Brothers ever have offered.

—the lowest-priced car with Monopiece (Steel) Body ever offered.

—the lowest-priced Six with internal expanding four-wheel hydraulic brakes ever offered.

A NEW EIGHT

AND UP, F. O. B. FACTORY

—unmatched at its price for power, speed, comfort and safety.

—unparalleled in its field for quality, distinction and style.

—unequaled in value among popular-priced eight-cylinder cars—with Monopiece (Steel) Body, Down-Draft carburetion, weatherproof four-wheel hydraulic brakes, double-action hydraulic shock absorbers, air cleaner, oil filter.

These new cars have been the sensation of the winter's automobile shows. See them at your nearest Dodge Brothers dealer's showroom.

COUNTY NORMAL NEWS.

The class is observing Washington's Birthday this week by pictures on the bulletin board. The class is also working on correction of English errors in connection with the fact that Washington, as a true patriot, refused to murder the King's English.

A Washington's Day program is being arranged by Miss Sutton and Miss Baker to be given on Friday. A pantomime of Washington's life and appropriate songs are features of the program.

Miss Baker had room charge of the Training room on Friday forenoon and on the following Tuesday morning.

Miss Taylor taught in that room. During the following week, Miss Jolls and Miss Crump are to each teach a half day.

A visitor in our County Normal room will be interested in the array of snit composition maps of Asia that meet his eyes. Some of them show physical features, rainfall, and distribution of people. Others show the political divisions.

Many interesting projects were completed last week, showing work in several different subjects. Miss Matchett made a pictorial chart, giving a study of planetary system. Several charts relating to agriculture were exceptionally worth while. Miss Crump made one showing various types, growth and prevention of "noxious weeds."

Miss Jolls made one showing the "life of the corn borer." The chart showed the area infested by these insects, the damage done and preventions that can be made use of. Miss Trimble gave the class new knowledge of our state by her chart on Michigan.

The first grade is beginning penmanship with use of pencil and paper. They have formerly used the boards.

ILL 6 YEARS!
NEW KONJOLA
GAVE RELIEF

Another Quick Triumph Scored by New and Different Medicine Over Stubborn Ailments.

MRS. FRANCIS STREET.

"I am glad to let the public know what Konjola has done for me," said Mrs. Francis Street, 608 North Oakley street, Saginaw. "For six years I was trying medicine after medicine in an endeavor to get relief from severe stomach and liver troubles. Nothing, it seemed, could give me relief, and I kept on getting worse. I became so ill that I could not eat anything but toast and milk, and for a long time lived on milk alone. I became very nervous."

"I had lost all faith in medicine, but I finally yielded to a friend who insisted that I try this new Konjola. After the first bottle I could notice a change for the better, and I kept on until I had taken eight bottles. By that time my health was restored. I have no stomach or liver trouble and constipation is a thing of the past."

"Konjola is sold in Charlevoix at F. J. Fessenden's drug store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section."

He was kicked by both feet of the horse, each shoe striking on right and left side of his face. Dr. Duffie rendered first aid, but infection set in and the case was pretty serious for a while, but he was able Sunday to ride to town.

Ebon Dawson got his load of logs stuck fast in a snow drift Thursday, and went to the house to get a shovel with which to extricate his load. When he returned the mules had started for home and ran into the woods, load and all. It took Ebon about two hours to get out of his trouble, but did it without unloading. It is hard to tell just what move a mule will make next. They don't talk much, but they do a powerful lot of thinking.

MANY ROADS Which One Shall I Take?

When the long road dips sweetly down a hill and ends up in a blank and puzzled amazement at a jumble of cross-roads, unless you know your way, you'll push down hard on the brakes! And then look around to see where you're going.

Five roads jutting off in various directions of the compass. One road is yours. Four lead you astray. But a brief glance—and you're off. On the right road. For a sign was over each road to direct your way!

Just as the directions point out the way in a maze of roads, so does modern advertising guide you in the right direction through the multitude of products offered in present-day markets.

Advertising points the way, straight and clear, to economical and advantageous marketing. It distinguishes the good product. It directs your way by indicating the article best adapted to your needs.

Read the advertisements in this paper as carefully, as you would the signs above the cross-roads. They point out your buying road as surely and as safely.

KIDS

WASHINGTON NEWS LETTER.

Mr. Hoover Gives a Bell.

Children in the Blue Ridge district of Virginia trouble to school in response to a bell that was paid for by President Hoover. The school, which was built within the past six months, is the result of a subscription started at the President's suggestion last summer, when the lack of education among children in the vicinity of his Rapidan Camp was brought to Mr. Hoover's attention. He promised the Reverend George Buracker of that district that every dollar he could raise for the project would be matched by one from the President. The preacher walked hundreds of miles soliciting funds, and when his friends wrote President Hoover what he had done, the latter responded with seventy per cent of the cost of building a school. To raise more funds for a bell after the school had been erected was too much for the mountain folk. They told the President their troubles, and he sent them a check for the necessary amount. Children from three counties in Virginia are called to their studies every morning by the "Hoover bell."

Each Year More Mothers Treat Colds Externally

The Dangers of "Dosing" Colds Now Avoided by Use of Modern Vaporizing Ointment

When Vicks VapoRub was introduced, mothers especially were quick to appreciate it, because it is just rubbed on and cannot upset children's delicate stomachs, as "dosing" is so apt to do. Today, the whole trend of modern medicine is away from needless "dosing."

As more and more mothers adopted this modern external treatment, the fame of Vicks spread until today it is the standby for colds—adults as well as children's—in over 60 countries.

Just rubbed on throat and chest, Vicks acts through the skin like a plaster, and, at the same time its medicated vapors, released by the body heat, are inhaled direct to the inflamed air-passages, loosening the phlegm and easing the difficult breathing.

Ever-increasing demand for this better method of treating colds is shown in the familiar Vicks slogan: Made famous when Vicks reached "17 Million Jars Used Yearly"—later raised to "21 Million"—there are now "Over 26 Million Jars Used Yearly."

regard it as little more than that—just a souvenir. Our navy department has strict ideas concerning the uses that can be made of a vessel that once felt the tread of High Executive feet. There must be nothing commercial about this transaction, nothing, that is, except for the hundred thousand smackers from the purchaser. The buyer cannot, in fact, even call it the "Mayflower," for fear that the name will entice dollars into his coffers.

Of course, if somebody cares to pay the amount asked simply to be able to say casually, "Yes, I'm rather proud of the old boat. Used to be the Mayflower, you know," well, that's a matter between his pride and his pocketbook. So far, no one has shown any eagerness for that privilege. Unless navy officials lose some of their own reverence for the yacht, they may be forced to seek out a handy mantelpiece in some museum and deposit it thereupon.

Smoothing the Way to the Farm Gate

Good roads in the modern sense have become a "band wagon" proposition, says James W. Brooks, director of the American Highway Education Bureau. The next three years will be especially favorable for highway construction when the senate confirms the appropriation of $125,000,000 a year for three years recently passed by the House of Representatives. Although only three hours was allowed for final consideration of the bill, forty-four members of congress managed to voice their approval of the appropriation, which is in line with President Hoover's call for "prudent expansion."

Motorists and taxpayers who ultimately foot the bill for highway expenditures will be pleased to learn that construction shall be as logical as possible. It is planned to put in order first those roads most heavily traveled rather than to begin on roads where traffic is light. This policy of "building toward the farm gate," as Mr. Brooks expresses it, insures effective relief in the shortest amount of time.

Politics and Personalities.

Final cries of anguish are being emitted by Old Guard protectionists in the senate as the tariff bill nears completion. Their resignation to defeat by the Democratic-Progressive coalition was suddenly shattered when Senator LaFollette of Wisconsin, proposed to slash the tariff rate on varnish even below the 1922 duty. Senator Goff of West Virginia leaped to his feet and launched a vigorous protest against the policy of reducing rates below the Fordney-McCumber schedules without notice to the industries concerned. The consumers, Senator Goff argued, are estopped from opposing increases because they have not appeared to oppose them nor have they raised any howl. As sailing the argument as indefensible, "Young Bob" declared Goff's position, exalting rights of property over those of humanity, "beyond, gagged and delivered" the consumer. The conclusion, then, is that Senator Goff's vote against the higher sugar duty was based upon the consumers' howls against being raided out of $65,000,000 yearly to aid a handful of beet sugar manufacturers who do not need aid.

As a sample of the mental processes of high tariff Senators, Senator Goff's attitude on the consumers' rights is in strange contrast with the purpose of the lobby committee which has exorcised the dissemination of information to consumers; which information would enable them to do just what according to Senator Goff their failure to do warrants the present increases. It looks as if the consumer is damned if he does and damned if he doesn't.

White House Silver Gets a Shine.

Long before the days of Coolidge economy a White House silver gong dingy or worn through hard service was carefully replated, with consequent saving of taxpayers' pennies. With natural pride, J. E. Bromwell of D. L. Bromwell Company, Inc., will tell you that his father's firm started replating the knives, forks and spoons of high executives back in 1870. Furthermore, they have been doing it ever since. Mr. Bromwell can remember when he did replating for Grover Cleveland's wife. His father's business goes much further back than that, however, for D. L. Bromwell struck up his enterprise fifty-seven years ago. Then, instead of having an efficient electric motor operating wire brushes to polish replated pieces, Mr. Bromwell used a dog to furnish motive power. The federal building program has forced the company to move from its fifty-seven-year-old location to a new building. However, it is still replating the White House silver.

Is Corn 'Husked' Or Is It 'Shucked'?

(By Tom Bodine in the Paris (Missouri) Mercury.)

We again, as is our habit, arise to dissent. They mal "husk" corn in Kansas, Iowa and Illinois, but in the sovereign state of Missouri we "shuck" it. We came through Cumberland Gap, and the Plymouth idiom has no place in our speech. "Shuck" is both phonetically and descriptively the better word of the two. Its rough sound more clearly conveys the sound resulting when the outer covering is stripped or torn from an ear of Indian maize. It tears upward through the husks like sound English speech out to do.

For this reason we are astounded that the national corn-shucking contest at Platte City, Missouri, once the home of Virginia and Kentucky grandees, should be advertised over a nationwide radio hookup, as "a corn-husking contest." That's New England talk, and we are of the Tide-water and the Blue Grass. In the idiom the tall, long-flanked men from these delectable regions brought across the river with them, a husk was the hard outer shell of grain, and was separated in the milling process—it is called bolting—in bran. Corn bran, a comparatively recent by-product, sells higher today than wheat bran.

Referring to that final authority on standard English, the King James translation of the Holy Bible, we find that the prodigal son had been living on "husks." That is, he had been eating the hard outer shell of the grain which the hogs had cracked off with their teeth and had left on the feeding ground as "chaff." The learned translators did not say he had lived on shucks, because he hadn't done any such thing. There were no shucks in "that country," wherever it was, and he could not have eaten them if there had been.

A Study in Definitions.

There have been so many discussions in our own country concerning the relation between education and religion, that the Russian method of combining the two takes an interest. Not religious beliefs but religious history is taught in this strange country about which wild things are told and few things actually known. The Russian religious institute teaches by pictures and "wall papers" the story of all religions and their influence through the ages. Their program includes the establishment of schools throughout the country to give educational possibilities to about 100,000,000 now illiterate people. Through education, they hope to banish ignorance, superstition and fear.

There is a deep-rooted belief in America that the be-wiskered "Reds" of Russia are bitterly opposed to religion in any form. As a matter of fact, there is greater religious freedom in Russia than there was under the Czarist regime. On the Russian Easter, for instance, the government supplied the extra milk required in the observance of that day; evidently, then, no attempt is made to abolish attendance at church.

REWARD IS OFFERED FOR MAGAZINE FAKER

Defrauded Many in Michigan—Poses as an Ex-Service Man.

From the National Publishers' association we have received a warning regarding a magazine subscription faker who is giving business-like receipts for magazines and never turning them in. He has taken thousands of dollars from Michigan cities and was at Grass Lake January 31.

John Foster, Jr., of his latest name is given, poses as an ex-service man and puts on some uncanny tricks to gain sympathy. He claims to have been wounded so badly that it was necessary to remove a portion of his "innards," which resulted in a total loss of feeling in his body.

To prove it, he holds a lighted match under his finger; also turns one leg around so the toes point backward, explaining his hip was shot away and he has an aluminum jacket to support his body. His right leg is probably artificial. Foster is described as about 32 years old, weight 125 pounds, height 5 feet 7 inches, light brown hair, blue eyes, with a shallow complexion. Has a small mustache. At Grass Lake he wore a blue overcoat and soft hat. Walks with a limp.

A reward of $100 is offered for his arrest, and a representative of the National Publishers' association will come at once to prosecute. Notify Chief of Police W. J. Weikel or Sheriff Dave Vaughan, and either hold the man or have him followed until an officer comes.

The lesson-sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "The sun is not affected by the revolution of the earth. So science reveals Soul as God, untouched by sin and death,—as the central Life and intelligence around which circle harmoniously all things in the systems of Mind (p. 310).

TRAVERSE PUCKERS NIP LOCAL OUTFIT

Take Fast Game There Last Thursday Night, 1 to 0.

Traverse City Legionaires, who have broken into the hockey limelight of Northern Michigan this winter with an inexperienced but powerful combination, nosed out Charlevoix's puck-chasers in a closely-fought contest at Traverse City last Thursday evening.

Dick Kent of the Traverse team, sent in the goal that won the game in the first period. The second and third stanzas were scoreless, with Traverse forcing the game in Charlevoix's territory.

Lamorre and Crockett, two players who have had Canadian experience at hockey, were the mainstays of the Traverse combination. Livingston played a fine game at left wing for Charlevoix. The line-up:

Traverse City
Lamorre..... G..... Neilson
Hicks..... LD..... Lemure
Crockett..... RD..... Swanson
Keenhe..... C..... Foster
Kent..... LW..... Livingston
Weaver..... RW..... King
Traverse substitutes—Bannon and Panek.

Charlevoix substitutes—Arvilla, Bergman and Heise.

Hal Elliott, referee.

Weather permitting, Charlevoix will play a return game with Traverse here Thursday night. They have another contest scheduled with Alpena for next Tuesday evening.

ank sunk a free throw to break the tie. Clare countered with a goal which put them in front, and Kipke evened the count with another free throw. The rest of the period was tip-and-tuck. First Clare led, then Charlevoix, but when the smoke cleared away at the half, Charlevoix was out in front 10 to 6. A goal and two free throws by Novak kept the locals in the running.

The third period was a repetition of the second. First the count was tied, then one or the other held an advantage. It was well along towards the end of the period before the Polar Bears established an advantage and when the quarter ended they were leading 19 to 16. Apparently, Clare spent themselves by their efforts earlier in the contest, for in the final stanza Charlevoix out-scored them by four goals.

Every member of the Polar Bear squad played tip-top ball. Brown led in points scored with 10. Davenport was a close second with 8. Novak had 5. Kipke 3 and Kipke 1.

Hugh Mayne of Charlevoix, and Watson of Traverse City, handled both games in nice shape.

In their next game, the Polar Bears meet Alpena here next Tuesday evening.

AVERS GOOD FISH YARNS LAND IKES

Cheboygan Writer Thinks We Exaggerate, But Admits Result.

Under a column headed "Bamb-lings," in the Cheboygan Observer, our northern neighbor takes exception to some of our local fish "yarns." He cites an amusing fish story from southern Michigan and then reflects upon what local press agents might have done with such a story. The article reads:

"The fish are so thick down in the lakes in the southern part of the state that they come right out on the ice for air."

"Recently a man driving along the shore of one of those lakes saw a sixteen pound pike jump out of a hole and I'll be darned if he didn't take advantage of the poor finny fellow and take him home and eat him." Now, isn't there some law among our numerous fishing laws that bans this kind of treatment toward fish? You read so much about the protestations and banning of the spear that this new method of sneaking up on an innocent fish arising himself sort of seems inhuman.

"Boy, if that had happened at Houghton Lake, or in the vicinity of Charlevoix or Petoskey, it would have been just too bad. The way they elaborate on fish stories is no wonder they get the business in the summer months—they have the fish, too, folks."

We'll admit we have some good fish stories down in this neck of the woods. They may be stretched a point or so once in a while, but "what to Heck" is a man's imagination for, anyway. There's one recent yarn, however, that we have all "taken with a grain of salt." Until someone produces proof, we just won't believe the story about those 19 1/2-inch smelt they're catching up at Boyne City.

AGRICULTURAL NOTES By B. C. Mellencamp

State Club Leaders Visit Clubs.

A. G. Kettunen, state club leader, and Silva Wixson, assistant state leader, spent Tuesday and Wednesday of last week in company with County Agent Mellencamp in visiting the boys' and girls' clubs.

For the most part these club members are doing splendid work and are highly interested in participating in the club program.

Several schools have their requirements already met, so will have some splendid exhibits to show on the Achievement Day to be held the latter part of April.

Wolverine Lamb Production Contest.

A new contest of interest to all sheep owners in Charlevoix county has been announced by Michigan State College. This contest is devised to locate the most efficient sheep raisers and to demonstrate the most effective methods of breeding, feeding and management.

Awards are to be made on the average number of pounds of lamb produced per ewe in 135 days. Cash prizes will be given as follows: First $75.00; second $60.00; third $40.00; fourth $30.00; fifth $20.00 and $15.00 each for next five places.

Any number of sheep men in this county can enter the contest provided they have at least a flock of 20 ewes bred to a pure bred ram. Simple records are all that will be required and each man can follow his own method unless he wishes to adopt the suggested practices which will be sent from time to time. It is the plan to make at least two personal visits with each co-operator.

Come on Charlevoix county sheep raisers! Enter the contest and compete for these fine cash prizes: Send your name in to your county agent, Boyne City, and more information will be given. In the last week note the great showing that our potatoes made. Why can't we do the same with sheep?

Also the length of time for the ewes to lamb is from February 1st to May 31st, so that all men can enter disregarding the time of lambing.

Do You Keep Farm Accounts?

The keeping of farm accounts has been carried on by 27 farmers during the past year with splendid results. These 27 up-to-date farmers will definitely know on March 1, just how profitable their farm enterprise has been the past year and thereby can analyze their system of farming and discover where leaks of farm revenue have occurred. Each co-operator will close their book the week of March 10, by taking a closing inventory for the next year commencing in March.

H. A. Berg, farm management specialist, will assist each farmer in closing their records, in order to have them uniform and accurate and also to interpret the results.

This project has been so valuable as well as popular with farmers that a new class will be started on March 1. Room has been reserved in the extension program to include 20 more farmers in this project for the year 1930. At the present time your agent has had requests from ten farmers indicating their desire to begin keeping farm records. Send in your name to County Agent Mellencamp immediately and be included in this project, fundamental to successful farming.

One day will be set aside the week of March 10 for this group just starting, at which time the books will be distributed and the manner of keeping records carefully and completely explained by Mr. Berg.

This book is just about the simplest and easiest to keep of any thus far published, it not being necessary to keep time records or the expenses connected with the home, or division of labor in the various farm departments.

Don't forget to notify the extension office at once if interested.

and is able to read. Two sons and a daughter are living, viz.: Ralph Kowalski, Detroit; Lewis Kowalski, East Jordan; and Mrs. Emma Bucher of Manistee. There are 28 grandchildren, 57 great-grandchildren and 3 great-great-grandchildren. But for the death of members of the second generation, five would be living.

To the residents of Eveline township and for miles around, Mr. Kowalski is known as "Grandpa." There is hardly a day goes by but what some admiring friend replenishes the flower vases in his room. He is rarely without company for an entire day, and for a man to live 100 years and be so happy should certainly be the fulfillment of one's most cherished ambition.

CHARLEVOIX CAGERS TRIM EAST JORDAN

Play Strong Harbor Springs Five Here Friday Night.

Led by the brilliant playing of their captain and center, Bill Novak, Charlevoix's high school basketball five took Coach Cohen's East Jordan cagers into camp at East Jordan last Friday evening by a 19 to 10 score.

The victory was the third in succession for Coach Kipke's combination, including wins over Petoskey and Boyne City. It put Charlevoix up in second position in the Tip of Michigan conference of Northern Michigan class C teams, and marked their potential contenders for top honors, especially at tournament time.

Charlevoix led in every period against East Jordan, featuring a strong display of team work and the brilliant playing of Novak, who scored 10 of his team's points. Lee, of the East Jordan five, was outstanding.

Kipke's cagers meet their hardest test of the season here Friday night when they meet the state champion Harbor Springs combination. Considering comparative scores registered by the two fives in recent tilt, Charlevoix holds an edge over the visitors and should win on their home court.

Mrs. C. J. Winder, Mrs. Leona McKinley, Miss Ethel Mellin and Miss Helen Button were joint hostesses at a delightful bridge-luncheon affair given at the Hotel Charlevoix last Saturday afternoon from 2 until 6 o'clock.

Following luncheon in the hotel dining room, the guests removed to the parlors for an afternoon of bridge. Seven tables were in play, honors going to Mrs. Frank French and Mrs. P. T. Mitchell of Petoskey, and Miss Phillips of this city.

The occasion of this delightful affair was also in honor of the birthdays of the four hostesses.

SURPRISE PARTY FOR NONGENERIAN

Friends Help Mrs. A. M. Struthers Celebrate 90th Birthday.

The home of John R. Struthers, located north of this city on US-31, was the scene of a pleasant affair last Saturday evening. A surprise party was the event, given in honor of Mrs. A. R. Struthers, whose 90th birthday anniversary fell February 14, the day preceding. The delay of one day was made to allow all relatives to participate in the celebration.

In all, 46 neighbors, friends and relatives gathered for the occasion. A very pleasant evening was spent in visiting. Many of the visitors were pioneers of this vicinity and many experiences of early days were recalled.

A feature of a late lunch was several birthday cakes. One especially, an angel food cake beautifully decorated with candles and monograms, was the gift of Mrs. Ray O'Brien, who also added to the evening's entertainment with musical selections.

Departing at a late hour, the guests wished Mrs. Struthers happy returns of the day and many more of them. Incidentally, Mrs. Struthers is one of the true pioneers of Charlevoix. A full, detailed account of her early days will be carried in a later issue of the Courier.

ISLANDERS CROSS LAKE WITH AUTO

Spanned Ice From St. James to Cross Village Monday.

The first trip across Lake Michigan ice floes to Cross Village by automobile was accomplished Monday. Following the island mail carriers, W. J. Gallagher, Jr., Jas. Gallagher, Dennis Boyle, Edwin McCann and Jas. Gallagher, Jr., made the trip in an open touring car. The route covered was around 35 miles and required three and one-half hours.

According to members of the party, the going was rough. By following the mail carriers closely, they were aided through the heaviest snow with a tow line hitched to the sleighs ahead of them. In many places the ice was said to have been as smooth as a trunk line.

The men were enroute to Chicago. They expressed no intentions of driving back to the island.

Perfect Eggs—Charlevoix and Beaver Island Returns Poor.

In their determination to get to the bottom of results accomplished by the annual spawn fishing, the conservation department has conducted an investigation which has furnished some interesting data.

A test box of 72,000 trout eggs was taken from the spawn brought in by each individual fisherman operating out of Northern Michigan fishing centers and turning their spawn in at the Charlevoix hatchery. Over an allotted period of time, figures have been kept on the number of dead eggs taken from each test box. Through this procedure, definite figures on negative and positive results have been obtained.

For several years past, the work of gathering spawn and fertilizing the eggs has been allotted to the fishermen themselves. At one time the government put a man on each boat for this job, but the procedure has been changed. Fishermen operate on a permit issued by the conservation department and the success of spawn gathering thrown directly upon them. Results of the above mentioned investigation would indicate that many fishermen have been very lax.

Below we are publishing tabulated results of the hatchery test. The figures show that Charlevoix and Beaver Island fishermen have made the lowest returns in the district, while those at Leland have turned in the best. Charlevoix fishermen, as a group, turned in spawn averaging 53 per cent fertility, while those from Beaver Island had 46 per cent good spawn. Following are the figures:

While the conservation department has made no definite statement, it is intimated that some fishermen may have difficulty obtaining a permit to operate next fall. The department knows results have not been satisfactory for several years, but this is the first time they have had figures to prove their contentions. They have put the future of the commercial fishing business directly up to the fishermen themselves and feel that if they are not interested enough to do their part, it would be better if such parties were not fishing at all. In other words, the officials feel that conservation of commercial fish means bread and butter to the fishermen. Those who co-operate to better the industry are entitled to stay in the game and the others are not.

Houghton Lake Pike HAVE BIG APPETITES

Seventy small fish, ranging in size from an inch to two inches long, were taken from the stomach of a pike speared last Sunday at Houghton Lake, Roscommon county, by a Dr. Alger of Ithaca, according to F. A. Westerman, director of the fisheries division, department of conservation. A dozen of the fish, found in the pike's stomach had been partly digested and were thrown away, but 68 blue gills, rock bass and some small bass, were in an excellent state of preservation.

SPRING PRIMARY ON NEXT TUESDAY

Great Public Interest is Being Shown and Vote Polled Should Be a Record One.

Usurping the limelight of interest among events of next week is the annual spring primary election of Tuesday, March 4th. With opposition for city offices popping up from nearly every quarter, the election should eclipse all others of former years from a standpoint of public interest and a record vote will likely be polled.

Heading the bill is the mayoralty contest between the present incumbent, Arthur Bergeon, and Dr. C. J. Winder. Three candidates are seeking the office of city treasurer, and a two-way fight is on for park commissioner.

In all three wards there is a scrap on for supervisor's berth, and in the second and third a fight for alderman.

When voters reach the polls Tuesday, they will have the following to choose from:

City Ticket.
Mayor—Charles J. Winder, Arthur Bergeon.

City Clerk—Ray S. Hamilton.
City Treasurer—John H. Bugbee, Robert E. Rife, Ralph Hamilton.

Justice of the Peace (long and short terms)—Robert Withers, Horace R. Fowler.

Park Commissioner—Earl A. Young, George A. Lusk.

COAST GUARDS HUNTED ISLAND MAIL CARRIER

Nine coast guardsmen, members of a rescue party searching for a gasoline mail carrier in distress, returned to their stations early last Thursday after a 10-hour battle with drifting ice and strong winds in Lake Michigan.

The guardsmen were compelled to abandon their boats and land over the ice when they put in at Leland at one o'clock that morning. Meanwhile the mail carrier, manned by Tracy Grosvenor and John Kinnucan, landed safely after repairing a disabled engine.

POLAR BEARS WON FROM ALPENA FIVE

EVENED COUNT WITH EASTERN-
ERS HERE TUESDAY NIGHT.

Polar Cubs Lost to Potoskey Outfit—Polar Bears Close the Season Against Manistee.

In a game that lacked the punch of former contests, the Charlevoix Polar Bears defeated Alpena Indians on the local court Tuesday night, 20 to 14.

Alpena displayed a fast brand of team work and guarded closely, but their basket shooting was far from what it should have been.

Starting with only two regulars in the line-up, Charlevoix was hard pressed to play Alpena on even terms during the first period. The play was ragged, though fast, and both teams found the meshes once. The quarter ended with the score tied 2-all.

Ikens went in as the second canto opened. Davenport and Cooper scored a goal apiece and Kipke a free throw for 5 points. Alpena scored once on a goal and the half ended with the Polar Bears leading 7 to 4.

With a first-string line-up on the floor, Charlevoix stepped out in the third period to score four goals, two by Davenport and one each by Novak and Brown. Their play was still ragged, however, and it seems the team never did get started. Alpena added 5 points to their total and the period ended Charlevoix 14, Alpena 9.

The final quarter was fast and rough in spots. The Polar Bears found the meshes for two goals and a pair of free throws, while Alpena's efforts netted them two goals and one free toss. Ikens and an Alpena player were removed from the game on account of rough stuff.

Davenport was high man for Charlevoix with 8 points. Novak scored 5, Ikens, Cooper and Brown 2 each. Kipke and Marshall, one each. Mayne of Charlevoix and Watson of Traverse City, handled the game nicely.

In the preliminary, the Polar Cubs were defeated 13 to 10 by a Potoskey independent outfit.

As far as is known at the present time, the Polar Bears will close their season here next Tuesday evening, March 4, against the Manistee Iron Works.

A combination school and city band added their bit to the entertainment Tuesday night with their snappy musical selections.

Joseph Donnellan, Chicago pilot-instructor, who, together with a student, was killed in a crash at Chicago last Friday, was well known to Charlevoix residents.

Donnellan will be recalled as the pilot who carried mail between Charlevoix and Beaver Island several years ago, and later was pilot for the Beaver Island airline organized the same summer.

COUNCIL OKAYS SUMMER PROGRAM

ADOPT ADVERTISING CAMPAIGN
AS RECOMMENDED.

New Booklet, Extensive Newspaper
Advertising, Etc., Charlevoix's Bid for Tourist Trade.

Charlevoix's 1930 resort advertising campaign, as outlined at recent meetings of the Association of Commerce advertising committee, was adopted Monday evening by the city council at their regular session.

Embodied in the program is a newspaper advertising campaign, which, if possible, will be gotten under way the latter part of March. A series of advertisements will appear in the resort and Sunday editions of dailies in Cincinnati, Ohio; St. Louis, Mo.; Indianapolis, Ind.; Cleveland, Ohio; Toledo, Ohio and Detroit.

In connection with newspaper advertising, it was recommended that a page be taken in the annual directory issued and distributed by the Michigan Tourist and Resort Association. Fifty thousand copies of this attractive advertising medium are issued and widely distributed.

Another important item was the decision to contract for a 5,000 run of Charlevoix's former booklet, which contained, twenty-eight pages of local views and scenes. Order for the booklets has already been placed and the remainder of the campaign will be started as soon as possible.

While the 1930 program is getting away to a good start, the future is not being overlooked. Present plans call for an entirely new booklet for the 1931 season. It will contain entirely new views, scenic material, up-to-date road maps, etc. Ground work for the booklet will be laid this summer so that everything will be ready in advance.

With an extensive advertising campaign to sell this city to prospective summer visitors, and a fine entertainment program to keep them busy after they arrive, Charlevoix should be in line for another bumper season. The fine co-operation now being shown from every angle, speaks well for Charlevoix's 1930 prospects.

NEW STORE OPEN TO PUBLIC ON SATURDAY

Milton Block Grocery and Meat Market in New Building.

Elsewhere in this issue is an advertisement announcing the opening of Milton Block's grocery store and meat market in the new building at the corner of Bridge and Mason streets.

Favors for both men and women and an array of special bargains on merchandise mark the occasion, also an invitation to the public to inspect the store.

Work on the new structure, which is 27x82 feet, was started last fall and is now undergoing finishing touches. The building is of brick and concrete construction, with full basement. From the fine, large display windows to the work room in the rear, the store is a model of neatness. Coolers have been re-built, refrigeration system installed and everything possible done towards increasing efficiency from a standpoint of serving the public and enhancing working conditions.

SPRING? IT WAS— BUT CAUGHT COLD

Week of Abnormal Temperatures
Ends Up in Snow Storm.

Charlevoix was treated to some phenomenal weather the past week. A week ago Saturday was the coldest on record, with the temperature at 7 below zero. Tuesday morning, the mercury took a rather unexpected upward bound and a week of delightful spring weather followed.

Snow in the region disappeared rapidly until roads became bare. Ice in the lakes went to pieces and for a time it really looked as if spring had come to stay. Up in the E. J. Block garden, the caretaker, Ed. Olach, picked a bunch of stock flowers in full bloom. Saturday, the thermometer hit a new February high record of 68 and the region experienced a mid-winter thunder storm. Crows were seen in great numbers, also robins and a few meadow larks. Boy!—it was a "grand and glorious feeling."

However, things are back to normal now. The thermometer hit the toboggan Tuesday afternoon. Before night a heavy nor'easter with snow flurries set in, and today (Wednesday) we have several inches of the "Beautiful."

By the way, a wire from Traverse City this morning brought the information that their winter carnival had been postponed for lack of winter setting. Charlevoix sure was lucky.

SEEK RECRUITS AT FORT BRADY

MILITARY CAMP TO CONVE-
NIE JULY 18 TO AUGUST 16.

Young Men Between 17 and 24 Years
Are Eligible—Applications
Now Ready.

Next summer, from July 18th to August 16th, there will be held at Fort Brady, Michigan, near Sault Ste. Marie, a Citizens' Military Training Camp for young men who have passed their 17th birthday and are not over 24 years of age.

It will be a month of keen enjoyment for wide-awake young men who are not looking for an idle vacation. The schedule calls for a certain amount of interesting military drill and instruction, which will be alternated with athletics and recreation under almost ideal conditions.

Numerous lakes and rivers in the vicinity of Fort Brady afford excellent opportunities for swimming and aquatic sports. A modern up-to-date concrete tennis court and a completely equipped gymnasium will be available for use at all times. Plenty of equipment will be on hand for basketball, baseball, volleyball, boxing and wrestling, and track events. Towards the end of the camp a track meet will be held and prizes will be awarded to those who excel in their particular sport.

The camp will be absolutely free to those young men who are lucky enough to be selected to attend. Uniforms, board, lodging, laundry and so forth will be furnished without cost. Even the railway fare to and from Fort Brady will be paid by the government.

Enrollment begins March 1, 1930. Applications to attend should be submitted as soon thereafter as possible in order that places may be reserved at the camp. Last year many young men were rejected because they failed to get their applications in early while vacancies still existed.

The commanding officer, Fort Brady, Michigan, will be glad to send you an application blank and full particulars if you will send him your name at once.

The new owners intend to rebuild and enlarge the capacity of the plant to 150 carloads a year in the very near future.

HARBOR'S CHAMPS DOWN LOCAL FIVE

WON 21 TO 18 STRUGGLE HERE
FRIDAY NIGHT.

Reserves Took Preliminary Contest
11 to 10 After Overtime Period—East Jordan Friday.

In a fast and hard fought game here last Friday evening Harbor Springs, 1929 class C state champions, added another to their unbroken string of victories. Outscored only in the last three minutes of the final period, Charlevoix went down to defeat 21 to 17, but gave the champions a great battle. They proved to the largest crowd to witness a game here this season, that there was little choice in strength between the two teams and that as a tournament contender, Charlevoix is not to be considered lightly.

From the outset, the game was very fast, and packed with thrills. Novak, Charlevoix center, opened the scoring with a free toss. Faunce, Harbor center, countered with a goal. Novak again scored via the free throw route to even the count, but Hill put Harbor ahead with a goal. Shortly before the gun ended the period, Corrie McCall sunk a goal to even the score and the period ended a tie, 4-all.

Charlevoix led by a narrow margin throughout the second quarter. Capt. Novak scored a goal and free throw for 3 points, while Anee added another goal for 5 points. Harbor added 4 points through Faunce's goal and free toss and another free one by Hill, and when the gun sounded for the half, Kipke's men were leading 9 to 8. Both teams were playing wonderful ball. Their guarding was practically airtight and neither were getting any breaks.

Faunce evened the count for Harbor with a free throw shortly after the third quarter opened. Hill speared a goal for a two-point lead, but Novak evened things up when he found the meshes and McCall sunk another which put Charlevoix in the lead again. Novak added three more points to Harbor's one before the canto ended and when the gun sounded the score was Charlevoix 16, Harbor 14.

To the Voters of Charlevoix:
The following letter was mailed by me to Mayor Bergeon on Monday last, and up to this time I have received no reply thereto.

My position is as set forth in letter to Mayor Bergeon, and I solicit your support upon my determination to stand for a closer co-operation between the citizens and the administration of our city.

February 24, 1930.
Mr. Arthur Bergeon, Mayor,
Charlevoix, Michigan.

Dear Sir:
Much discussion is being had among the tax payers of our city regarding the finances of the city, embracing bond issues, taxes, maintenance and improvements.

In face of the fact that your administration has not made annual reports as provided by law for several years past, I believe you will agree with me in that the tax payers are entitled to such information as would and should be given in periodical reports.

Some of the questions arising are:
How long has the $25,000 bond issue for the city's part of the Railroad Swing Bridge been running?

Is it true that our city has paid nearly $50,000 interest on this bond issue of $25,000 up to the present time?

How much money did the city pay for betterments on the Bellaire Power plant during 1926 and 1927, and how much increase, if any, in power volume from 1926 to 1927?

Is it a fact that our electric rates are much higher than any other city of same population in the lower peninsula of Michigan?

What is the present status of the state's demand for improved sewage conditions in Charlevoix and have we a sinking fund to care for this when demanded by the State department? Have you provided a sinking fund for retiring the Railroad Bridge bond issue?

I believe that the tax payers of our city are entitled to and should have a published report of the finances of the city annually, as provided by law.

It has been suggested that an open discussion of these matters would be welcome, and I have committed myself to a discussion of the whole matter with you, if you are agreeable, at a public meeting to be called, timed and placed by yourself during this week.

Kindly advise me promptly your pleasure in the matter.
Respectfully,
9t C. J. Winder.

THREE IMPORTANT FACTORS ENTER INTO THE COST OF Your AUTOMOBILE

1. How much it costs to make the car
2. How much extra you pay the dealer
3. How much it costs for operation and up-keep

THE PURCHASE of an automobile involves a considerable amount of money and it should be carefully considered from all angles before a final decision is made.

The value of the car to you depends on the value built into it at the factory, how much extra you pay the dealer for distribution, selling, financing and accessories and what it will cost to operate and maintain the car after purchase. Each of these factors, as it relates to the Ford car, is frankly explained below.

Economy in production

THE FORD CAR is made economically because of the efficiency of Ford production methods. The money saved through this efficiency is put back into the car in improved quality of material and in greater care and accuracy in manufacturing. The constant effort is to eliminate waste and find ways to make each part better and better without increasing cost—frequently at lowered cost.

Because of Ford economies in large production and because the Ford organization operates on a low-profit margin, the price you pay for the car is much less than it would be under any other conditions. Yet it brings you many unusual features of construction and performance.

At least $75 extra value is represented alone by the Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield, the Rustless Steel, the four Houdaille double-acting hydraulic shock absorbers, and the five steel-spoke wheels. The unusually large number of ball and roller bearings and the extensive use of fine steel forgings instead of castings or stampings are additional features that reflect the high quality built into every part of the car. Throughout, it is a value far above the price you pay.

Low dealer charges

THE SAME PRINCIPLES of efficiency and economy that characterize the manufacture of the Ford car are applied also to distribution. Obviously it would do the public little good to save in production if these savings were sacrificed later in excessive costs of selling, financing and accessories.

The Ford dealer, therefore, operates on the same low-profit margin as the Ford Motor Company, his discount or commission being the lowest of any automobile dealer. He does a good business because he makes a small profit on many sales instead of a large profit on fewer sales.

NOTE THESE LOW PRICES

Roadster . . .	$435
Phaeton . . .	$440
Coupe . . .	$500
Two-window Fordor Sedan . . .	$600
Three-window Fordor Sedan . . .	$625
Cabriolet . . .	$645
Town Sedan . . .	$670

(All prices f. o. b. Detroit)

Low charges for time payments through the Universal Credit Company

The lower cost of selling, combined with the low charges for financing and accessories, means a direct saving of at least $50 to $75 to every purchaser of a Ford, in addition to the savings made possible by economies in manufacturing. The money you pay for a Ford goes into value in the car. It is not wasted in high dealer charges.

Low up-keep costs

IT IS IMPORTANT to remember that the cost of your automobile is not the first cost only, but the total cost after months and years of service. Here again there is a decided saving when you buy a Ford.

The cost of operation and up-keep is lower because of simplicity of design, the high quality of material, and the reduction of friction and wear through unusual accuracy in manufacturing and assembling. The reliability and longer life of the car contribute to its low depreciation per year of use.

The intelligent, painstaking service rendered by Ford dealers is under close factory supervision and is a factor in the low up-keep cost of the Ford. All labor is billed at a flat rate and replacement parts are always available at low prices through Ford dealers in every section of the United States.

In two, three or five years, depending on how much you drive, the saving in operating and maintaining a new Ford will amount to even more than the saving on the first cost of the car.

"NO DOSING" for COLDS

When Vicks introduced the better method of treating colds externally it was especially appreciated by mothers because it avoids "dosing," which so often disturbs children's delicate digestions.

Each year more and more adults, too, have found Vicks equally good for their own colds. Today, the whole trend of medical practice is away from needless "dosing."

Just rubbed on, Vicks gives off medicated vapors which are inhaled, and, at the same time, acts through the skinlike plaster.

BEAVER ISLAND NEWS

Our mail carriers seem to think that tomorrow may be their last trip over the ice if this warm weather continues.

Mr. and Mrs. Everett Cole, who spent some time at Tampa, Fla., and other southern places, returned Friday with the mail carriers.

On Monday morning, the 17th, there was quite a procession going out of the harbor. Emil Pischner, with a team of horses and sleighs, took a car for James Gallagher, Jr., out to where the ice was good for driving. Then the car was driven to where the ice was rough on the other shore and loaded again on the sleighs and taken in to Cross Village. Next came Carl Left with horse and sleigh, carrying the mail and boxes of fish. Last came Charlie Martin with horse and jumper, taking Jos. A. Webb, who was injured at the Maple Block Company camp, to Petoskey. The trip from Cross Village to Petoskey was made by car. Other passengers going over Monday were James H. Gallagher, W. J. Gallagher and D. D. Boyle, who were going to Chicago for a few days' visit. James Gallagher, Jr. and Edwin McCann left for Detroit. John Gallagher and two other men from the camp left Monday.

ANOTHER VICTORY OVER RHEUMATISM FOR NEW KONJOLA

Night Watchman Praises New Medicine Which Gave Him Prompt and Complete Relief.

MR. GUSTAVE ZECH.

"I know from my own personal experience what a wonderful medicine Konjola is, and am very glad to recommend it," said Mr. Gustave Zech, 230 Carline St., S. W. Grand Rapids. "I was bothered for years with rheumatism. I am a night watchman, and my work requires me to be on my feet a great deal of the time. This rheumatism in my feet and legs made it very hard for me to do my work, as at times I could hardly get about. I also had stomach and kidney trouble; could not eat without being in my after-ward, and my rest was broken by frequent bladder actions."

"But now I have taken five bottles of Konjola and my aches and pains are all gone. My appetite is better and I can eat almost anything I want. Kidney trouble no longer bothers me. I feel like a different man."

Konjola is sold in Charlevoix at P. J. Fessenden's drug store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

"Mind" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Christian Science churches on Sunday, February 23.

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Give unto the Lord the glory due unto his name; bring an offering, and come before him: worship the Lord in the beauty of holiness" (1 Chron. 16:29).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "The infinite never began nor will it ever end. Mind and its formations can never be annihilated" (p. 245).

CAMP FIRE GROUP HAS BEEN FORMED

Seventh Grade Girls Members; Local Women Back Project.

Under the sponsorship of five Charlevoix ladies, Mesdames, Fessenden, Livingston, Moran, Simmons and Belding, a new Camp Fire group is at the present time being organized. The members of the group are girls from the seventh grade and Miss Burton is to be the leader.

The necessary material for such an organization has been sent for and upon its arrival the group will begin its activities.

The members of this new group are also looking forward to a reward for their labors, in the spring, when they expect to enjoy a camping trip. In this camping trip they intend to take advantage of the opportunities offered them by attending the Y. M. C. A. camp, either at Petoskey or on Torch Lake.

vantage until within three minutes of the final gun. One free toss by Faunce and a pair of gift shots by Booth, gave Harbor a 1-point advantage. Opening a clever stalling game, they pulled Charlevoix's guards down under their own basket and twice broke away unguarded to score easy, open shots. Charlevoix scored but once on a free throw and when the final gun sounded were trailing by 3 points.

Faunce led Harbor's scoring by 10, and Hill had 7. McBride, Booth, Bradley and Johnston played good floor games. For Charlevoix, Novak led his team with 11 points and also played a sensational floor game. The other Charlevoix men fought hard every minute. Loveless of Polkton refereed and did good work.

Charlevoix's second-stringers missed out Harbor's reserves in the preliminary contest. It took an overtime period to settle the issue and the final count was 11 to 10.

The opening contest took on an unsavory aspect when a portion of Harbor's big crowd of fans made themselves obnoxious by their loud-mouthed protestation of the referee's decisions. Cheered and excited by this bunch of "pool room and drug store cowboys," the spirit was absorbed by the players themselves, with a result that the game became a regular rough-and-tumble show.

On several occasions, some of these smart-alecs rushed out onto the floor to protest decisions. The following the referee as he left the floor, shouting threatening remonstrances. Some of Harbor's players added their bit by cursing spectators and the affair climaxed with a near riot when several hundreds, both Harbor and Charlevoix fans rushed into a huddle in one corner of the room where some minor happening seemed to them an excuse for a general mix-up. The whole thing was disgusting and shameful. Many years ago such a scene would not have been unusual, but in this day and age they teach sportsmanship to the younger generation.

The whole thing was regrettable. We believe the referee did his level best and, further, to handle a game under similar circumstances would have been a tough job for any man. We do not believe Harbor's school officials should be held accountable for the scene. They have no control over the team's following. However, one fact is outstanding. No school can have the respect of its colleagues when they lose sight of sportsmanship in their eagerness to win games.

Kipke's cagers wind up their season's schedule here Friday evening against East Jordan. The Jordanites held Harbor Springs to a one-point victory recently and will present a strong combination.

EARL DANFORTH HAS JANUARY HIGH HERD

Report of Charlevoix Co. Dairy Herd Improvement Association.

The high herd for the month of January in the Charlevoix County Dairy Herd Improvement Assn. was owned by Earl Danforth, East Jordan. His herd of 15 grade Holsteins produced an average of 37.4 pounds of butterfat and 1028 pounds milk. Dan Swanson, also of East Jordan, was second with 6 grade Jerseys that averaged 36.1 pounds of butterfat and 979 pounds of milk. The third high herd was owned by Joel Bennett & Son, Boyne City. Their 7 mixed cows averaged 30.5 pounds of butterfat and 818 pounds of milk.

In the two year old class, first and second places went to Earl Danforth. His two grade Holsteins produced, respectively, 45.1 pounds of butterfat and 1327 pounds of milk, and 43.2 pounds of butterfat and 1107 pounds of milk. Dan Swanson holds third place with a record of 42.9 pounds of butterfat and 1101 pounds of milk. 50.4 pounds of butterfat and 1727 pounds of milk was the record produced by the high three-year old, a grade Holstein owned by Earl Danforth. A grade Jersey, owned by Dan Swanson, is entitled to second place with a record of 47.9 pounds of butterfat and 921 pounds of milk. Ecklund Bros. of Charlevoix, took third in this class with a grade Holstein that produced 37.4 pounds of butterfat and 936 pounds of milk.

In the four-year old class, Earl Danforth again ranks first with a grade Holstein that produced 57.0 pounds of butterfat and 1401 pounds of milk. A pure-bred Holstein owned by Breezy Point Farm holds second place with 37.8 pounds of butterfat and 1079 pounds of milk. William Withers of Marion Center, Mich., ranks third with a pure-bred Holstein that produced 36.2 pounds of butterfat and 1758 pounds of milk.

In the mature cow class, Frank Behling of Boyne City, ranks first with a pure-bred Holstein that produced 78.1 pounds of butterfat and 1662 pounds of milk. This record was made on three times a day milking. The second was a grade Jersey owned by Dan Swanson that produced 75.6 pounds of butterfat and 1758 pounds of milk. Joel Bennett & Son rank next with a grade Holstein that made 41.3 pounds of butterfat and 1060 pounds of milk. In the 20 herds tested, there were a total of 214 cows, 35 of which were dry. The average milk production per cow was 518 pounds. The average butterfat production was 19.4 pounds.

COUNTY NORMAL NEWS.

The County Normal Extension Library has been increased steadily since its organization three years ago. A fund has been added to by each graduating normal class for the purpose of enlarging this number of books. Several teachers of the grade building have donated books which have been used, but are not used now because of insufficient numbers. Within the last year books for use up to and including the fifth grade have been put into circulation. Formerly only books up to the second grade were used. The number of volumes now in the library is one hundred fifty-two. Of this number we have 45 volumes in circulation among the rural teachers of the county.

Any rural teacher desiring to use any of these books as supplementary material or otherwise is invited to write in to the County Normal.

AT THE MOVIES.

Greta Garbo Here in "The Kiss." Greta Garbo, whose every picture has been an outstanding success since Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer brought her to this country from Sweden a few years ago, will not disappoint her admirers in "The Kiss," a Continental drama which opens at the Palace Theatre Saturday.

As a French woman, misunderstood by a brutal husband, Miss Garbo gives a characterization which definitely stamps her as a tragedienne of first rank. As usual, Miss Garbo is artist enough not to overplay her role and when in a powerful climax she shoots her jealous husband it is done with a realism that reaches way back into the pit of the theatre without any of the melodrama so often accompanying such a dramatic sequence.

Supporting Miss Garbo in the French drama are Conrad Nagel, as an attorney, Anders Randolph, as the jealous husband, Lew Ayers, a newcomer to the screen, as the lover, and Holmes Herbert as Ayers' father. The members of the supporting cast give finished performances.

FIREMEN'S MASQUERADE DREW BIG CROWD

The annual Firemen's masquerade dance, given Friday evening at the school gymnasium, drew a record crowd. Revelers made merry until well after midnight, enjoying the mixed program of square and round dances played by Bellinger's orchestra.

Cartier, awarded first prize for the best costume to Mr. and Mrs. Charles Tuhy, who portrayed Mr. and Mrs. George Washington. Prizes for the funniest costumes went to Miss Marian Tuhy, representing "Little Bo Peep," and to Lawrence Taylor.

VOTE AT PRIMARY SET NEW RECORD

ARTHUR BERGEON CARRIED THE CITY BY 2 TO 1 VOTE.

Robert E. Rife Chosen Treasurer From Field of Three—Other Contests Were Close.

Charlevoix's spring primary is over—shouting and all. Some of the "village cut-ups" furnished the shouting Monday night and the public certainly took advantage of their citizens' rights by turning out at the polls.

We thought the 769 votes cast at the 1929 primary was quite a record, but Tuesday's high mark of 979 with six ballots out would bring the total to 985—the biggest vote at any election ever held in the city.

Charlevoix voters expressed their confidence in Mayor Arthur Bergeon by re-nominating him for what will be his ninth term by a 2 to 1 majority. Robert E. Rife received the nomination for city treasurer in a field of three candidates by a 4 to 1 majority. The scrap for park commissioner was a close one, Earl A. Young nosing out George Lusk by 24 votes.

In the wards Harry A. Craig defeated Joseph Foster for supervisor of the first. In the second Frank Partridge won over Joseph Moore for supervisor, and F. J. Fessenden defeated Richard Hammet for alderman. In the third, Harry Hooker and Archie Alcock were re-nominated for alderman and supervisor, respectively.

CHARLEVOIX HAS A NEW FUNERAL HOME

Glenn S. See Now Located at Charlevoix Hardware Co.

Funeral parlors were opened Saturday in the Charlevoix Hardware Company store by Glenn S. See, well known local young man who has served the public as funeral director for several years in his former connection with S. M. See & Sons. In this capacity, he is carrying on as did his grandfather and father before him.

A large portion of the south side of the second floor in the Charlevoix Hardware Company store has been partitioned off for this purpose. Handily accessible to the elevator, the preparation room is at the west end. It is well aired, equipped with the latest sanitary devices and painted with white enamel. Connecting to the east is the slumber room. The color combination is ivory and the room is nicely equipped with chairs, lounge, etc. Draperies give a home-like and pleasing appearance. At the extreme east is the display room with its assortment of new caskets.

Mr. See, we believe, needs no introduction to Charlevoix and vicinity and has a great many friends who wish him success in this new venture.

LOCAL QUINTET TO MEET ONAWAY

HARBOR AND BOYNE TANGLE IN OTHER CLASS C TILT.

Drawings for District Tourney Made at Harbor Saturday—Charlevoix Plays Friday Night.

Tournament goers are assured two wonderful games at the district basketball meet which opens Thursday afternoon at Harbor Springs.

In the class C struggle, the draw threw Harbor Springs and Boyne City together for the opening tilt. Boyne took an overtime game from Harbor last Friday night on Harbor's floor, and when these two teams meet again there is going to be "some" game.

Charlevoix and Onaway furnish the other half of the class C card. Considering records for the season, Charlevoix should take Onaway into camp without much trouble. If this hope is correct, the local five will meet the winner of the Harbor Springs-Boyne City game in the final Saturday night. In any event, the class C games should feature the tournament. There is very little to choose between Harbor Springs, Boyne City and Charlevoix after their season's records are looked over carefully.

It is probable that Petoskey and Cheboygan will play on Thursday night. Theirs is the only class B game in the tournament. Both go to Petoskey the following week for the regional meet. With this arrangement, fans are assured of big games on every night of the tourney, in addition to class D tilts.

The drawing was made Saturday afternoon at Harbor Springs and reads as follows: Class B—Petoskey vs. Cheboygan; Class C—Harbor Springs vs. Boyne City, Charlevoix vs. Onaway; Class D—Alanson vs. Wolverine, Mackinaw vs. Pellston, Boyne Falls a bye for the upper bracket, and with Bellaire vs. Ellsworth and Alba vs. Central Lake in the lower bracket.

Referees, Reinke of Rogers City and MacMillan of Petoskey will handle the tournament.

PARENT-TEACHERS' MEETING MARCH 12

Mrs. B. G. Mattson Speaker—Large Attendance Is Urged.

The P. T. A. will be held March 12, at 8:00 o'clock in the gymnasium. Mrs. Mattson is to be the speaker of the meeting, her subject being "Home Work." Mrs. Mattson has spent a great deal of time to prepare this material to present before the parents and teachers.

Parents should be interested in knowing about the amount of home work and the time required to do this work by their boys and girls. If it is understood by everyone, there can be more co-operation. Parents of juniors and seniors of high school are especially urged to be present and to take part in this discussion. There may be some questions you as parents may like to ask at P. T. A.

A short, one-act play is to be presented by students of the high school.

MANISTEE TRIM- MED POLAR BEARS

HANDLED THEM FIRST HOME DEFEAT OF THE SEASON.

Packed House Saw Fast Contest Which Went to Visiting Five by a 28 to 18 Score.

Hopes of the Charlevoix Polar Bears to go through the season undefeated on their home floor went glimmering Tuesday evening with a 28 to 18 defeat at the hands of the strong Manistee Iron Works quintet. Manistee's victory squared the count between the two teams, Charlevoix having won previously on the visitor's home court.

The contest was played before the largest house of the season and was one of the fastest games ever witnessed here.

Charlevoix opened the scoring here the game had been underway but a few seconds, when Iken run in a close one from the tip-off. However, the balance of the period was a nip-and-tuck affair, with little scoring by either side. Charlevoix found the hoop for another goal and Manistee counted a goal and free toss. The quarter ended with Charlevoix leading 4 to 3.

The Polar Bears maintained a small advantage until near the end of the half, when the visitors forged ahead. They were leading 11 to 10 at the half-way mark. Zamrowski, Manistee center, was their ace. He scored 7 points in the first half, while Haidt and Neitzke added the other four. For Charlevoix, Iken tallied 4, Brown and Novak 2 each, Davenport and Kipke 1.

Manistee continued their winning pace in the second half and by the end of the third quarter were out front 21 to 15. Charlevoix made a desperate effort in the third frame, coming within one point of tying the count. They missed the mark, however. In the final frame, Charlevoix's efforts to stop the visitors cost them several points from fouls. Their attempts to hook long shots failed, and by keeping the ball at Charlevoix's end of the court, Manistee kept ahead easily.

Mayne and Watson refereed the game.

Goals: Iken, Chambers, Zamrowski, 3; Davenport, Brown, Haidt, Neitzke, Zimmerman, 2; Novak, 1. Free throws: Davenport, Kipke, Chambers, Haidt, Zamrowski, Neitzke, 1.

Charlevoix and East Jordan junior high school teams played to a tie in an interesting preliminary game. The final count was 10 to 10.

The Polar Bears have won 16 out of 21 games in the past season. They were defeated four times on foreign courts, and Tuesday night's setback was the first home defeat this year and as near as we can remember, about the third in two years. They will close the season March 21st at Petoskey's new gymnasium, meeting the strong Midland independent cagers. These two teams have won a game apiece. Petoskey school officials have kindly offered the use of their new gym and this contest will decide the issue between the two teams.

Thursday, March 20, is the date when Dr. Leahy, the Optometrist, will be at the Hotel Charlevoix. Headache, dizziness, nervousness and all other symptoms of eye-strain corrected. Difficult cases solicited.—Adv. 1012.

STATE TO INVESTIGATE CHUB NETTING

"FULMAR" BEING PREPARED TO MAKE NECESSARY TESTS.

Various Size Net Meshes, Habitate, Conditions, Etc., Will Be Under Observation.

Plans for an extensive investigation of the chub net operations on Lake Michigan to be carried on during the coming summer are announced by the Department of Conservation.

The investigation, which will be in charge of Dr. John Van Oosten, in charge of Great Lakes Fisheries Investigations, will be sponsored by the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries, the Conservation department of Michigan and Wisconsin, and a group of fish net and twine companies.

The U. S. Bureau of Fisheries' vessel the "Fulmar" now stationed here, will be equipped for this work. Three fisheries scientists of the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries' staff stationed at Ann Arbor will assist in the work. The investigation will begin about June 1 and will continue through November.

It is expected that experimental fishing must be continued at least two years to obtain sufficiently adequate data to satisfy all parties involved and to arrive at a permanent settlement of the controversy.

Gangs of experimental chubnets of various sized meshes will be fished simultaneously in five localities in Lake Michigan, one gang in the northern area of the lake, and two gangs along each shore of the lake in the chub waters south of an imaginary line connecting Frankfort, Michigan and Sturgeon Bay, Canal, Wisconsin. The primary purpose of these experiments is to determine which size mesh destroys the greatest number of immature lake trout—a hotly disputed question upon which neither the various states nor the fishermen can agree.

The law provides a 2 3/4 inch mesh for chubs in the state of Michigan, a 2 5/8 inch mesh in the state of Wisconsin and a 2 1/2 inch mesh in the states of Indiana and Illinois, and the fishermen of Wisconsin are attempting to legalize the 2 1/2 inch mesh commonly used in Wisconsin.

Data will also be obtained on the number of sexually immature chubs taken in the different sized meshes and on the question whether it is possible to fish chub nets out of the various parts of Lake Michigan and at all seasons of the year without destroying an undue number of lake trout.

Experimental gill nets will also be fished to ascertain the effect of the method of stringing on the taking of lake trout, to test the fishing ability of nets treated with the new non-preserved recently developed by the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries, and to locate the grounds of the yearling lake trout.

At each setting of the nets, determinations will be made of the depth of the water, the nature of the bottom, the temperatures at various levels, and possibly the chemical condition of the water at several levels in order to obtain some data on the factors involved in the distribution of lake trout and chubs.

Data will be obtained on the food of the lake trout and chubs, on the species of races of lake trout in Lake Michigan and on the life histories of the lake trout and chubs.

phazing their age, growth and size at sexual maturity. Lake trout and whitefish will be tagged to determine the extent of their migratory movements.

At irregular intervals lifts by the fishermen with their bait nets and hooks will be examined to obtain data on the number of immature chubs destroyed by the bait nets, the amount of chubs wasted by the hook fisherman and the number of immature trout destroyed by hooks. The lifts of the commercial chubnets will also be inspected at irregular intervals for the purpose of comparison with the lifts from the experimental nets.

FIFTY HEAR COM- MITTEE REPORTS

A. OF C. WORKERS TELL OF PROGRESS BEING MADE.

Enthusiasm Shown Thursday Night Speaks Well for Success of Summer Activities.

Nearly fifty were present at a very enthusiastic meeting of the Charlevoix Association of Commerce, held Thursday evening at the I. O. O. F. hall.

The Methodist Ladies' Aid society served a delicious banquet dinner and were given a unanimous vote of appreciation by members of the organization. Charles Hamlin, accompanied by Mrs. Ray O'Brien at the piano, Galyard away from home, and to added to the evening's entertainment with two beautiful vocal selections.

Outstanding reports heard were those of the committees on advertising, publicity, winter sports, fish and game, aviation and the report of the corresponding secretary, F. V. Tyler. A report of the committee appointed to handle funds raised at the recent charity carnival, was enthusiastically received. Through the money turned over to them the committee has helped many needy families in Charlevoix and vicinity during the past winter.

The city air port proposition received a decided boost at the meeting. A proposition was brought up for approval which would incorporate the city school property on the south side, together with a couple privately owned parcels of land, in a city-owned air port. The aviation committee was instructed to act on the matter at once and report as soon as definite information was available. Viewed seriously, the proposition is a good one and should bring this important matter to a successful conclusion.

Clarence Wood, reporting for the fish and game committee, revealed that plans are being made to gather rainbow spawn in Boyne river again this spring. Last year the project was quite successful. Over 50,000 rainbows were taken care of at the government hatchery here under the supervision of Supt. Hoofnagle, and were later planted in county streams when they reached the fingerling stage. The cost was very low. With previous knowledge gained, the project should bring better results this year.

Charles Gale, winter sports committee chairman, reported that the carnival cost the small sum of $60, exclusive of prizes donated by local merchants. Considering the success of the venture and the amount of publicity received, those in charge of the event certainly are deserving of a big hand.

KIPKE'S CAGERS TRIM JORDANITES

CLOSE THE SCHEDULED SEASON WITH 21 TO 14 VICTORY.

Won Eight Out of Fourteen Contests Played—Tied for Third in Conference Standing.

Charlevoix's high school cagers closed their season's schedule here Friday evening with a 21 to 14 victory over Coach Cohen's East Jordan five. The game was fast and interesting from start to finish.

The first period was very close and marked by the defensive tactics of both squads. Charlevoix seemed unable to get their attack to function and were out in front 3 to 2 when the period closed. In the second stanza, Novak broke away for 6 points while the Jordanites were making a single goal. Charlevoix led 9 to 4 at the half.

Kipke's cagers put the contest on ice in the third period. Once marked up a pair of goals and a free toss. Supernaw came through with 3 points and Novak 2 for a total of 10. East Jordan scored a pair of free throws and were trailing 19 to 8 when the gun sounded. Something slipped in the final quarter. Novak's goal was Charlevoix's single marker, while East Jordan added 6 to their total. Their come-back was not strong enough to overcome the long lead against them, however.

Novak led the local attack with 10 points. Once scored 6 and Supernaw 5. Lee and Quinn were high for East Jordan with 4 points each. Ferez of Traverse City, refereed.

In a thrilling preliminary, Charlevoix's reserves nosed out East Jordan's second-stringers by a 13 to 8 count. Charlevoix's junior high team was not so fortunate, however, losing at Boyne City by an 8 to 11 score. Charlevoix more than broke even on her season's schedule. Kipke's men capped off the first three games from Ellsworth, Pellston and Cheboygan. They dropped the next four to Boyne City, Harbor Springs and Gaylord away from home, and to Traverse City on the local court. Of the next six games, Charlevoix capped five, losing only to Harbor Springs in a close struggle here. They defeated Mancelona, Boyne City, Petoskey and East Jordan twice.

A sun-up of the season's performance shows Charlevoix won eight out of fourteen games. They scored 259 points to 198 for their opponents, and throughout the season showed themselves to be a better defensive combination than a scoring one. While we have kept no record of games played, we might add right here that the second team has enjoyed a better average season. That Charlevoix has some excellent reserve material coming up for next year is quite apparent and the 1930-31 squad should be strong.

Following is a list of games played and the scores:

Charlevoix vs. Ellsworth 5.
Charlevoix 32, Pellston 18.
Charlevoix 18, Cheboygan 15.
Charlevoix 12, Boyne City 18.
Charlevoix 16, Harbor Springs 24.
Charlevoix 15, Gaylord 19.
Charlevoix 6, Traverse City 24.
Charlevoix 40, Mancelona 4.
Charlevoix 21, Boyne City 13.
Charlevoix 17, Petoskey 13.
Charlevoix 19, East Jordan 10.
Charlevoix 17, Harbor Springs 21.
Charlevoix 21, East Jordan 14.
Harbor Springs has won undisputed leadership of the Tip of Michigan conference of class C schools. They lost one game to Boyne City and head the percentage column by a good margin. Boyne is in second place, Charlevoix and Gaylord are tied for third, Mancelona is fourth and East Jordan occupies the cellar.

Following are the standings:
Harbor Springs.....7 1 .875
Boyne City.....4 2 .667
Charlevoix.....4 4 .500
Gaylord.....2 2 .500
Mancelona.....1 3 .250
East Jordan.....1 7 .125

PLAN CHICAGO-MARQUETTE AIR ROUTE

Foster Airways Corp. Behind Projected New Line.

Marquette will be the northern terminal of a loop air transit service around Lake Michigan from Chicago, using Muskegon as a base of operations, if plans now being made by the Foster Airways Corporation, of Lansing, materializes, it was announced in that city last Wednesday by Major G. E. P. Lasher, technical advisor and one of the promoters of the Foster line, according to Thursday's Mining Journal.

The plan of the Foster Company calls for amphibian plane service. Sikorski amphibians equipped to land on land or water, will be put on the run, Major Lasher said. Each plane represents an investment of $55,000 and the company proposes to operate four between Marquette and Chicago.

The service will begin in the spring, Major Lasher said, with two trips daily on both sides of the lake from Chicago. The first port on the eastern side of the lake will be St. Jo-

THREE YEARS OF TORTURE ENDED BY NEW KONJOLA

When All Else Tried Failed Konjola Proved Again Its Amazing Merit.

MRS. J. S. ROWSEY.

"How I wish I had known of Konjola long ago!" Thousand, who suffered while seeking in vain for relief until they found Konjola, have said that. One of these is Mrs. J. S. Rowsey, 1922 Twelfth street, Detroit. And think how happy she must have been when she paid this tribute to Konjola:

"How I wish I had known of Konjola long ago, for this is the only medicine that ever helped me. Three years ago I was afflicted with stomach and kidney trouble. Pains settled in the small of my back; I had dizzy spells and attacks of nausea. My feet and ankles were badly swollen. Constipation added to my misery, and I was sick all over and completely discouraged.

"The many endorsements of this new and different medicine, Konjola, induced me to try it. To make a long story short, it took Konjola just three weeks to vanquish every last one of my ailments. I can hardly believe that I am the person who was so miserable three weeks ago. Konjola certainly restored me to glorious health when all else I tried had failed."

Konjola is sold in Charlevoix at F. J. Fessenden's drug store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

seph, followed by Holland, Grand Haven, Muskegon, Traverse City, Charlevoix, Petoskey and Mackinaw City.

Across the straits the route will be St. Ignace, Manistique, Munising and the proposed northern terminal at Marquette.

The longest hop will be a 54 minute flight between St. Ignace and Manistique, on which a plane would thus be no more than 27 minutes from either port.—St. Ignace Republican News.

PICKLE COMPANY HAS FOUR MORE STATIONS

Expansion Indicates Success of Local Enterprising Concern.

Since its organization here several years ago, the Charlevoix Pickle & Produce Co., owned and managed by A. J. Stelter, this city, has made phenomenal progress.

Within the past week or more, the company has acquired the Libby, McNeill & Libby pickle stations at East Jordan, Boyne City, Ellsworth and Central Lake, and will operate them in conjunction with former stations. In all, the local concern now has stations at Harbor Springs, Petoskey, Horton Bay, Boyne City, East Jordan, Ellsworth, Central Lake, Atwood and Charlevoix.

In addition to giving Charlevoix a busy enterprise, the Pickle & Produce company is furnishing farmers of the region a market for what is proving a very profitable cash crop. That the company is progressing is indicated by its rapid growth. Mr. Stelter is to be complimented on the success of his enterprise.

WEDDING AND BIRTH ANNIVERSARIES FETED

Mr. and Mrs. George Clark were pleasantly surprised at their home on South Bridge street Tuesday evening when a group of twenty-two friends and relatives came unexpectedly to help them celebrate their 23rd wedding anniversary. The occasion was also Mr. Clark's birthday anniversary and that of a daughter, Mrs. Eva Thiel of Reed City, the latter, however, not being present. A very enjoyable evening was spent in playing cards, music, etc., followed by refreshments. The party broke up at a late hour with the usual good wishes for the future.

He was born at Napanee, Canada, his parents being Benjamin and Mary Gonsolus. With them he came to Michigan at the age of nine years, making their home at Adria, and later in Berrien county.

Funeral services were held Friday afternoon at the home, conducted by Rev. James Leitch, pastor of the Methodist church, of East Jordan, assisted by Rev. J. E. Lockyer of Charlevoix. Interment at Sunset Hill.—East Jordan Herald.

AT THE MOVIES.

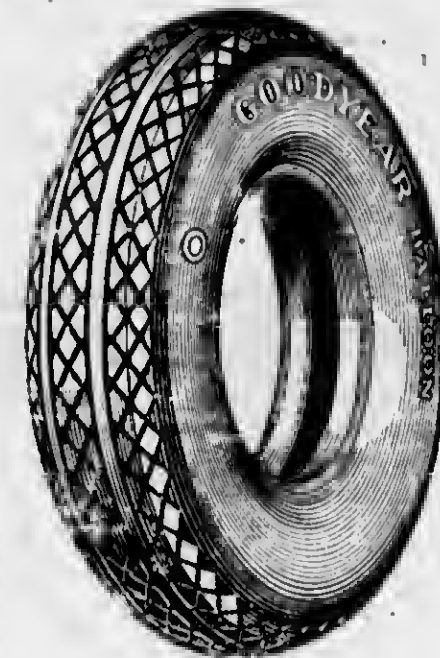

Following are two newspaper comments, one from the Boston Transcript and the other from the Seattle Star, praising the merits of "Woman to Woman," the feature at the Palace Theatre on Saturday and Sunday nights:

Boston Transcript: With the exception of Betty Compton, the cast of "Woman to Woman" is all English, and their voices are a delight. The simple pathos of Miss Compton as the dancer is very moving. George Barraud is likewise touching as the unfortunate soldier. The "wife" of Juliette Compton is a triumph of polished rudeness. The ballet scenes are as much more charming than the usual American ones.

Seattle Star: One of the best things that talking pictures have brought American audiences is Betty Compton, and her work in "Woman to Woman" which opened at the Blue Mouse Theatre on Friday. It is just further proof of the ability of this player. This is a reissue of a story made by the same star in silent days, and it gains immeasurably through the addition of dialogue.

Carolina Druggist Pioneered Modern Way to Treat Colds

Developed Valuable Formula While Seeking Way to Avoid "Dosing"
Children's Colds

While trying to find a treatment for the colds of his own children which would avoid constant "dosing," so disturbing to delicate little stomachs, Lunsford Richardson, a North Carolina pharmacist, developed Vicks VapoRub—the modern external treatment for colds.

Being applied externally, this modern vaporizing ointment cannot disturb the digestion. When rubbed on throat and chest it gives off medicated vapors which are inhaled direct to the inflamed air-passages; and, at the same time, it acts through the skin like a poultice or plaster.

As an enthusiastic mother told another about this better method of treating colds Vicks soon became widely known. In time adults, too, found by actual use that it is equally good for their own colds. Today, the whole trend of medical practice is away from needless "dosing" and the fame of Vicks has spread to over 60 countries.

The ever-increasing demand is shown in the familiar Vicks slogan. First announced when Vicks reached "17 Million Jars Used Yearly," and later raised to "21 Million," the figures have again been changed—as there are now "Over 26 Million Jars Used Yearly."

The fire had caught in the walls, and Louise Greenman and little brother were the only ones present. They telephoned in, and in about an hour's time, the men had gone out, put out the fire and returned.

At the Citizens' caucus called by A. Snitsler, O. R. Morse and Henry Syers, the same officers as last year were nominated as follows: supervisor, Moses King; clerk, Everett Vandenberg; treas., A. C. James; highway com., Charles Loper. Two Union caucus men now occupy office, viz: Robert Watson, supervisor; Richard DeForest, commissioner of highways. The other incumbents are the same as above.

ANALYZE THE ALLOWANCE ON YOUR USED CAR

If a dealer pays you more than the true worth of the car he must make up the difference by extra charges on the new car or re-sell it to some one else at too high a price

PERMANENT value is always better than a temporary bargain in the purchase of an automobile. It pays to look ahead and consider reliability and ultimate up-keep costs, as well as comfort, safety, speed, and beauty of line and color.

Since most automobiles are bought for replacement, the value set on your used car is a factor in almost every purchase. Frequently it is given an importance beyond its true worth.

Used cars have a definite market value and you are justly entitled to an allowance based on that value. It is not fair that you receive less. It is not to your best interests to receive more.

If a dealer pays you more than the true worth of the car he must either re-sell it to some one else at too high a price or make up the difference on the new car. This he cannot do unless he is allowed an excessive profit on the car or on financing, extra equipment and other charges. In either case, you pay the bill, for no way has yet been found to give something for nothing. The money must come from somewhere.

You may not get the largest used-car allowance from the Ford dealer, but that very fact should give you confidence that you are receiving full value in the new car. Ford charges are not marked up or increased to cover a high trade-in allowance on your old car.

Because there is no waste, extravagance or undue profit in manufacturing, distribution or selling, every dollar you pay for a Ford brings a full dollar in return. In lower first cost, in reliability and long life, in the low cost of operation, service and replacement parts, the Ford will save you much more than the seeming difference in trade allowance.

FURTHERMORE, at least $75 extra value is given to you in the new Ford in the Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield, the Rustless Steel, the five steel-spoke wheels, and the four Hondaille hydraulic double-acting shock absorbers. The unusually large number of ball and roller bearings, and the extensive use of fine steel forgings instead of castings or stampings, are other features that show the extra quality built into the Ford car.

Flint, Michigan

Consider a few of the basic facts that make the new Chevrolet Six such a thoroughly sound investment.

It offers a great six-cylinder valve-in-head engine, with its capacity increased to 50 horsepower... assuring the smooth, quiet, resilient performance which is so essential in a modern automobile.

It offers the all-weather braking efficiency of internal-expanding, completely enclosed 4-wheel brakes—big, powerful, quiet and easy to apply. It offers the modern riding comfort of four long semi-elliptic, chrome-vanadium steel springs—under the cushioned control of Lovejoy hydraulic shock absorbers.

It offers the greater beauty, comfort and safety of bodies by Fisher—built of selected hardwood and steel... and providing thousands upon thousands of miles of quiet, care-free service.

In fact, every important engine advancement has been incorporated in the new Chevrolet Six. With all these important advancements—coupled with greatly reduced prices for the entire Chevrolet line—it is only logical that thousands are saying every day—"The New Chevrolet Six is a wise motor car investment!"

AGRICULTURAL NOTES

By B. C. Mellencamp

Farm Account Project Starts on March First.

Many Charlevoix county farmers have already enrolled in the Farm Account project starting on March 1st. This project furnishes a method by which a farmer may keep a financial record of his business with the least expense of time and effort. It is a very simple farm account book and yet informs you very accurately the results of your year's work and the relative efficiency of each part of the farm business.

Please inform County Agent Mellencamp at once if interested so that an inventory sheet can be sent you before the Beginners' school is held.

This school will be held in the basement of the high school gymnasium in Boyne City on Thursday, March 13, beginning promptly at 10:00 a. m. standard time and will continue until around 3:00 o'clock p. m. H. A. Berg, farm management specialist of M. S. C., will be present to fully explain the details and to assist each farmer in entering the items in the book. The cost of the book is only twenty cents, and will be given you at this school. While it may be some distance from your farm to Boyne City, this seems to be the most central place to meet for the entire county.

One day spent in going through the book will give you a clean understanding and save trouble later on, so please keep this date in mind.

Closing Out Overcoat Stock. Closing out all Overcoats in stock. $15.00, $17.50 and $22.50 value overcoats for $10.00 and $17.50. P. E. Cartier, Clothier and Cleaner.—Adv.

BOYNE CITY AUTO
DEALER IS JAILED

Pontiac Warrant for False Pretense, and Embezzlement Charged.

John Olson, Boyne City automobile dealer, was bound over to circuit court Monday on a charge of embezzlement, following a hearing in justice court. His bond of $1,000 was approved Wednesday morning, but he is being held in jail on another warrant from Pontiac, charging false pretense.

It is understood Olson will be released after the second charge is settled and negotiations are now underway to that end. The charge resulted when Olson stopped payment on a check he had given to settle a repair bill with a Pontiac garage, after taking the car away.

John Nordrum was the complainant on the embezzlement count. It is alleged he purchased a car from Olson, paying part down and giving his note for the rest. On delivery, Nordrum gave Olson the balance with the understanding he would take up the note, which Olson did not do.

TWO CARLOADS WHITE-FISH FRY SHIPPED

Unusual Warm February Weather Started Early Hatch.

Setting a record for early planting, eight million whitefish fry were taken from the government hatchery here during the past week. The shipment was made in two carload lots, one to Manistique and the other to Frankfort.

Unusually warm weather has brought the water down to a hatching temperature, and thus has hastened the maturity of eggs. A cold snap at the present time has stopped further hatching for the time being, but another upward tilt of the thermometer will start the process again.

The condition is an unusual one. Good buttermilk, 5c quart, 15c a gallon at Northern Creamery plant. Adv. 461f.

FISHERS RESCUED FROM SKILAGALEE

Charlevoix Coast Guards Intercept Them Trying to Skirt Open Water

With provisions for only one more day, Leonard Loomis and Otto Christman, Harbor Springs fishermen marooned on Lake Michigan ice floes since Tuesday in their fish hut near Skilagalee lighthouse were brought ashore last Thursday by Charlevoix Coast Guards under Capt. Smith.

Fearing rescue many days distant, the two men left their safe haven in an attempt to circle the open water between the lighthouse and mainland. Their attempts were frustrated, however, by broken ice fields, and they were returning to the fish shanty when the coast guards found them.

For some accountable reason, the lighthouse was not open and the emergency supplies kept there not accessible. Their meager supply of food, was nearly exhausted. The men had experienced many hardships when they broke through thin ice Thursday and also Tuesday when they returned to Skilagalee after open water blocked their attempts to reach shore.

Thursday's rescue was made in a 20-foot open power boat. The craft had to be dragged across a strip of ice to reach open water in the bay off Charlevoix. The run of 35 miles was made safely and guardsmen returned here late in the afternoon after landing the fishermen at Middle Village.

Capt. Smith said ice fields in Lake Michigan were badly broken up, however, Beaver Island mail carriers have resumed their trips after a week's lay-off. The northern route, touching Temperance Point, Waugoshance and Hog Island is being used. Large strips of open water block the southern route and the present one is 50 miles distance.

JERRY H. SAUNDERS DIED LATE TUESDAY

Death Followed Long Illness—Resident Here Since Boyhood.

J. H. Saunders, age 57 years, died late Tuesday at his home on Antrim street, following an illness of many months. He underwent three major operations at Ann Arbor hospital, where he had been taken for treatment, but the end came three weeks following his return.

Deceased was born near Chatham, Ontario, July 5, 1871. He came to Charlevoix county with his parents when eight years old, and had spent the remainder of his life in this vicinity, residing up until two years ago on a farm west of Ironton.

On January 15, 1902, Mr. Saunders was married to Miss Louise Johnston. To this union were born three sons: Mark and Oakley of Ironton, and Milford of Detroit, all of whom, together with the widow, survive. Other relatives are a grand-daughter, Thelma Saunders; three sisters, Mrs. Hester, Campbell, Washington, D. C.; Mrs. Martha Denno, Flat Rock, Michigan; Mrs. Lina Brown, Traverse City; also a brother, James H. Saunders, who resides in California.

Mr. Saunders was one of the progressive and successful farmers of the Charlevoix district and has a large following of friends.

FORMER LOCAL GIRL MAKING FINE RECORD

Letter to Local Party Lets Helen Smith's Success "Out of Bag."

From a recent letter written by Lee Smith, former local assistant postmaster now residing at Clearwater, Fla., to George W. Priest of this city, we find some interesting information regarding the former's daughter, Miss Helen Smith.

Helen graduates from high school this year. She is the class president, captain of the basketball team, president of the Senior Y. W. C. A., president of the Presbyterian Young People's association and editor of the high school paper. She is carrying five subjects, one more than necessary, and all hard ones: physiology, trigonometry, journalism, English and third year Latin. And, in spite of all this, she is an all-A student.

Lee tries to excuse himself for bragging. He says: "I am a proud Dad." Well, who in the world wouldn't be. Helen has a lot of friends here who will be glad to hear of her success. It does us all good to see a former Charlevoixian make good any place they go, and the Courier wants to join others in extending their congratulations.

HARBOR S. WON DISTRICT TITLE

NOSED OUT CHARLEVOIX IN A THRILLING FINAL.

Goal in Last 55 Seconds Won the Game—Central Lake Beat Pellston in Class D Race.

Harbor Springs high school basketball, 1929 state Class C champions and this year's leaders in the Tip of Michigan conference, gave a wonderful performance last Saturday evening on their home floor to win the district class C title.

Trailing at the half and again at the three-quarter mark, Harbor Springs came through in the final moments to win. With less than two minutes to go, McBride sunk a free throw which cut Charlevoix's lead to one point, and then, with 55 seconds more to play, Faunce dropped in the goal that won the game 15 to 14. It was a heart-breaker for Charlevoix to lose after they had led almost from the opening of the whistle.

The first half was a great defensive battle, featured by the guarding of Novak and his team-mates for Charlevoix, and of Booth and Bradley for Harbor. The half ended with Charlevoix leading 7 to 2.

The teams came back strongly and Charlevoix mounted her total up to 5 when Ance hooked a basket. A minute later McCall, getting his second basket of the evening, ran the count to 7 to 2. Harbor took time out and then came back strong. Hill hooked a basket and McBride a free throw, bringing the score 7 to 5. A minute later McBride tied the score 7 to 7 after taking a pass from Bradley. Novak put his team in the lead with a free throw 8 to 7 and soon broke through for a field basket.

Harbor after some pretty passing took the lead with deuces by McBride and Hill. With two minutes to go, Ance hooked a basket, tying the score at 12 all. He also was fouled when he made his basket and sank both free ones. Score: Charlevoix 14, Harbor 12. A minute and a half remained. Both teams played hard and fast. The crowd was on its feet. McBride was given a free chance which he made good.

With 55 seconds to go Booth took Bradley's tip off at center, passed to Hill, Hill to McBride and McBride to Faunce in the corner of the court from where Faunce shot a pretty goal, winning the game. A half minute remained but Bradley tipped the ball to Hill and Hill passed back to Booth just as the gong sounded. The game ended 15 to 14 Harbor's favor.

There were no individual stars, every man on both teams playing hard and fast.

Central Lake Wins.

The Class D title game was fast and hard fought. Pellston took an early lead and looked like winners. The half ended 10 to 8 favor Pellston. Central Lake came back and led by Stevens who scored 12 points, forged ahead. The passing game of Central Lake in this half was brilliant and the defensive work of Young was outstanding. Lewis played a whirlwind floor game. Stoel's work also stood out. Anderson and Flood were Pellston's stars. Flood scored 9 points.

Onaway, 39 to 6. Harbor Springs upset Boyne City in a hard struggle by a 25 to 21 count.

The regional tournament opens this week Thursday at Petoskey. Charlevoix will not be there, through their loss at Harbor, but the other teams are as follows:

The list includes five Class B teams: Traverse City, regional title holders of last year; Manistee, Alpena, Cheboygan and Petoskey. Four in Class C are: Harbor Springs, state champions in 1929; East Jordan, winners at the Traverse City district meet; Gruyling, which won its own tournament, and Custer, winner at the Manistee district tournament. The eight in Class D are: Central Lake and Pellston, winner and runner-up at Harbor Springs; McBain, from the Crayling section; Copemish and Onkema, from the Manistee district, and St. Francis Catholic high at Traverse City. Honor and Northport, all of which played in the Traverse City district.

Distribution of Class C teams to the several district tournaments was not all that could be asked for. Three of the strongest aggregations in Northern Michigan were thrown together at Harbor Springs, while the weakest teams in the Tip of Michigan conference won their games at other tournaments. This method cannot help but detract interest from the (Continued on page 8.)

LOOK FORWARD TO SMELT RUN

SPORTSMEN EXPECT EVENT TO START ABOUT MARCH 21.

Plan to Extend Electric Lights to Stover Creek and Install Control Gate at Mouth.

A blinding flash as the lights go on! The still night air resounds with lusty shouts of an army of boot-clad sportsmen as they tear down the banks of the stream after several hours of patient waiting. In they go with a splash! The excitement has started—the smelt run is on!

Charlevoix sportsmen are anxiously awaiting this occasion. Last spring, on March 26th, smelt were discovered spawning in Stover creek, a small stream just outside the south city limits of Charlevoix. Unfortunately the run was practically over before being found and the sport lasted but two or three days.

Throughout the past winter smelt have been caught with hook and line in Lake Charlevoix in large numbers. Stomachs of lake trout caught have been examined, revealing that smelt make up a large portion of their diet. In view of these facts, it is believed the run in local waters will be a large one this spring. And, because of the unusually early break-up of winter, the consensus of opinion is that the run will be earlier than last year, so plans are being made now to be ready for the big event.

Electric lights will be extended from the city power line down the bank of the stream. It is also planned to construct a control gate at the creek mouth to hold the smelt in the stream after they have reached the spawning ground. Dipping will probably be regulated under the supervision of conservation department officers.

Word will be flashed to the entire state when the run starts and Charlevoix will extend an invitation to all sportsmen to join in the fun.

PETOSKEY TO VOTE ADVERTISING FUND

The Petoskey voters will have something besides candidates for office to be voted for on election day. They have two propositions. One is to raise $5,000 for advertising and carrying on recreational and educational projects for the coming year, and the other is to decide what kind of time the city should operate under.

BOYS WIN DECLAMATORY FIRST HONORS

Miss Gwendolyn Miller Adjudged Best in Oratorical Contest.

(From High School Notes)

The winning places in the declamatory contest held last Friday in the high school assembly all went to boys. David Dick received first place, Stanley Heise second place and Dudley Mattson third place. All of the entries were well chosen and were delivered in such a style as deserves praise. We have in our school much promise of prominent public speakers, not only among the boys, but in the girls also.

In the oratorical contest Gwendolyn Miller was awarded first place after due consideration of the judges. All of the orators gave their orations with such sincere and vehement style as secured the deep interest of their audience.

Ladies of the South Side Circle of the Congregational church, will have a Mother and Daughter banquet on March 27.—Adv. 10-12.

CITY WILL ADD ELECTRIC UNIT

INCREASED USE OF POWER HAS MADE MOVE NECESSARY.

Either Steam Unit or Crude Oil Engine Will Be Installed—Action is Very Timely.

An announcement of interest and vital importance to Charlevoix is forthcoming from the regular meeting of the city council held Monday evening.

At that time a resolution was adopted empowering Mayor Arthur Hergon to enter negotiations at once for the purchase of a new 400 k. w. electric unit to be added to the municipal plant here. In the discussion prior to the adoption of the resolution some interesting data was presented. Records revealed that electric light receipts had increased from approximately $20,000 nine years ago to $55,000 for the present year, indicating the increased use of electric current over that period of time.

It will be remembered that last summer the city-owned steam plant in Charlevoix and the water power plant at Bellaire were barely able to carry the peak load of the resort season. Since that time, low water at Bellaire has cut down the current produced to a point where it has been necessary to operate the steam plant during the past winter and up to the present time. With such conditions existing, it would have been impossible for both plants to furnish enough current for the 1930 summer season. Charlevoix surely cannot afford to take any chances, and for this reason, the action of the council is even more commendable.

It is understood that it will not be necessary to bond for the improvement, there being sufficient money in the replacement fund at the present time, which, together with payments to be made to that fund, to carry the project.

It is not known at the present time whether the new unit will be steam or a crude oil engine. Dan Soule, superintendent of the light and water departments, is now in the southern part of the state inspecting other plants to determine what action this city will take.

STATE "Y" SECRETARY HEARD HERE

Spoke Before High School Assembly Last Thursday.

(From High School Notes)

Last Thursday we had a rather unusual treat when Mr. Freeman, state secretary of the Y. M. C. A., spoke to the high school. As Mr. Freeman's work is with boys and young men, he understands their problems and his talk was both entertaining and full of sound advice.

He stressed the point that we should start working now for what we wish to become in the future. He says that in Detroit he meets hundreds of boys who say the reason they can't get jobs—the reason that they didn't lay the proper foundation.

He told us that it was important to keep one's objective in view. That this leads to overcoming the difficulties that lie in one's path.

Dr. Leahy, the Optometrist, will be at the Hotel Charlevoix, Thursday, March 20th, one day only. Glasses guaranteed to fit.—Adv. 10-12.

POLAR BEARS HAND MANCELONA DEFEAT

Close Season at Petoskey Against Midland Next Friday.

Charlevoix Polar Bears added another victory to their string Tuesday evening by defeating Mancelona Independents 37 to 21 on the home court.

The contest was a one-sided affair until the final quarter, during which period the Polar Bears slackened their defense and allowed Mancelona to break through for quite a string of points. Mayne's close refereeing slowed up the game in the early periods, but the last quarter saw plenty of action.

Charlevoix led 7 to 0 at the quarter, 15 to 5 at the half and 25 to 8 at the close of the period. Mancelona snared 13 points in the fourth period to Charlevoix's 12.

Davenport marked up 9 points for the Polar Bears, Cooper 8, Ikens and Brown 6 each, Novak 5 and Kipke 1. In the preliminary game, the Polar Cubs outplayed the senior class team to win 22 to 12.

The Polar Bears and Midland Independents play on Petoskey's court next Friday evening, March 21st, in the final game of the season. Both have won a game on their own floor and this contest will decide the issue between them.

NEXT LYCEUM NUMBER IS MARCH 19

EXCELLENT PROGRAM OF MUSIC IS PROMISED.

Plantation Singers Bring Varied Program of Negro Songs—Are Highly Recommended.

A notable entertainment attraction, the Jackson Plantation Singers, widely known negro melodists, will be heard here March 19, at the gymnasium, under the auspices of the Parent-Teachers' association.

This company is composed of four singers who present negro music at its best. Each member of the company is possessed of a melodious voice, and beautiful harmonies are achieved.

A portion of the program is devoted to the presentation of an old-time cotton plantation scene, and a colorful picture is given of the darkies singing at their work. Every variety of negro music is given—jubilee chants, plantation melodies and spirituals.

The following comment from the president of the Parent-Teachers' association Center School, Kansas City, Mo., is typical of the impression made by this company wherever it has appeared:

"Everyone who attended the concert given by the Jackson Plantation Singers under the auspices of Center School Parent-Teachers' association was delighted. The selections rendered by the singers were the kind that appeal to the hearts of the audience. The singers entered into the spirit of the evening and were generous with encores."

Combination Hearse and Ambulance is Best in the North.

Ernest D. Shafer, who recently took over the management of the S. M. See & Sons store in this city, returned early Monday morning from Piqua, Ohio, with a new combination funeral car and ambulance for his firm.

The equipment is the last word of perfection. The machine is finished in Buckingham black. All exterior bright parts are chromium plated over copper, including name plates on the doors.

Interior of the driver's compartment is done in blue dualtone leather, while the interior of the casket or ambulance compartment is in blue mohair, with tapestries and rug to match. The flower tray is of solid walnut.

Extra accessories for ambulance use are removable tenant seats and fumeless Kysor heater to both compartments, the latter feature giving the equipment the distinction of being the only heated ambulance north of Traverse City.

WEIGHT TAX SUIT HITS THIS COUNTY

MEANS HEAVY LOSS IF WAYNE WINS IN COURT.

Fourteen Counties Would Gain and Rest Would Lose—Charlevoix Loss $7,581 Yearly.

Charlevoix county will lose $7,581 from the automobile license fund if Wayne county wins its suit to place its own interpretation on the state auto tax law. Wayne has taken the case to the state supreme court and stands to gain $296,416 at the expense of the smaller counties. Other nearby counties would lose even more than Charlevoix under such a deal.

Fourteen industrial counties will profit by $434,110 annually at the expense of the remainder of the state if the supreme court upholds the Wayne county interpretation of the gasoline tax act, Frank D. Fitzgerald, business manager of the highway department, revealed in a report, comparing fund distribution on the basis of 1929 collections.

The case, in which Wayne demands $679,062 because, it is claimed, $6,000,000 of the weight tax should have been wholly divided according to auto registrations instead of one-eighth of it being apportioned equally, as was done, is to be argued this week before the court.

Following are the fourteen counties and how they will benefit should Wayne's suit be successful:

Berrien	4,325
Calhoun	5,392
Ceneseec	23,919
Ingham	12,060
Jackson	6,179
Kalamazoo	6,665
Kent	31,355
Macomb	3,017
Muskegon	3,113
Oakland	27,685
Saginaw	9,310
St. Clair	756
Washtenaw	3,918
Wayne	296,416

Total $434,110.

Smaller counties will lose sums in proportion to their lack of motor car registration as compared with the 14 counties which will receive the gain.

Several counties will be only slightly affected should the suit be successful, Bay losing but $321 and Lenawee having only $396 cut from the apportionment according to the highway department plan.

On the other hand, Otsego county will have its apportionment almost exactly cut in half if Wayne is successful. That county was paid $18,722 under the highway department plan of allotment but would receive only $9,879 under the Wayne interpretation, a loss of $8,843 annually.

Montmorency county, which received but $20,237 under the highway department's interpretation of the act, will receive but $11,515 if Wayne is successful, taking a loss of $8,722.

Following are the losses suffered by some of the other counties:

Alcona	$6,450;	Alpena	$6,847;
Benzie	$8,052;	Cheboygan	$7,827;
Emmet	$6,917;	Grand Traverse	$6,273;
Iscos	$8,085;	Isabella	$6,257;
Lapeer	$5,058;	Leelanau	$8,070;

CREDIT EXCHANGE ISSUES BULLETIN

Newly Established Organization is Now Functioning.

The Charlevoix County Credit Exchange, which just recently opened their offices in this city, issued their first bulletin the latter part of last week.

The bulletin lists delinquents, changes of address, addresses wanted, suits pending and other information of value to the members of the Exchange.

The new organization has promise of being valuable to Charlevoix business interests, and will no doubt quite a long way in adjusting the local credit situation.

Over 60 Countries Now Treat Colds Without "Dosing"

Modern Vaporizing Ointment Fast Replacing Old-Time Internal Remedies

A generation ago, it was the custom to give large doses of internal medicines for colds and almost every human ailment. Then, a North Carolina pharmacist originated Vicks VapoRub, the modern method of treating colds without "dosing." Today, the whole trend of medical practice is away from needless "dosing."

As more and more people adopted this modern external treatment, the fame of Vicks spread until today it is the standby for colds—adults as well as children's—in over 60 countries.

This ever-increasing demand is shown in the figures of the familiar Vicks slogan. Made famous when Vicks reached "17 Million Jars Used Yearly," and later raised to "21 Million," these figures, too, have been outgrown, as there are now over 24 Million Jars Used Yearly, in the United States alone.

KONJOLA PUT SAGINAW MAN BACK TO WORK

Victim of Several Ills He Thought He Never Would See Another Well Day.

MR. JOHN GUTHRIE.

Konjola, master medicine for the stomach, liver, kidneys, and bowels, and for rheumatism, neuritis and nervousness, is not designed to give mere temporary relief. Its goal is new and glorious health. Read the words of Mr. John Guthrie, 133 South Oakley street, Saginaw:

"Konjola put me back to work. I had stomach trouble so bad that many a time on my way to work I had to sit down until the attack of pain passed. My kidneys gave me trouble, too, and I was bothered with night risings. Then neuritis developed in my shoulder, and left arm. Finally I had to give up work altogether."

"I read an endorsement of Konjola by a man I knew, and I talked with him about this new medicine. He urged me to try it. He said Konjola was what I needed. Well, it certainly was just that, for after the third bottle I was able to go back to work. I took in all eight bottles, and am feeling fine in every way, and a different man in disposition and health."

Konjola is sold in Charlevoix at F. J. Fessenden's drug store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

CHRYSLER CUTS PLYMOUTH CARS

Will Widen Retail Outlets to Dealers in All Divisions.

New low prices on the Plymouth cars, which represent reductions of $65 to $70 on all body styles, were announced by Chrysler Motors last week. The prices are made possible by a new merchandising and distribution plan, officials say. The plan will make available Plymouth sales and service facilities at Chrysler, Dodge and De Soto distributor and dealerships throughout the United States and Canada. There are 10,000 of them.

A statement by Walter P. Chrysler follows in part:
"Beginning next Monday, the Chrysler Corporation will inaugurate a new sales policy under which the company will compete in the lowest price automobile market."

"Of the 19,000,000 passenger cars now licensed in the United States, we estimate that approximately 9,500,000 were purchased as either new or used cars at a price of less than $500 or $600. Although half the cars in use were purchased above that price class and in the price class in which Chrysler, Dodge and De Soto cars occupy a place, it is obvious that buyers of limited purchasing power comprise over half the market for all automobiles. Progressive policy calls for responding to this demand in the low price range."

"The purpose of the reduction in Plymouth prices is two-fold:
"1—To meet the public demand for quality automobiles in the low price field."

"2—To enable all dealers selling Dodge, De Soto and Chrysler products to offer to their customers a complete line of cars, including those within the lowest price range."

"There are 10,000 dealers in the Chrysler Motors group, each with individual organizations, selling respectively De Soto, Chrysler and Dodge cars. Henceforth, all such dealers will not only carry their present lines, but will, in addition, market Plymouth cars."

"Plymouth cars have heretofore only been distributed through a separate selling organization."

"Under the new plan anyone in the market for an automobile becomes a potential customer for a Chrysler product. It is expected therefore, that the new plan will contribute toward stabilizing the business of our dealer organizations, enabling them to provide for customers desiring not only the higher price cars, but those within the low price range."

Benjamin Brown is Northern Michigan distributor of Chrysler automobiles.

They Couldn't Know

BACK IN 1818 the greatest newspaper of the day declared that the world had reached the limit of human expansion. It even went further, saying that there weren't enough supplies in the world to support further growth of population.

The mind of 1818 couldn't conceive of the miracles that human ingenuity would perform during the twentieth century. It couldn't imagine the wonders and modern manufacturing genius. It was ignorant of transportation as we know it, or the progressive sales methods of today. It could not see the vital part that would be played by advertising.

Even to day there are some who fail to realize what an important factor advertising has become. Advertising is as much a part of today's life as electricity, antiseptic surgery or automobiles. It keeps us up to date on the many things we need in order to live profitable, happy and useful lives. It presents for our approval articles of all kinds and for all purposes. The requirements of each member of the family are met by advertised offers of good merchandise of proved value.

The advertisements save time, money and effort for those who read them and follow their guidance. They are practical guarantees of satisfaction.

Don't lay aside this paper without reading the advertisements.

The Crippled Lady Of Peribonka

The human element of this story is enriched by a study in heritages—genetic, noble blood of two races united. In one case, primitive and savage, but none the less royal; in the other, civilized and cultured to the highest degree. This phase is based on the historical union, some century and a half ago, between the Indian maiden known as Molly Brant, sister of Thayendanegea, that greatest of Mohawk chiefs, and Sir William Johnson, representative of King George III in the colonies.

Down through the years to a descendant, to a Molly Brant of the present time, married to a Croesus and living in a palace in the city of New York. Through her son, a throw-back to type, the blood of the original Molly Brant comes into its own. This blending of the primitive and the modern is one of the greatest fascinations of the story. It is given an appropriate setting—in a village far back in Quebec where the eighteenth century touches elbows with the twentieth. The American melting pot is symbolized in the Crippled Lady herself.

The late James Oliver Curwood was a writer of adventure stories who had a most wonderful faculty for catching the spirit and translating the romance of a chosen locality. It was singularly fortunate that his affections centered about the north country, about the habitant sections of Quebec and those farther reaches of forests and snows toward the Arctic.

No one has written more or better stories about the regions he loved than Curwood. New editions of his works make their appearance with even greater regularity than did new novels from his pen during life. One of his best books was "The Crippled Lady of Peribonka," a tale that will be read and read again for many years.

CHAPTER I

This story is going to start like a lesson in geography. This is because it is largely a chronicle of real events in human lives. History, whether of things or people, rests upon the basic necessity of possessing certain aspects of situation which we encompass within the terms of latitude and longitude. The following narrative would quite profoundly miss its real drama if it were to ignore the points of the compass and the manner in which Fate played with them to bring about an unusual combination of ends.

We will begin with Peribonka, Peribonka is a quiet little French-Canadian village which nestles on the shore of the glorious Peribonka river, four miles above Lac St. Jean, in the province of Quebec. It is made up almost entirely of a single row of thirty or forty houses, all of which face the river. Should one adventure a little farther into the wilderness after having made the wonderful Saguenay trip up from Quebec to the Ile du Roy or Chicoutimi and come to know Peribonka for himself, he will understand why the houses are situated with no neighbors or obstructions between them and the river. For the river is a living, breathing, cool-scented thing to the French-speaking people of the place, about whose drowsy lives there still remains, like a sweet-scented veil of old lavender lace, the picturesque simplicity of their great-grandfathers of a hundred and fifty years ago.

In contrast to the roaring, passionate Mistassini, fifteen miles away, the Peribonka is peculiarly like the men and women and children who inhabit a few acres of its shores. It has, I believe, given to them much of their character, for of all the people in the habitant country those of Peribonka are the gentlest and most lovable. Even in the floodlines of spring it is not an angry or menacing river, and in winter it is so gently smooth and well frozen that the habitant farmers use it for their horse-and-carriage races, or as a trail by which to come to town. In spite of its great size and the vast forces behind it, the kindness and gentleness of its nature must have made its people what they are. The men are truthful, their morals are right, they believe in God as well as in spirits, they are clean and courteous and hospitable. The women are bright-eyed, clear-skinned, unruined, unadorned, pretty. These people are always looking toward the river, in the evening when they go to bed, in the morning when they get up. They have built their picturesque little church facing it, and the good Father sleeps with his bedroom window opening upon it. The local cemetery occupies an acre of hallowed ground within a hundred feet of the water's edge. A venerable monastery is built at the mouth of it.

Until quite recently the two happiest people in the village of Peribonka were Maria Chupdelaine and her husband Samuel. They are still happy, although Samuel is a bit overcast at present because of a financial loss which has come to him. For years Samuel has run his little store and Martha her kitchen, in which she prepares delectable meals for the few transients who come their way, and until this recent time to which I have referred, there is good reason to believe she was the happiest woman in her little world.

Now there is another. They call her the Crippled Lady. She is often seen sitting on the wide veranda of a quaint little home in a garden of flowers just this side of the church. There is a road which completely encircles Lac St. Jean, connecting the villages and farms in its narrow rim of civilization, and during the tourist season occasional automobiles pass through Peribonka. Their occupants always stare at the Crippled Lady if she happens to be on her porch. She is a vision of loveliness which one cannot easily forget. Women talk about her, and men silently bear away a picture of her in their hearts. Her beauty, if one has only a moment's contemplation of it, strikes almost with a shock. It is Slavic—thick, dark, shining hair drawn smoothly back, a face clearly white as a nun's, unforgettable eyes, a slim, beautiful figure in a big chair—and something else. It is that other thing which photographs her so vividly and so permanently upon one's consciousness. Perhaps it is some time before one realizes that what he has seen is not beauty alone but happiness. The Crippled Lady, who cannot walk, who cannot stand alone, is happy, and she covets nothing which God has not already given her. Her voice tells you that.

The people of Peribonka love this charming foreigner, who has made her home among them. The women are not jealous of her. She makes the significance of purity and beauty nearer and more apprehensible for the men. The church prayed for her when she was very sick. She is of all religions, just loving God, so that even the sternest of the monks in their gray white robes down near the lake speak and think of her tenderly. The children worship her, and the big, wide porch of her home has become a shrine for them. In Peribonka youth still continues to grow up into manhood and womanhood believing with great faith in the visible existence of spirits, both good and bad, and in the varied and frequent manifestations of a divine interest and watchfulness. So the children have come to believe that it was a miracle which sent the Crippled Lady through the doors of death and then brought her safely back again, that she might remain with them always. Even the mothers and fathers believe this, just as surely as they believe it is a sin to steal from one's neighbor or speak falsehood against him. "Thus works the hand of God," the good Father has said. So the church believes it, too.

They all know her story. And that story is an epic which will live for a long time in the country about Lac St. Jean. I doubt if it will die until the so-called progress of industrially active man thrusts up its grimy hand and hounds it, along with the quaintness and beauty and satisfying nearness to God of living up there.

It is this story I have set out to tell, with a bit of geography to begin with—who the Crippled Lady is and why she is there, how she bravely tried to give up her life for another woman's husband, and why she lives today so happily in Peribonka.

CHAPTER II

It is unusual that an Indian should be born in one of the wealthiest families in New York.

Yet it happened. A traveler to the city of Brantford, Ont., will find within a few miles of the town a little church built for the Indians by King George the Third, and close about it an old cemetery, in which rests the dust of the last of the great Iroquois warriors and chiefs. In a tomb built of stone, which is green with age and moss, lies Thayendanegea, greatest of all the Mohawks, and more commonly known as Joseph Brant. Readers of the romance, as well as the fact of history, may recall the day when Sir William Johnson, the king's right arm in the colonies, first saw Thayendanegea's sister. He was attending a muster of his county militia when an officer came galloping by with a beautiful Indian girl of sixteen riding laughing, behind him. Sir William, whose wife had recently died, caught a vision of lovely dark eyes and of flowing black hair streaming in a cloud behind a form of rare symmetry and grace, and in that moment the heart of the lonely and susceptible widower was smitten so deeply that evening found Molly Brant in Johnson's castle, where she remained, thenceforth its mistress and the idol of its proprietor.

Geography and history skip a hundred and thirty-five years after this event until they arrive at the birth of the Indian boy on Fifth avenue. When James Kirke married Molly Craddock neither thought very much about the strain of Indian blood in Molly's veins, except that Molly was always secretly proud of it. Kirke was not the kind of man to boast of ancestors, or even to think about them, for he had one consuming ambition from the beginning, and that was to pyramid his inherited millions into ever-increasing financial power. He became so completely absorbed in this task that after a few years Molly was left very largely to whatever dreams she may have had of the picturesque and romantic past, and to an absorbing love for her young son, Paul. She told him many of the pretty stories and some of the tragic ones which deeds had written in the lives of their ancestors, and twice she went with him to the ancient burial place near Brantford and sat beside the tomb of Thayendanegea, and tried to make him see as clearly as herself the stirring days when Molly Brant came with tresses flying before Sir William Johnson.

From the hour Paul opened his eyes to the light of life he had in him the soul of an Indian. After a hundred and thirty-five years the blood of the lovely Molly Brant had come into its own. One would not have guessed it from the boy's physical appearance, for he was light rather than dark, with blue eyes and blond hair. But the modern Molly, who lived in a palace, with a Croesus for a husband, saw what was happening as the years passed by. Her boy grew bent of back and figure. His cheek bones were a little high. His love for the outdoors became a passion. She made it possible for him to spend his vacations in the woods, and each time he returned she knew that something had been taken away from him and a little more of the other thing put in its place. The servants thought he was queer, and loved his quiet and stoical kindness, which was many years older than his age. Most boys would have lived up to the princely grandeur of his environment. To Paul it meant less than a tree with birds singing in its branches.

In his thirteenth year came three events of vital importance in the shaping of his future. First his mother died. No one would ever know the terrible, unhealing wound it cut in Paul's heart. It was James Kirke, this hardened and power-seeking juggernaut of flesh and blood who went to pieces when he discovered that death had been fearless enough to cross his path. His agony was like a storm, tragic for a time, and quickly over. He settled back into the dreary strife of his money getting by the time Paul began to grieve. But the shadow and the fact of death changed him a little. He saw himself alone, except for his son. And this son, after years of passing interest on his part, became the kernel of his plans and ambitions. He was now king. Some day his boy would be king. And it was his desire and his decision that he should be a greater king than himself. Pride fired his resolution.

But here the geographical genius of Fate again stepped in with humor of its own. In another Fifth avenue home a baby girl was born to the wife of Kirke's most implacable financial enemy, Henry Durand. A few months later, three thousand miles or more away, an immigrant ship left for America. On board this ship was a clear-eyed, hopeful woodcutter from the mountain country of central Europe. With him were his wife and baby. They were an unimportant three. The sea might have swallowed them and no one would have cared very much, for their adventure was only one of millions of a similar kind. The immigrant baby's fortune began and ended with the few little clothes she wore. The other baby was worth millions one second after she came into the world.

Paul continued to grow up, and with equal steadiness his father continued to amass fortune and influence. It was his passion to smash and break down, then devour and build up—until some one called him the Amazona, a name which fitted him so well that the newspapers would have used it had they dared. Kirke was always within the legal boundaries of his country's laws. He absorbed shipping companies, railroads, coal mines, and timberlands, and sent out his engineers to corner vast water-power rights. From an industrial point of view he was constructively an asset, for wherever he broke down or consumed small activities he built up larger ones. But morally and ethically his brain was inspired by a covetous and acid desire to rule. He was intolerant of rivalry, and this brought him each year in closer and more deadly contact with the equally far-reaching interests of Henry Durand. The titanic struggle between these two Goliaths of financial and industrial activities is a part of Wall street history. The more interesting story of Paul and the two babies is known only to a few, chiefly about Lac St. Jean.

(TO BE CONTINUED.) If some simple minded yokel would follow the advice of the public speakers for just one week he would be simpler than ever. W. E. Parmelee makes storm windows and doors.—Adv. 131f.

THURSDAY, MARCH 6, the stockholders of Standard Oil Company (Indiana) held their annual meeting. Several of the matters brought up at that meeting are of possible interest not only to stockholders who could not be present, but to the employees of the Company and to the public as well.

With more than 87,000 owners, with a working force of 40,000 people, and with approximately 35,000 dealers who distribute its products, the Company naturally plays a considerable part in the industrial life and business prosperity of the territory which it serves. We therefore are pleased to report that the past year has been one of the most successful in its history.

One of the outstanding events of the year was the acquisition of controlling interest in the Pan American Petroleum and Transport Company. This gives Standard Oil Company (Indiana) an international organization, serving not only many sections of the United States but a number of Central and South American countries as well. It gives the Company a remarkable reserve of crude oil among the finest of the world's oil fields. The year has also seen a wide extension of Standard Oil service throughout its immediate territory. Service has been increased both to the city motorist and to the farm.

The needs of our farm customers have grown greatly in recent years. Over 20 percent of all farms in the states served by Standard Oil Company (Indiana) are now equipped with tractors as well as motor cars. Thousands of them produce their own electric power by means of the gasoline engine. Our Company pioneered in serving the farm and this tradition is being maintained by increasing our facilities each year throughout the farming area.

The past year, however, has been successful in more than a business way. It has been marked by achievements of interest to everyone who drives a car.

We are fortunate in the possession of one of the greatest oil research laboratories in the world, out of which are coming discoveries of first rank importance in the making of petroleum products.

Last fall, after considerable experimental work, we developed a greatly improved Ethyl Gasoline—the new Red Crown Ethyl. The essential feature of this product was the perfection of a gasoline base of unusually high quality with which we combined the Ethyl compound. Its rapid acceptance by the public was hardly unexpected—but it has been gratifying, none the less.

Now we are prepared to announce a further manufacturing achievement. For many months this Company has been working to perfect a new product. The work has been completed. Tests of the product, both in the laboratory and under service conditions, have more than met our expectations. We are convinced that it will prove a contribution both to the pleasure and economy of driving a car.

This product will be announced in a special program to be given over the radio on Wednesday, March 12th.

Because of the character of the announcement a program of unusual interest has been arranged—including Sousa's Band, Mme. Louise Homer and the well-known entertainer, Will Rogers. The broadcast begins at 9:30 P.M. Central Time and will be sent over a chain of fourteen leading stations. It is hoped you will all listen in.

W. C. T. U. NOTES

Credos Co-Operating for Deeds.

The Chicago Evening Post recently published an editorial under the above heading regarding the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, portions of which we are pleased to reprint as we understand all the protestant denominations in the country practically are in the Council and many local people will be interested:

"There has been a good deal of misunderstanding concerning the aims and methods which characterize the council. Much of this misunderstanding has been created by deliberate misrepresentation on the part of those who are antagonistic to the spread of Christian principles in the world's life. There is a pagan spirit in America which resists the message of Jesus. It has its organizations, its newspapers, its magazines, its methods of propaganda and obstruction. There can be no greater tribute to the work of an agency of Christian faith, such as the Federal council, than the active opposition of this pagan spirit. The more bitter and vindictive it is in its attacks, the more sure can we be that the cause of faith is making headway, is gaining ground. If faith were asleep, complacent, concerning merely with the singing of hymns and the reciting of prayers, the pagan forces would ignore it. Only in so far as it is seeking to translate its ideals into terms of life, into terms of human relations in society, in business, in industry, into terms of citizenship and international policy does it find itself the target for attack.

"At its executive meeting the council invited the fullest investigation of its organization and methods, and took occasion to make clear the fact that it maintains no lobby at Washington or anywhere else. In a statement issued during its Chicago session it declared it has carefully refrained from employing 'any lobbyist or legislative representative, and from using any form of political or personal pressure or partisan alignment, but has relied wholly upon the moral power of its statements to influence public opinion.'

"The council has a Washington office, just as it has a New York office and a Chicago office, but the annual budget of its Washington office is only $11,000 and the executive secretary who directs it is paid the princely salary of $1,500. Three-fourths of the Washington office budget are expended on assisting the army and navy in the work of chaplains and in aiding disabled veterans.

"Among other activities of the council, which are largely those of research and education, are its efforts to promote in the churches the spirit of social service, and in business and industry the spirit of good will, of better human relations, of stronger emphasis upon the human values.

"The promotion of good will between Jews and Christians is a recent endeavor of the Federal council which illustrates the breadth of its vision and aims. This endeavor is chiefly directed toward eradicating those prejudices which still exist in Christian circles. It is an educational work which may have the most happy results. The common faith of Jew and Christian in the supreme importance of spiritual values, constitutes a ground of sympathetic understanding and co-operation which, happily, is being cultivated by both sides as never before.

"These are but a few of the many interests which engage the council. It should be an occasion for rejoicing that its work advances. There is, we think, no more hopeful augury for spiritual progress in American life than the fact that the churches have found in the Federal council a means whereby creeds may unite for service, and the voice of faith in God may utter itself with intelligence and persuasive power."

U. P. WOMAN NARROWLY ESCAPED FROM GAS

Miss Ormiston, Chippewa county club leader in driving through her county last Thursday felt herself getting drowsy and her limbs getting listless, stopped her car and opened a window and began to realize then she was suffering monoxide gas poisoning from a heater she had in the car. She made her way to a nearby farm house, was put to bed and received proper treatment and was able to return to her home next day. But it was a mighty close call to death.—Cheboygan Observer.

MICHIGAN STATE FARM BUREAU NEWS

Taking the position that taxation and township roads are major issues for the coming year, the Michigan State Farm Bureau laid down a comprehensive program of tax and highway reform at its annual meeting at Michigan State College February 6 and 7.

The Farm Bureau's resolution "ask no special favors for agriculture in the field of taxation," and stress the universal need of economy from the state. The principle of the Turner Bill, passed at the last session of the legislature, was extolled as pointing the way to more equitable school taxes. The Dykstra Bill now being sponsored by the League of Michigan Municipalities was condemned on the grounds that the proposed three-way split of auto tax funds between the state, the counties and the municipalities is unfair to the farmers.

The resolutions also oppose tax exemption and call for a rewriting of the general property tax law to secure a more uniform rule of assessment. The cigarette tax which will be voted upon at the spring elections was commended on the grounds that the proceeds will be used to reduce local taxes.

In recommending the further introduction of new forms of revenue, the delegates, apparently, preferred to state what they wanted rather than how it should be obtained. The resolution on this subject is not limited to any particular form of tax, but specifies only that the Farm Bureau favors "the judicious introduction of new and just forms of taxation," coupled with a demand that the funds be used to reduce and equalize local levies under sufficient regulation "to insure economy and efficiency in their use."

In its only other resolution on state affairs, the bureau reaffirmed its endorsement of the Horton Anti-Trespass law, and asked its board of directors to consult the wishes of the members further before taking a stand upon any sweeping changes in the hunting or conservation laws.

The third grade language class is learning the poem, "The Village Blacksmith."

Monday of this week we made some very attractive posters to decorate our room.

We have two new pupils enrolled last Tuesday: Margaret and John Boss from the Ellsworth school. They are both in the 6th grade.

Lawrence Boss received a half day vacation last month as a reward for having a perfect spelling lesson every day during the month.

The following students had 100 in spelling this week: Lucy Brock, Cora Matchett, Jane Parsons, Lawrence Boss and David Matchett.

We are now having Art class two days a week. Some very good painting of flowers are displayed on the bulletin board.

Those who were neither tardy nor absent the sixth month of school are: Lawrence Goss, Lucy Brock, Cora, Hazel and Sandy Matchett, Bessie Potter and Everett, Harley, Irene and Joseph Warner.

We have some Palmer penmanship wall cards posted above our blackboards, which serve as very good room decorations as well as an aid to correct visualization. We hope that many of us will try harder to improve our handwriting. McGEACH SCHOOL NOTES.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Heise drove to Petoskey Friday.

Anthony Kovar has returned home from Toledo, where he has been working during the winter.

Miss Helen Kerchak of Charlevoix and Miss Elizabeth Smith visited school one afternoon last week.

Mrs. Anna Holeczek, our teacher of last year, visited school one day last week. We were all glad to see her.

Mr. Palmer called Friday afternoon and brought several handicraft projects for our inspection. Several of the boys took patterns of things they wished to make for exhibit.

Chester Schneider, Katherine Kerchak and Beth Heise are back in school again. They have been ill nearly two weeks. Edgar, Jack and Norman Schneider are still on the sick list.

Several of the boys went to Charlevoix Saturday afternoon and played basketball with the boys of St. Mary's school in the gymnasium. The boys lost, but nevertheless they enjoyed it. Score 10 to 9.

NOWLAND SCHOOL NOTES.

The eighth grade have their arithmetic books nearly finished.

The Merry Seven Club meet at the Cunningham home Friday. The afternoon was spent in sewing.

James McClanaghan, who has been spending the past week with his sister, Mrs. C. Faltenbarger of Williamsburg, has returned home.

March brings us tulips and St. Patrick borders for our black boards—a St. Patrick calendar and dutch windmills for window decorations.

The eighth graders feel that they are now ready to figure balanced rations since Mr. Mellencamp explained them more thoroughly, and gave some sample rules to follow.

On Tuesday last, Mr. Mellencamp, county agent, visited our school in regards to club work. We are looking forward to Achievement Day, with great plans. Watch for further announcement.

The following poems are being memorized: Third grade, "Farewell to the Farm," fourth grade, "Old Flag," sixth grade, "An American in Europe," and seventh grade, "The House by the Side of the Road."

COUNTY NORMAL NEWS.

Monday night the pretty pussy willows on the blackboard border were taken down and bright yellow tulips were put up in their place. And then the snow came.

Last Friday afternoon was the special day program conducted by Miss Trimble and Miss Ogden. The class was favored with an O'Leary story, "The Third Ingredient," which was very ably read by Miss Ogden.

Some of the students were getting discouraged about their uselessness in class this year, but after the heart to heart discussion in civics class Tuesday morning, it was found out that every single student was indispensable.

Last week on Friday the second term was finished and Monday morning all of the students came to school with the hope that they would be the first to recite in the new subjects.

A new teaching period also commenced at the beginning of the last term and after the bustle of readjustment, everything is running along smoothly again.

Mrs. Andrus and Miss Crump have arranged a little spelling contest between the fourth and sixth grade in the Training room. This was arranged by ascending columns of mercury in paper thermometers. Interest is very keen at present.

Miss Sutton and Miss Richardson have been playing in the sand table nearly every night after school for a week. The class wonders what's up? The suspense is terrible.

Education is great. We know youngsters in this community who couldn't throw a forward pass four years ago.

AT THE MOVIES. Colleen Moore's First All-Talking Picture is Coming.

That the Palace Theatre has secured a screen production regarded as the most perfect combination of pictured action and recorded dialogue yet achieved, was announced today by the theatre management.

The picture is "Smiling Irish Eyes" Colleen Moore's first talking and singing vehicle, which will be given its first local showing next Saturday and Sunday. "Smiling Irish Eyes" was produced by John McCormick as a First National-Vitaphone special, and has been received with enthusiasm wherever shown.

Miss Moore, in the character of a little Irish girl, both sings and speaks in "Smiling Irish Eyes" several songs having been prepared especially for the picture by prominent composers. James Hall plays the male lead opposite Miss Moore, others who fill conspicuous roles being Claude Gillingwater, Aggie Herring, Robert Ho-mans, Betty Francisco, Robert Emmett O'Connor and Julianne Johnston. William A. Seiter directed "Smiling Irish Eyes."

"Man" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Christian Science churches on Sunday, March 9.
Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Who shall separate us from the love of Christ. Shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword?" (Rom. 8:35).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Even though you never that the material senses are indispensable to man's existence or entity, you must change the human concept of life, and must at length know yourself spiritually and scientifically" (p. 359).

CHEBOYGAN HIGH IS ON WAY TO SECOND DEBATE CROWN

Cheboygan and Gwinn high school debating teams will meet on Friday night, March 14, at Cheboygan, to decide the championship of Northern Michigan and the Upper Peninsula. The meeting also will put one school higher up the ladder toward the state title, now held by Cheboygan. The latter school has won 16 consecutive victories in debate—a new state record. Prof. John H. Muyskens, head of the department of rhetoric at the University of Michigan, has accepted the assignment as judge of the debate.

THINK OF YOUR AUTOMOBILE IN TERMS OF TOMORROW

Ultimate cost is as important as first cost in the purchase of an automobile

WHEN you purchase an automobile you are making an investment of a considerable amount of money. It is essential, therefore, that you give careful thought to the best selection and know what you are getting for your automobile dollars.

The first cost is important because it may mean an immediate, satisfactory saving. Of equal importance is the ultimate cost after thousands of miles of service. This ultimate cost is the true measure of automobile value.

THE first cost of the new Ford is unusually low not only because of economies in manufacturing, but because the same principles that inspire these savings are extended to every other step that means greater service to the public. It is easy to see that economies in production would be of little value if they were sacrificed later through high charges for distribution, selling, financing and accessories.

The Ford dealer, therefore, does business on the same low-profit margin as the Ford Motor Company. His discount or commission is twenty-five to fifty per cent lower than that of any other automobile dealer. You gain because he makes a small profit on many sales instead of a large profit on fewer sales.

The difference in selling cost, combined with the low charges for financing and accessories, amounts to at least $50 to $75 on each car. This is as important as economies in production in keeping down the price you pay for the new Ford.

THE low ultimate cost of the new Ford is the result of sound design, quality of material and unusual care in manufacturing. Friction and wear are reduced by the accuracy with which each part is made and assembled.

These factors combine to decrease the cost of operation and add months and years to the useful life of the car. The good performance and low yearly depreciation of the new Ford are indicative of the enduring quality built into it at the factory.

SERVICE charges are on the same fair, economical basis as the making and selling of the car and replacement parts are always available at low prices through all Ford dealers. In two, three or five years, depending on how much you drive, the saving in operating and maintaining a new Ford will amount to even more than the saving on the first cost.

Think in terms of tomorrow, therefore, when you purchase an automobile. For tomorrow will reveal its true worth.

WASHINGTON NEWS LETTER.
Flashes from the House of Representatives.

A congressman from Maine objects to the appearance of "Idaho potatoes" on the House restaurant menu in red ink. "Propaganda," he terms it, jealousy guarding the reputation of potatoes raised in his own state. Now, what are we going to do about "Chicken a la Maryland," "Virginia ham," and "Boston beans"?

Paulina, the five-year old daughter of Nicholas Longworth, speaker of the House of Representatives, is probably better known than any child in the United States. Recently she celebrated her fifth birthday by a trip to Congress and, attired in blue satin dress and orchid stockings, seated herself in the gallery to watch Daddy wield his gavel. Representative John T. Johnson of Connecticut formally introduced her to the House and Representatives stood and applauded. Paulina, puzzled at the reception, also started to clap, but her nurse restrained her.

"Prepared salad dressings have broken up more homes than all the chorus girls in the world."

So thundered New York's fiery Representative Fiorelli J. LaGuardia to a listening House. No, it wasn't a debate on divorce laws. A bill to tax colored cooking compounds was before Congress, and Mr. LaGuardia insisted that such compounds were utterly harmless as compared with other culinary iniquities, prepared salad dressing being the most vicious. Mr. LaGuardia is regarded as the most talented amateur cook in Congress.

Masculine Comments on Feminine Furbelows.

Another symptom of the good old days that are rapidly passing is the "Easter bonnet" and "Easter dress." A parade of fashion that once reached its height on a certain Sunday every spring has been distributed over the entire year, according to J. Perling, of the textiles division of the department of commerce. Mr. Perling does not feel his masculinity a hindrance to his explaining the reasons for this change in feminine inclinations.

The increasing popularity of bridge parties, states Mr. Perling, "has a tendency to accentuate the rivalry in clothes and undoubtedly has helped the apparel industry." Less ruffles and starches and less expensive clothing are a necessary accompaniment of crowded automobiles. Even the phonograph and radio come in for part responsibility for present day styles in clothing. These inventions, Mr. Perling explains, have made dancing an "incident" rather than an event; consequently, there is less emphasis on formal attire.

Mr. Perling points out that a reluctance on the part of women to accept new styles hastily has made for a gradual shifting from one fashion to another. The failure of the long skirt to "take" as other innovations have in the past is cited as an example of individual preference which logically results in more variety and an increased wardrobe.

Politics and Personalities.

Believe it or not, they are still talking about tariff up in the senate. Senator James Watson of Indiana, Republican floor leader, has stated regretfully that he doesn't think the bill will be passed by the first of March. "Who ever thought it would?" the public in general asked. It may be heresy to say so, but not a few persons are predicting that the ultimate prospect for tariff revision is no revision at all. Individual amendments, which were supposed to pass or die with little talking are kicking up no end of a row. Even the sure-footed Coalition, with nerves on edge, missed its step on a few items in the chemical schedule, and their slips may cost the consumer a pretty penny. This has irritated many low-tariff protagonists who are inclined to feel that no bill at all would be better than an unfair bill.

Added to the confusion is the persistent barking from outside groups who are disappointed at results and hope to obtain revenge through votes on individual amendments. The domestic sugar producers refuse to die gracefully; they are now demanding the old House rate of 2.40 cents per pound! Since their representatives in Congress are, as ever, eager to help their cause, it seems likely that the "battle of the sugar bowl" will be fought all over again. Far less likely, however, is the possibility that senators, having already refused to rob the consuming public of $65,000,000 for the benefit of a few sugar manufacturers, will now reverse itself to rob them of that sum plus $55,000,000.

No Will Rogers for Italy.

Can a nation's sense of humor be suppressed by governmental decree? Well, keep an eye on Italy, and you may find out. Quips and puns, anecdotes and jokes, which reflect on the existing order are banned by the Fascist regime and the Italian press has seriously suggested the deportation of wisecrackers. Imagine what would happen to our race of columnists, our vaudeville entertainers, and radio speech makers, if such a decree were passed in America! Picture the fate that would befall even our legislators under a law like this.

What punishment might be meted out to "witty George" Moses of New Hampshire for his wisecrack about the "sons of wild jackasses"? What, in turn, would become of Senator Nye with his wittier retort that old Guard Senators of the tariff-tinkering Finance Committee were peeved because they had spent the summer trimming a Christmas tree to find, when fall came, that there wasn't any Santa Claus after all? How we would miss the persistent fencing that Pat Harrison of Mississippi employs to drive Utah's venerable Reed Smoot almost into a frenzy—and the delightful Shakespearean parodies by which Senator Norris of Nebraska occasionally enlivens a tariff debate. It is doubtful that Senator Caraway would continue to function as Chairman of the committee investigating lobbies if he were deprived of his wisecracks. In fact, it is hardly probable that a quorum could be mustered in Congress if all the wits and would-be wits were deported. Furthermore, Will Rogers and many press correspondents would have to be executed on behalf of proper respect for government and high officials.

This Conferential Age.

Uncle Sam, having considerable tariff troubles of his own, is not officially participating in the international conference for a tariff treaty which opened in Geneva on February 17th. This meeting of government economic leaders, including fifteen ministers of commerce, is important enough, however, to rate an American observer, Edwin C. Wilson, first secretary of the American Embassy in Paris. The conference will seek to procure an agreement whereby states will not increase the levels of existing tariffs or create new customs duties during a period of two or three years.

Thus the hopeful old world will hear two concurrent international discussions looking toward peace on earth, good will to men. For commercial rivalry, no less than naval aggression, stirs international conflicts. Ludwell Denny, Washington author and editorial writer, in his new book, America Conquers Britain, accuses some pacifists of blindness to the dangers of economic strife. The gravest danger, in his opinion, lies in the people's ignorance of the economic causes of war.

High tariff walls, as well as high naval tonnage, are provocative of discussion, and the spirit of both conferences is limitation. If the naval parley deserves an international radio hookup, the Geneva conference is entitled to an open-minded American audience.

English as spoken in America differs vastly from English as spoken in England when one uses the telephone. American stenographers now in London for the naval conference were bewildered at being told, "You are through" before they had started speaking; the words, translated into American, mean "You are connected."

One "books a trunk call" in England when making a long distance connection. A call that is "completed" in the United States is, more crudely, a "mature" in Great Britain, and a call "canceled" in America is termed "ineffective" in England. The "information desk" in the King's English, and "fees" rather than "charges" are made for telephone service. While our lines are snappily "busy" in London they are refinedly "engaged."

JUNIOR HIGH TOURNAMENT FRIDAY, MAR. 21

Charlevoix, East Jordan, Boyne and Harbor Springs Compete.

Plans are being rapidly completed by local officials for the second annual Charlevoix county Junior High school basketball tournament, which will be held the afternoon and evening of Friday, March 21, in the local gymnasium.

Four schools are competing this year, and to make an even bracket, Harbor Springs Junior High has been invited to compete from out of the county. Other schools are East Jordan, Boyne City and Charlevoix. John Ferenz of Traverse City, has been engaged as referee.

More complete details, including the draw for positions, time of games, etc., will be given next week. Bear in mind the date and plan to attend this series of games.

JEFFERY-LOVELAND WEDDING JANUARY 12

Announcement Came as a Surprise to Their Many Friends.

Coming as a complete surprise is the announcement of the marriage on Sunday, January 12, of Floyd Jeffery, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Jeffery of this city, and Miss Geraldine Loveland, until recently a nurse at the Charlevoix Hospital.

The ceremony was performed at Gaylord by Justice of the Peace Shannon. Mr. and Mrs. Jeffery were unattended, springing a complete surprise even on relatives and intimate friends. They will make their home in Charlevoix and have the best wishes of their many friends.

regional meet, and, unless they hit a terrible slump, it should be easy picking for Harbor Springs at Petoskey. One cannot help but think what a nice race there would be at Petoskey with Charlevoix and Boyne as contenders. The matter is worth thinking over.

Another fact is also outstanding as a result of the district meet. With the ever increasing interest in basketball, larger gyms must be used. Harbor's gym was always packed to capacity and quite often beyond capacity. Fans do not like to travel many miles to a tournament and then be turned out. Officials might keep this in mind when placing the next district meet.

Norwood Township Caucus.

Notice is hereby given that a township caucus will be held in the Norwood Town Hall, on Monday, March 17, at 1:00 p. m., standard time, for the purpose of placing in nomination candidates for various township offices for the ensuing year, and for the transaction of such other business as may properly come before it. STATE PLANS PUBLIC HEARINGS ON TAXES

First of Series Will Be Held at Lansing on March 20th.

The first of a series of public hearings by the State Commission of Inquiry into Taxation will be held in the senate chamber in the capitol building, Lansing, Thursday, March 20th, 1930, at 10 a. m., eastern standard time, according to a notice sent out by Raymond H. Berry, secretary of the commission. This meeting has been called for the purpose of affording an opportunity for a discussion upon one phase of state taxation, that of taxes on real and personal property.

Inasmuch as this is a matter which directly affects every property owner in the state, it is expected that a large representation will turn out from every section of the state. A larger percentage of taxes are going unpaid this year than ever before and this question has become a most serious one.

Any persons or organization interested in this phase of taxation are invited to attend said hearing and appear before the commission and impart any knowledge, information or suggestions they care to make with reference to taxes on real and personal property.

The Crippled Lady of Peribonka

By James Oliver Curwood

History has recorded how Molly Brant, sister of Theyendaneaga, greatest chief of the Mohawks, became the bride of Sir William Johnson, the king's right arm in the Colonies.

After a hundred and thirty-five years the blood of lovely Molly had come into its own. The modern Molly, who lived in a palace with a Croesus for a husband, saw what was happening as the years passed.

HARBOR RETAINS CLASS C LAURELS

MANISTEE NEW CLASS B REGIONAL CHAMPION.

St. Francis, Traverse City, Best of Class D Schools—All Go to the State Tournament.

(From Petoskey Evening News.) One championship tottered and fell, another rocked dangerously near disaster but finally settled back firmly on its base, while still a third was an open scrap without a defender, in the finals of the Petoskey regional basketball tournament here Saturday afternoon and evening.

Harbor Springs, state champions in Class C, found the going extremely rough in their title game with Grayling, but with their characteristic final minute fight came through to a glorious victory. The Grayling outfit were about as scrappy and fast a bunch as the champions could care to tangle with. Manistee proved the downfall of the regional championship Traverse City outfit. Coming onto the floor as the under fellow in the admitted chances for victory, the Ludwigen outfit surprised everyone with their speed and determined fighting. In the Class D race the honors were open to all, with last year's champions not even represented. St. Francis of Traverse City, playing a smooth, steady game, won by superior all-around team play.

The final results of the tournament distribute the championships well over the district. Harbor Springs on the north holds the Class C title. St. Francis in the central part is in possession of the Class D title and trophy, while Manistee on the far south end carried home the glory and honor of having won out in the Class B division. All three teams will represent the Petoskey regional at the state contests which are to be played this week in Detroit. Manistee will start off with a game against St. Joseph high school, one of the strongest teams in Class B in Michigan. St. Francis takes on St. Clair Shores in her first game. Harbor Springs will meet Wayne in Class C.

In the consolation series, Petoskey won third place in Class B by defeating Alpena; East Jordan won third place in Class C by default, and Central Lake trimmed Copemish in Class D.

The writer erred in one respect last week in predicting the result of Petoskey's regional meet. He had not time to say about classes B and C, inasmuch as those divisions did not interest Charlevoix so much. We apologize if it may have seemed that we discredited Grayling by our reference to weaker teams of the district. Our main objection was the distribution of teams to the district tournaments and we still maintain the same opinion. Grayling gave us a good account of themselves, winning their first contest easily from East Jordan and giving the champion Harbor Springs outfit a good run. Grayling's defeat of East Jordan hardly upholds the arguments used by an official of the latter school when he took occasion to criticize the Courier sports writer both directly and before the East Jordan school assembly last week. He had better check and then double-check the "hunk" he handed out.

HARBOR WORK TO BE STARTED HERE SOON

Government Engineer Gave Assurance on Visit Here Sunday.

During a visit here Sunday, Col. John C. Kingman, United States engineer with headquarters at Milwaukee, gave assurance that the proposed improvements on the channel between Lake Michigan and Lake Charlevoix would be started early this spring.

Col. Kingman made arrangements with the Charlevoix Lumber company for the use of their property to store material, stating that supplies would be brought as soon as navigation opens, and that work would be started at once.

Charlevoix's appropriation from Congress for harbor improvements is $156,000.00, but it is intimated that much more than that amount may be expended. Other than that the improvements asked by the Association of Commerce would be carried out, nothing is known concerning the exact details of the work to be done. It is of considerable satisfaction to officers of the association, however, that their efforts have been fruitful.

TAX COLLECTION HAS BEEN GOOD

CHECK-UP BY TREAS. FLANDERS SHOWS GOOD RETURNS.

Total Collected Up to Date is On Average With Other Years—Four Not in Yet.

Tax collections in Charlevoix county are up to the average this year according to County Treasurer Flanders, who settled with township and city treasurers March 1.

The total of the tax asked this year was $171,445.98 and out of this amount the total unpaid is $31,909.61. Much of the unpaid taxes will come in in future months. The collections from all townships and cities of the county are in with the exception of Boyne City and St. James, Peaine and Chandler.

Figures made available show the following results, the first figures being the total assessed, and the second column the amount unpaid:

Bay	$564.32	$1,892.89
Boyne Valley	7,356.02	1,747.08
Charlevoix	6,371.55	1,409.02
Chandler
Hayes	8,837.55	2,804.79
Hudson	2,920.82	636.32
Evangeline	2,568.85	922.63
Eveline	11,109.42	2,457.37
Marion	8,959.92	2,160.91
Melrose	11,497.13	1,619.58
Norwood	5,073.45	1,933.83
Peaine
St. James
South Arm	8,566.65	2,290.53
Wilson	6,378.98	1,574.91
Charlevoix C.	65,819.54	6,568.92
East Jordan	20,421.78	3,890.83
Boyne City

The above figures show that the city of Charlevoix made an excellent showing when the assessed amount is figured in proportion to the amount remaining unpaid. Hudson and Evangeline townships were up among those heading the list for prompt payment, and, altogether, the report would indicate a fairly healthy financial condition throughout the county.

WHITEFISH PLANT HAS BEEN RENEWED

Shipments Taken Monday to Manistee and Ludington.

Shipments of whitefish fry have been resumed from the local government hatchery again. The Michigan Wolverine and U. S. Bureau of Fisheries car No. 9 took out consignments Monday afternoon, one going to Manistee and the other to Ludington.

It is expected three trips will be made this week and ten before the entire batch is transferred.

Because of the early maturity of the spawn, it has been necessary to take the fry to lake port towns south where open water allows planting by boat. In most previous years, the planting has been made in Lake Michigan off Charlevoix with the Fulmer, government hatchery boat stationed at this port. Unusually warm weather has hastened the hatch to this early date.

SCHOOL BAND CONCERT MARCH 26

BENEFIT PROGRAM OFFERED TO RAISE ADDITIONAL FUNDS.

Money Will Be Used to Send Band to Traverse City Tournament Held April 11 and 12.

Plans have been announced for a benefit concert to be given the evening of Wednesday, March 26, by the Charlevoix school band at the gymnasium. The concert is being sponsored to raise funds to send the band to the Traverse City district tournament April 11 and 12.

The Charlevoix organization, which now has reached an enrollment of 38, took first place in class C at Traverse City a year ago, and are trying hard to repeat. Only first and second place winners are eligible to compete in the state tournament at Lansing on May 2 and 3, and Charlevoix wants to be represented there.

The following very excellent program has been arranged and will open at 7:30 o'clock:

March, "The Cornhusker," by A. F. Wendland (contest number). Overture, "Masterbilt," by Harry L. Alford.

Intermission, "Bridal Song," by C. Goldmark (contest number). Quartettes for four clarinets, (a) "When You and I Were Young Maggie," (b) "Love's Old Sweet Song."

Overture, "Gala Night," by Ed. Chenette. Two songs by high school chorus, directed by Mrs. McKee.

March, "Diamond Jubilee," by A. F. Wendland.

Quartettes for two coronets, alto and baritone, (a) "Robin Adair," (b) "The Old Oaken Bucket," (c) "How Can I Leave Thee."

Clarinet solo, "Golden Shower," P. Bouillon, by John TerWee, accompanied by Mrs. A. J. Stetter at piano.

Overture, "Spirit of Youth," by Cordillo (contest number). Serenade, "Twilight Hour," by Meyers.

March, "Across the Atlantic," by E. M. Crawford.

Tickets will be on sale by band members and it is hoped that a full house will hear the concert.

The school band has improved by leaps and bounds since their organization. Concerts at basketball games throughout the winter have been very enjoyable and have shown the excellent progress made by the band. Turn out next Wednesday evening and help the band raise funds to take them to the tournament.

Those present were Grandpa and Grandma Withers, Mr. and Mrs. R. Williams and daughters, Mr. and Harold Withers and daughter.

Mildred received many gifts, also birthday greetings over the air from Station WBBM. Sunday morning she received a long distance call from her Uncle Harry at Aurora, Ill., wishing her happy birthday greetings.

VOTE WAS LIGHT AT TWP. CAUCUS

TWO TICKETS INDICATE THERE IS PLENTY INTEREST.

Hayes, Marion, Charlevoix and Eveline Township Officers Will Have Opposition.

While a light vote at caucuses in the various townships in the Charlevoix district would seemingly indicate little interest in politics, the case seems to be far different from outside appearances. In four precincts, Charlevoix, Hayes, Eveline and Marion townships, two tickets are in the field for the April election. Norwood township took the matter peaceful and will probably place all its old officers back in office.

A light vote from the north end of Charlevoix township resulted in the defeat of William H. Cook for supervisor by a small majority, and his name will now appear on Ticket No. 2. "Bill" has been a fixture on the board of supervisors for many years and one of its most active and interested members. Men of Mr. Cook's strong convictions are not easy to find these days and it would seem too bad to have him pass out of the picture.

Following are the results of the caucuses held Monday and prior to that date:

Marion Township. Ticket No. 1—Supervisor, Charles Mascho. Clerk, William Withers. Treasurer, Charles Withers. Highway Commissioner, Albert Elliott.

Overseer Highways, Clint Blanchard. Justice of the Peace, Fred Mason. Board of Review, John Smith.

Overseer Highways, Lavern McGinnis. Justice of the Peace, W. H. Henley.

Board of Review, Sam Straw. Constables, Edward James, Howard Blackwood, Chris Drast, Walter Alexander.

Norwood Township. Supervisor, Orton VanDusen. Clerk, Frank Richardson. Treasurer, Orville Hilton. Highway Commissioner, John Waffle.

Justice of the Peace, George Parsons. Justice of the Peace (short term), Ed. Gregory.

Member Board of Review, James Heeres. Constables, James Runyan, Geo. Parsons, Jake Ypma, Geo. VerSnyder.

Hayes Township. Ticket No. 1—Supervisor, Howard Stephens. Clerk, Mrs. Zula Struthers. Treasurer, Frank Burnett. Highway Commissioner, George O'Brien.

JUNIOR HIGH TOURNEY OPENS FRIDAY

CHARLEVOIX AND EAST JORDAN OPEN PLAY AT 2:30.

Consolation Game and Finals Will Make Up Evening Program—Much Interest Shown.

Now that the district and regional basketball tournaments are a thing of the past, attention of local fans is turned this week to the second annual Charlevoix county junior high school tourney, which will be held Friday afternoon and evening at the local gymnasium.

From an interest standpoint, the tournament drew heavily at Boyne City last year, and will even more so at Charlevoix this season. With the exception of Harbor Springs, who were invited to make a full bracket, all the teams entered have played the previous games and developed some fine competition. In fact, the junior high preliminaries held before main games here, were the best preliminaries seen on the local court.

With officials of the several schools present, the draw was made Saturday afternoon. Charlevoix and East Jordan head the bill, playing at 2:30 in the afternoon. Following that contest, Boyne City and Harbor Springs take the court at 3:30. A consolation game between the two losers of the afternoon contests is scheduled at 7:15 in the evening, with the finals for the championship between the two afternoon winners coming at 8:15.

Charlevoix's junior high has had a fairly successful season so far and will give a good account of themselves Friday. Members of the squad are: George Richardson, Harold Potter and Cleo Beardsley, forwards; Marvin Dixon, Emerald Chew, Gale McCann and George Smith, guards; Lyle Auer, center; Robert Withers, forward and center.

Messrs. Bingham and Alexander of the Charlevoix junior high are managing the tournament, which is sponsored by the Charlevoix high school athletic association. John Ferenz, popular Traverse City athletic official, will referee. Charlevoix is furnishing the trophies and officials.

BUILDING STARTED ON NEW SUMMER COTTAGE

Curtis Has Wilson Contract; Stuart Bungalow Goes to Madill.

Ground was broken early this week at the corner of Dixon and Chicago avenues for a new $30,000 summer home for John P. Wilson III, of Chicago. John Curtis of this city, has the contract for construction. Robt. Bonthron for plumbing and Wood Bros. for electrical work.

Another contract for a large bungalow at Breezy Point Farm for Mrs. Robert Stuart, well known Chicago Club member, has been let to Robt. Madill, who is now finishing the work of remodeling the Robert Macdonald cottage on the Chicago Club.

These two contracts promise a busy summer for the building profession when other projects are taken into consideration also.

Charlevoix will have a large Pickle acreage this year. High prices, cash pay, and a reliable market are appreciated by all good farmers.—Adv. 121f.

SMELT RUN ON IN THE BOYNE RIVER

DIPPING STARTED THERE MONDAY NIGHT FOR FIRST TIME.

Smelt May Be Expected in Stover Creek at Any Time and Other Streams are Being Watched.

Charlevoix county—more exactly Boyne City—lays claim to the first smelt run in Michigan for 1930. Quite unexpectedly, untold numbers of these very choice member of the finny tribe started their spawning run up Boyne river early Monday evening, and since that time there has been great excitement over in the east end of our county.

For over a week now, close watch has been kept on all streams running into Lake Charlevoix, with the expectation that the run would start any night. The first movement was in Boyne River Monday night, and Tuesday night the run was even larger. Some smelt were also taken from Advance creek Tuesday night, indicating that the spawning run is advancing westward along the lake.

Charlevoix may expect smelt in Stover creek at any time now. Large schools have been reported for several days off the mouth of the stream and the run is not far off. And, by the way, dipping conditions will be ideal at Stover creek. Installation of electric lights was completed Tuesday under the direction of Dan Soule, superintendent of the city light and water departments. Poles have been set on each bank of the stream for some distance and wires run back and forth between them. Sufficient hubs are being used to make the place as light as day. A control gate has also been installed near the creek mouth.

Despite the extreme cold weather, quite a crowd of dippers were up at Boyne Tuesday night. This writer was among them. No Ed along with his partner, brought home a half bushel, which was just a fair catch in comparison with others, and is an indication of how thick the smelt are there. Before dipping started, the river bottom was black with smelt. However, deep water, width of the river and obstructions on the bottom, do not make Boyne river the nicest place in the world to dip. Boy, the smelt sure are there though.

All angles considered, we think the smelt run in Charlevoix will be along shortly. They should start at Charlevoix before or by the time the run is over at Boyne, extending in length at least two weeks and maybe more.

COMMERCE MEETING NEXT THURSDAY NITE

"Farmers' Night" With Special Program and M. S. C. Speaker.

Thursday, March 27th, has been set as the next meeting of the Charlevoix Association of Commerce. Ladies of the Macaboe lodge will serve the banquet dinner at the I. O. O. F. hall at the usual hour of 6:30.

The coming meeting will be known as "Farmers' Night." Each member of the association is requested to bring as their guest a friend from the rural district. A great get-together meeting is planned with the intention of cementing relationship between city and rural interests.

The Agricultural Committee of the association, composed of Richard Padlock chairman; Fenton R. Bulow, Ralph Price, Jay Adams, Wm. Sanderson, E. J. Edwards and B. C. Melencamp, ex-officio, will be in charge of the program. A speaker from Michigan State College, Lansing, will be present to address the gathering and other features are planned.

Work of association committees has been moving along nicely, and there undoubtedly will be some interesting reports of their activities. Set aside the date and plan to attend, and do not forget the rural friend.

ORATORS TO CHEBOYGAN FOR DISTRICT CONTEST

The sub-district oratorical and declamatory contest in which Cheboygan is included will take place during the week of April 11, and will be held in Cheboygan. This sub-district includes Cheboygan, Emmet, Otsego, and Charlevoix counties.

Members of Baxter Relief Corps No. 173 will serve a 15c tea at the home of Mrs. Wm. Taylor, Carpenter avenue, Friday afternoon, March 21. Mrs. Prevost.—Adv. 121f.

KONJOLA ENDS AGONY CAUSED BY RHEUMATISM

Lady Suffered for Five Years—Feared Relief Would Never Be Her Position.

MRS. MAGDELENA ROBERTS

Don't have the fear that there is no escape from rheumatism, even though medicine after medicine, treatment after treatment has failed. Put your faith in Konjola, as did Mrs. Magdalena Roberts, 10109 Forest avenue, East, Detroit. Think of her joy when she uttered these glad words:

No wonder I am grateful for Konjola. For five years I endured agonies; at times the pains in my back were so terrible that I was sick all over. The pains attacked every part of my body. My stomach was in bad condition too. Nothing helped me, and I was about to give up in despair when I heard of Konjola and its amazing success.

"How glad I am that I put this wonderful medicine to the test. Why, the very first bottle did me a lot of good, and then the improvement was rapid. In just six weeks the rheumatism was conquered and my digestion was restored. I am feeling just fine, and I think it my duty to tell the world what this remarkable medicine, Konjola, did for me."

Konjola is sold in Charlevoix at F. J. Fessenden's drug store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

They Couldn't Know

BACK IN 1818 the greatest newspaper of the day declared that the world had reached the limit of human expansion. It even went further, saying that there weren't enough supplies in the world to support further growth of population.

The mind of 1818 couldn't conceive of the miracles that human ingenuity would perform during the twentieth century. It couldn't imagine the wonders and modern manufacturing genius. It was ignorant of transportation as we know it, or the progressive sales methods of today. It could not see the vital part that would be played by advertising.

Even today there are some who fail to realize what an important factor advertising has become. Advertising is as much a part of today's life as electricity, antiseptic surgery or automobiles. It keeps us up to date on the many things we need in order to live profitable, happy and useful lives. It presents for our approval articles of all kinds and for all purposes. The requirements of each member of the family are met by advertised offers of good merchandise of proved value.

The advertisements save time, money and effort for those who read them and follow their guidance. They are practical guarantees of satisfaction.

Don't lay aside this paper without reading the advertisements.

That his father married again soon after Molly Kirke's death and had another son did not hurt Paul, except that it made him grieve more deeply for his mother and added to his loneliness. He sat alone only fairly well in college, because he could never completely shake his mind to duties that were confined within stone and brick walls. It took him an extra year to finish an engineering course, and after that he was never happy except when in the open spaces. In a business way he was interested only in his father's timberlands and such water-power projects as were situated in the wilderness. As a whole he was a disappointment to his parent.

One restless night the greatest of all his ideas came to James Kirke. The next day he went boldly and in friendly spirit to the office of Henry Durand, and for hours the two talked over Kirke's suggestion that their interests be combined into one giant force of combined millions. They parted friends, in a little while they were seen at the club together. Later the all-powerful Kirke-Durand corporation became a reality. The thirty old warriors worked hand in hand, their assets multiplied. Their palatial homes were scenes of mutual intercourse. Their wives were intimate. Their children became acquainted.

In his thirty-second year Paul married Claire Durand. In his thirty-eighth year, the son of one of the richest men in New York, he was officially in charge of the huge engineering work on the Mistastiqui river in the wilderness north of Lac St. Jean and had been three years on the job.

During these three years he had known Carla Haldan.

He was thinking of Carla as he looked from a window of his bungalow office on the hill down over the vast and naked workings of an engineering achievement which was costing fifty million dollars. He felt no exultation or thrill of pride, and in his eyes was a far look, somber gloom. What he saw was to him an unending and monotonous pit into which a steady and monotonous drizzle of rain was falling. There were fifteen hundred men on the job below him working in three eight-hour shifts, and neither darkness nor storm could stop them. He could see them moving and crawling about like ants at their labor. In his mind they added nothing to the scene, unless it was to give grimness reality to a hell that was smoking and boiling over. Everywhere a rumble and din, everywhere the fierce and heartbreaking labor of men, everywhere the ugliness and madness of a man-made place of torment.

Paul was thinking this even with Carla Haldan in his mind. He could see the gray-white slates and dykes with their cement and steel walls, and the monster sections of the almost completed dam, which was to harness northern waters to the production of light and power for twenty million people. Three years of human effort and millions in capital lay under his eyes. Yet about it all was only one excusable and beautiful thing for him. That was the rim of wilderness, the green and black and purple boundaries of the forest which elung like a frame about the workings.

His contemplation of the scene in the valley was interrupted by a voice at his office door, and he turned to greet the most intimate of his friends in the field, Colin Derwent, who was the company's medical man. Even on rainy days, and with his boots clogged with mud, Derwent was a cheerful soul.

With his Frenchy little mustache, his smooth cheeks, his liveliness of movement, and his appreciation of all phases of life, he continued to bear the appearance of a boy, though he had filled an important chair in medicine in Johns Hopkins.

He nodded to Paul, dropped off his rubber coat, and began to fill his pipe as he looked out over the workings.

"I wish all the boys in the world could stand in this window and see what's going on down there," he said. "That idea gets into my head every time I come here. It would fill 'em with ambition, show 'em what can be done, give 'em something to live and work for. Wouldn't you, isn't it?"

"Hotten," agreed Paul.

"But for a man who's done that—it ought to be sunshine all the time," added Derwent, lighting his pipe and puffing at it with great contentment. "Splendid work, Paul. Something to be proud of all your life. Something—"

"I hate it," interrupted Paul. "I've hated it from the beginning. I've hated it for three years."

Derwent nodded. "I know it."

Paul turned from the window with a fiercely eloquent gesture. At thirty——his face, like the figure, was more like an Indian's than when he was a boy. There was something in the cut of his chin, his neck, his shoulders, and the look in his eyes which seemed to set him widely apart from the scene he had moodily surveyed a moment before. Shadows were hidden behind them, restless and troubled shadows, which revealed themselves only now and then like ghosts whose grief could not always be kept behind walls of flesh. His eyes were a deeper blue than when his mother had known him, and they held a chained something which was forever struggling against the powerful will of the man. Occasionally the prisoner was released, and when this happened there was a singular, far-seeing, almost poetic beauty in them, and the steel went out of his flesh, so that he seemed all at once to come under the passing warmth of an influence other than that which had become so deeply rooted in his life.

Derwent's analytical mind had arrived at the truth of the matter a long time ago. He nodded again and repeated: "I know you don't like it. But it's a great work, just the same."

Paul looked at him with a grim smile, and Derwent surrounded himself with a cloud of smoke.

"Do you think I am quite a fool, Colin? Do you really believe I could be on a job of this kind for three years without getting a pretty accurate measurement of myself? The fraud of it all makes me sick! The dexterity of my friends—everybody treating me as if I were an omnisciently powerful godhead of some kind! I tell you it's all a lie, and I hate it. I'm glad I didn't build that outrage down there. I'm glad there isn't a mark of my hand upon it. Good-bye! I would die by inches rather than destroy a beautiful river for a thing like that—desecrate a masterpiece for a few dollars' profit, prostitute a gift which God put there when the world was made, that a few worms like you and me may turn it to our selfish ends. If there is a power that mounts the storm and walks upon the wind it ought to strike us dead for transforming a paradise into that!"

Weeks and months and years of gnawing torment had at last broken through the dam Paul had built up about his emotions, and he spoke words which yesterday he would have throttled in his breast.

"Fifty million dollars in and about that hole before it is finished, Derwent," he said. "My father's money. That is why I am here. A score of engineers are on this job, and every one of them is better fitted to fill my place than I. They have done the work, not I. Respectfully they submit suggestions when they know they should be commands. Yet they are slaves to my whims and desires as long as they remain on this work. I am the screaming tyrant of a financial monarchy. I hate that pit down there. I hate the millions going into it. I take no pride in what seems to thrill you all. If I filled my proper place I would be among the men digging and messing myself with clay, earning my six dollars a day. But I'm here instead. I do not have to succeed simply because I cannot fail. My father's millions attend to that. The millions cannot lose. They are all-powerful next to the Lord Jehovah. They get you and hold you, and you cannot break away. My father has never got away from them for a day's play in his life. And they've got me. I hate them, but that doesn't help. No matter where I go they follow me, haunt me, tie me hand and foot, criticize me, and mock me. Some times I have had a terrible thought. I would like to see those millions shrivel up and die. I would like to feel the necessities of life with my unskilled hands. I would like to feel the joy of knowing that I had to work or go hungry. What a thrill that must give one!"

He turned toward Derwent again, trying to stem the tide of his emotion with a smile.

"Pardon me. It's a gloomy day and I feel like raving. But I did love that glorious river before we cut it into ribbons. If my father would head his millions the other way and save such things instead of destroying them, I'd be quite happy. As it is, I suppose I must carry on until the d—d thing's finished."

"You owe yourself an apology," Derwent remonstrated, pocketing his pipe. "The engineers and your father's money are making the job successful, of course. But do you ever think of morals? That's a big thing, a mighty big thing. And it is what you have kept alive in the camps up and down the river for the last three years. You're too serious, you don't laugh enough, you don't join much in our parties and excitements, but people like you. That is what pulls the trick. Even the old hands, the engineers who worked in Egypt and Panama, love to be with you. There isn't a jealous man in the workings. To have made that condition possible is an achievement which makes you the most valuable human asset in the organization."

"It is good of you to say that," acknowledged Paul. "Funny how I should feel so strangely out of humor today. I think Carla's mother is getting on my nerves. Have you seen her recently?"

"This morning."

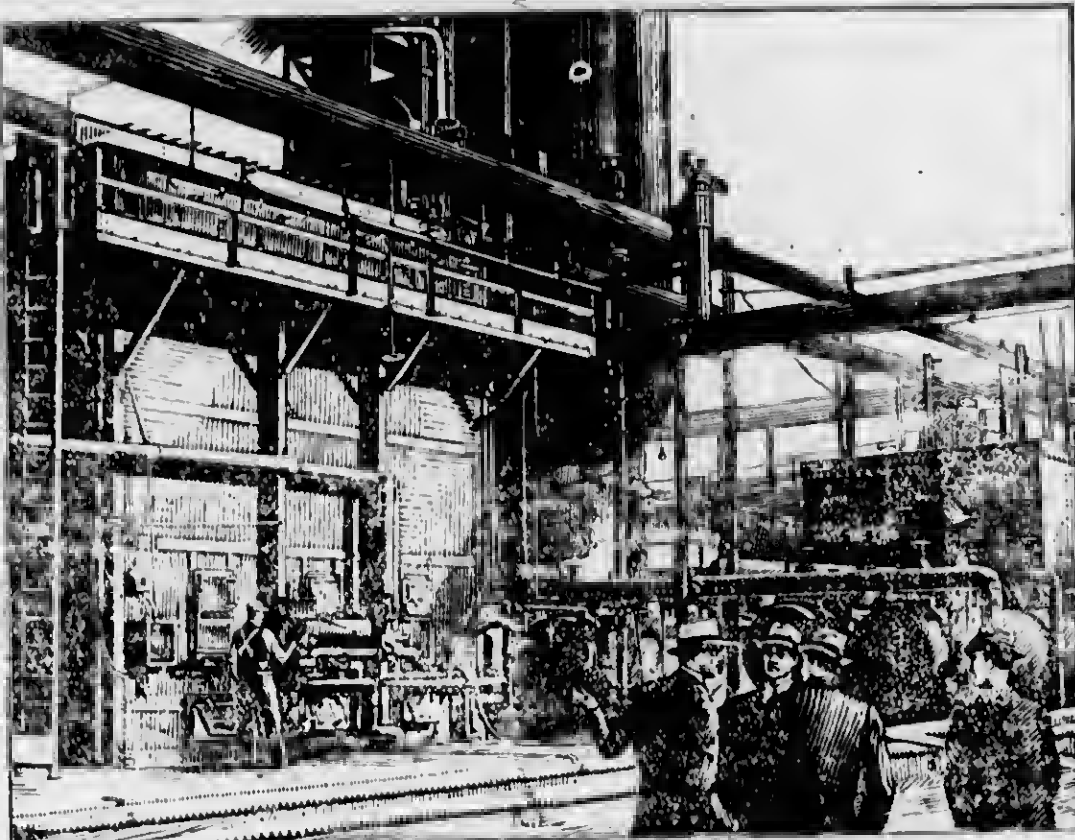

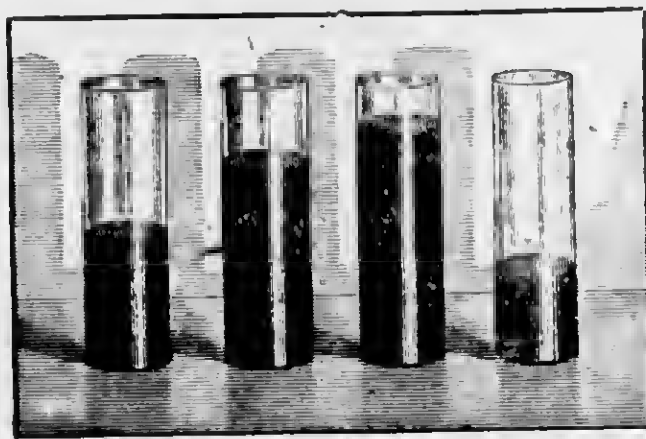

"And you still insist there is no hope?"

"Possibly. I had Doctor Thibault come up from Quebec, as you requested. He gives her even less time than I. Doctor Hollins agrees with him. It can't be more than three or four months, I think. Mrs. Haldan knows she is going to die and talks to us very calmly about it. She isn't afraid. The thought of it doesn't seem to cast a shadow over her motherly sweetness."

"She is keeping herself that way for Carla's sake. If it were not for Carla the thing wouldn't be such a tragedy."

"I know. It's Carla," said Paul. "Sudden sickness and death, like my own mother's, isn't so terrible. But seeing it coming, waiting for it, counting the days and weeks—must be horrible. Carla is losing everything she has when her mother goes. I'm wondering what she will do."

"Go on working among the children. She told my wife that yesterday. When the company's school closes here she will find another. I cannot an-than I do, and so lovely that half the men I know worship her. Yet she favors one no more than another. She is twenty-five, Lucy-Belle says. They like each other and have had their confidences. Lucy-Belle says there is a love affair in Carla's life, a broken one, which makes it impossible for Carla to love any other man or marry. Carla told her that."

Paul looked out of the window again, with his back to Derwent.

"What a rotter I am to blow up as I did a few minutes ago," he exclaimed. "But I was thinking of Carla and the obstinacy of life. Mine has been one way, Carla's another. I was born rich; she came over an immigrant baby. I did nothing but grow up; she fought with the perils of her race for an education after her father died, got it, and has been fighting for her own and her mother's existence ever since. I'm a man. She's a woman. I stand here and sympathize with myself and curse my luck for being what I am while she bears up like a soldier under her burdens. I saw her this morning. It was wet, soggy, gloomy, but she smiled. The sadness of all the world is back of that smile, but it doesn't spoil its sweetness or its cheer. She makes me feel how small I am and how inconsequential all this work is down in the pit. I would give all this down here—if it were mine to give—could I save her mother for her?"

Derwent put on his raincoat. "We all feel that way about it. And—we're helpless. Lucy-Belle wants you to come over to supper. Will you?"

"Thanks. Tell Lucy-Belle she is an angel to think of me so often. I'll come."

CHAPTER III

Paul sat at his desk after Derwent had gone. From his chair he could look through another window to a clean and unbroken sweep of country where the forest had stood, and where now were rows of cottages built for the men whose wives and families had come with them to the workings. He could see Lucy-Belle Derwent's home, and not far from it the cottage in which Carla Haldan and her mother lived. He had often felt an emptiness of heart and a great longing when his eyes rested upon these half hundred homes of the women whose love and loyalty had urged them to follow their husbands' fortunes. His wife was not among them. Only twice in three years had she come up to what she had called "these horrible woods," and then she had departed after a day or two. Her picture was on his desk. He knew she was beautiful, in a vivid, golden way. But her beauty had never touched him deeply. It had been for him like a beauty of a flower made by a master craftsman from paper or glass, without the rare, sweet perfume which should have been a part of it, and for which he had yearned all his life. He had thought of her as a lovely bird in a gilded cage—and the cage was the palace which he called his home. It was a senseless thought, for the cage did not hold her often. She was in Europe now. Last year it was Egypt. Next year it would be some other far-away place.

He had been true to the woman on his desk, just as he knew she was true to him, and whatever he had wanted in woman he tried to build up about her. He wanted to love her. He did have the ideal which he created of her, a kind of dream woman, whom he endowed with a great love for himself and placed in one of the cottages which he could see from his office window.

He did not realize that during recent months he had clothed this ideal a little at a time in what he found in Carla Haldan. Yesterday he had received a letter from Paula. It was friendly and full of interest, quite a long letter, but without a line in it to say she wanted him or was looking forward to the time when she would see him again. She must have written it in her dressing room, with her hair down, for one of the long, fine spun golden filaments had got into the letter somehow, and

INFLATION BRINGS IT

The stock market breaks and many suffer. Investors lose their savings. Many individuals and companies take losses which threaten their financial stability. But the big loser on the stock market is the gambler. He has played for profits in a dangerous game and has lost.

We are now in another kind of a depression. A few days ago wheat sold at the lowest price in 16 years. The price of many grains and agricultural commodities is low. Butterfat has seen a serious decline—enough to destroy a margin of profit.

It is not our purpose to discuss the causes of this condition. That might take more room than there is in the entire paper. We pointed out that the loser in the stock market was the gambler. When the price of agriculture products breaks the loser is the man who has gambled. Those who have played, have lost. Those who have not played, have not lost. They pay for them with tired backs and clouded heads.

If we trace the immediate causes of depression we find them in the false prosperity which has marked the recent period of inflation. Industry has been in a condition similar to that which prevailed in agriculture 20 years ago before the break which bankrupted thousands of farmers. And as the acute distress of farming and its effect upon industry, so the breaks in industry have their effects upon agriculture.

If prices are too high at any time they must come down. And when they come the losses quickly absorb the paper profit of inflation.

The chief task of American business is to keep itself sound. In that process it is just as necessary to avoid inflation as depression.—Grand Rapids (Minn.) Herald-Review.

UNFAIR TO FACTORY OWNERS

We do not know who the author was, but there has lately appeared in a number of newspapers an editorial condemning factory owners for discharging all workers who had reached the age of 45 years.

It is certain, however, that whoever wrote it was not himself an employer of labor. He does not know of the attachment that exists between employer and employee or he would have known that his statement was utterly unfair and without foundation.

If you have any doubts put yourself opposite the nearest factory when the whistle blows and see how many men just 45 years come out of those factory doors. Many of them have been with the concern since it started and who will continue to work as long as they are able—and the faithful will be carried on the payroll even after that.

Ask the average factory owner how much extra time he has put in during the last six months to keep the wheels turning. Many of them would have been ahead financially had they closed their doors until a flooded market in their lines had been cleared. But they kept going, kept trying to widen their market, they had a responsibility in those workers they refused to shirk, and not one of them discharged an employee because he had grown too old in their service.

Years ago, when most of the manufacturing concerns were located in the New England states, magazines gained circulation throughout the rest of the country by picturing factory owners as cruel, soulless tyrants who ground down labor to the lowest notch in order to keep them always under control. Perhaps some of that belief, so widely and persistently sown, still exists. It was a day when the terrible experiences of "Little Nell, the sewing machine girl," always brought tears to our eyes.

Most factory owners of today began life in the ranks and gradually reached their present positions. They started in the days when wages were low—they know what it is to make a small wage cover unexpected demands on the family purse. Their sympathy is with the worker—especially the older workers—they come from homes where there were older workers as breadwinners. They have not forgotten those lean times when debt and despair were often upon the household.

The man who works faithfully at his job, whether he be a sprightly lad just reaching manhood, or has passed the dividing line that reaches into old age, need never fear of losing his job as long as his employer can find work for him to do. The employer knows, everybody knows, that our future lies in happy, contented, well-paid men and women workers. In no other country have they fared so well.

PESSIMISM IS PASSING
Pessimism, which attached itself to some parts of the motor industry immediately following the beginning of the year, seems to be passing. Already a growing outlook is seen and there is a general belief that conditions will steadily continue to improve with the last six months of the year proving a better last half than 1929.

Most of the early depression in the industry was caused by the resolve of the manufacturers in January to produce only such cars as retail sales warranted, and not to force large quotas on dealers.

The wisdom of this decision will be apparent later. Compared with 1927 and 1928 the industry at the present time is in a healthy condition. The overproduction mistakes during the first six months of 1929, when all production records were smashed, will not be repeated this year.

There is every reason why optimism should prevail at the present time. Capable executives are at the head of the motor industry and their efforts should not be hampered by a public engaged in spreading wild stories of an impending disaster.

A good Fisk Bicycle Tire for $1.65. The best Fisk Bicycle tire for $2.25. Sanoco Oil Station.—Adv. 121-1.

SUCCESSFUL MERCHANTS
We hear much of the so-called "independent" merchant.

The term hardly fits the meaning. No merchant who is really successful is very independent. He is less so than he ever was.

The successful merchant of today depends upon many elements that did not concern him a generation ago. He is more dependent upon his jobber who not only sells him goods but tells him how to sell to his customers. In modern merchandising the jobber talks about paint and display. He brings ideas of advertising and salesmanship. He helps to establish good business methods.

The manufacturer is also more important. He lays down the methods by which his goods must be sold. He presents conditions of sale and use.

A COLLEGE NURSE IN HOTEL MANAGEMENT
One of these days maybe it will be recognized that it takes a "college education" to run a summer hotel. Indeed, the association of Michigan hotel keepers has the idea that a little college training for the man in charge of their affairs wouldn't come amiss. So they have sponsored a movement to provide a short course in hotel administration at Michigan State College. It should prove an enterprising valuable to the hotel business and to Michigan in general.

The creation of a truly good hotel presents a lot of the difficulties that confront the fine art of home-making. The sincere greeting in the office, the courteous welcome to a cheerful room, the good meal in pleasant surroundings and the fair price, all form a combination of attractions that powerfully back up an intelligent advertising program.

Michigan is spending good money to induce tourists to try our vacationing advantages. A string of well-equipped hotels furnishing intelligent service will be a big influence in holding the patronage the advertising secures.—Detroit News.

THE POLL ON PROHIBITION
The Literary Digest is conducting a poll among twenty million men and women in the United States on the prohibition question. It is the most gigantic effort to determine public sentiment that has ever been attempted. The results should be as nearly correct as any human agency could make them.

Every portion of the country will be penetrated, every strata of society will be reached. It is being conducted so that those voting will not have to attach their names to the ballots—there will be nothing to prevent them from giving a correct expression of their convictions on this great social problem.

The results of the poll will not change existing laws. New legislation will be needed for that. It will probably not change many opinions, but it will reveal how a vast portion of our people are thinking after a ten year's trial as a dry nation.

PASSING BONEYARDS
Motor car manufacturers were wise when they decided to sponsor a plan to reduce to the salvage pile some 400,000 wornout and decrepit motor cars throughout the country.

Not only will such a plan open a vastly greater market for their eventual replacement but it will result in improved conditions for safety on the highways where these unfit cars were being operated.

As the motor industry advances we may look for additional examples like this for protecting themselves and the public. Plans will be worked out where the final depreciation of a car will be borne by the manufacturer and hasten the day when unsightly automobile boneyards now disfiguring the highways will disappear from the face of the earth.

The dealer, the public, the manufacturer themselves, will profit by this latest move.

THE DEADLY MERGER
From L. A. Rossman, editor of the Grand Rapids (Minn.) Herald-Review, comes a new warning against mergers—at least the merger between conviviality and carelessness.

The Minnesota editor says: "If you have been taking a few drinks and are going into the garage with your car, be sure to turn the engine off very quickly."

"It has been established by scientists that those who have been using alcohol are especially sensitive to the carbon monoxide gas that is found in the fumes from the exhaust. Alcohol put the system in especially good shape to get the full effect of this odorless, tasteless, colorless gas which kills quickly."

"Beware of this gas at all times. Alcohol mixes well with few things—but this is an exception."

FISH MARKERS TO DIRECT VISITORS TO FISH PONDS
Five hundred black and white metal fishes will direct visitors during the coming summer to the department of conservation's trout rearing ponds scattered throughout the state.

The metal signs will be erected along trunk line highways in the vicinity of the ponds.

Hundreds of people visit these ponds each year to see countless numbers of baby trout and watch them being fed.

Chevrolet announcesA NEWSERVICE POLICY

The Chevrolet Motor Company and its dealers are pleased to announce a new service policy—one of the most liberal ever offered on a low-priced automobile.

Put into force as a written agreement given to the purchaser by the Chevrolet dealer when the car is delivered—it offers the following provisions:

1 Every Chevrolet owner receives his car from the dealer in perfect condition—thoroughly lubricated, properly adjusted, and ready to operate efficiently from the first mile of ownership.

2 Every Chevrolet owner is entitled to free inspection and adjustment of his car at the end of the first 500 miles of usage.

3 Every Chevrolet owner is entitled to free inspection of his car every 1000 miles thereafter, so long as the car is in operation.

4 Every Chevrolet owner is entitled to free replacement of any part which may prove defective in workmanship or material, within the terms of Chevrolet's standard warranty. This includes both parts and labor.

5 Provision number 4 will be carried out by any Chevrolet dealer in the United States. As a result, the Chevrolet owner may travel to any part of the country, with assurance that the guarantee on materials and workmanship will remain in force.

This new policy constitutes proof of Chevrolet's high quality—for such liberal provisions could only be made in connection with a car built of fine materials to exacting standards of workmanship.

Back of this policy, and assuring its successful operation, is one of the most complete and efficient service organizations in the world.

There are more than 10,000 Authorized Chevrolet Dealer Service Stations in the United States alone. Each employs skilled mechanics thoroughly trained at Chevrolet Service Schools. Each has specially designed tools and machinery developed exclusively for Chevrolet service work. And each has on hand, at all times, an adequate stock of genuine Chevrolet replacement parts.

Chevrolet's flat-rate charges, including both parts and labor, are the lowest in the industry on many service operations!

In considering the purchase of a low-priced automobile, think what this service means—in terms of lasting satisfaction, as well as in increased economy.

WASHINGTON NEWS LETTER.

Time Off for Flattery

Much as a senator might disagree with a colleague on everything from tariff schedules to the League of Nations, his opponent is always, in senatorial parlance, "the distinguished senator from So-and-So" or the speaker's "very good friend." Though flattery more personal than this is rare, two exceptions occurred recently during the tariff debate. Senator Copeland of New York, advocating a duty on open hms (probably as an essential factor in farm relief) referred to "the opera hat, which is now commonly worn by handsome young men like the senator from Maryland."

Gallant as well as handsome, the senator from Maryland, Mr. Tydings, sprang to his feet and protested. "Mr. President, the senator only sees himself reflected when he looks at me."

"I feel flattered," Senator Copeland returned, "I wish it might be true."

On another occasion Senator Smoot of Utah said to Senator Barkley of Kentucky who objected to high tariffs on a certain type of foreign-made overcoat, "The senator would not wear one of them; I know he is too sensible." However, the Kentuckian was so little astounded by this striking tribute to his intelligence that he never budged from his position, and Mr. Smoot's pretty diplomacy was wasted.

The Tired Business Woman

Through living models and moving pictures, action and still life, colored displays and black-and-white charts, the Women's Bureau of the United States Department of Labor, made its impression to the national industrial exposition in Chicago during the early part of March.

All exhibits of the bureau were centered around the idea of reducing fatigue of women workers, eliminating wasteful factors in industry, and promoting the welfare of women generally. Health and first-aid programs of more progressive industrial establishments were portrayed in demonstrations each afternoon. Guarded machinery, comfortable work chairs, adequate sanitary facilities and similar marks of the up-to-date industry were shown in moving pictures actually taken in plants of various sections of the country.

Women working in the cotton field, berry patch, telephone exchange, garment factory, business office, private home and other fields were graphically represented in a replica of the seven miniature stage models, which attracted universal attention at the Seville Exposition last year.

Looks Like a Gliding Summer

Ever since Colonel Charles Lindbergh's recent escape, popular interest in gliding has grown. Glider clubs are being formed throughout the country, and displays of advanced types of gliders and soarsers draw crowds.

America has surpassed all other nations in various phases of aeronautical development, but Germany still holds the record for high-grade gliding and soaring. One reason for her superiority is a more suitable typography that has its counterpart in very few areas of the United States. Elemental or pleasure gliding, however, is possible all over this country. The motorless aircraft may be launched in various ways. One is to start it down the side of a long steep hill. Another is to tow it behind an automobile until sufficient momentum is acquired to allow a take-off. The latter method is not recommended to amateurs, say glider experts emphatically.

Unless the glider enthusiast is fairly well experienced in handling his craft, there isn't much chance that he will get far enough from the ground to hurt himself in case of an unhappy landing. Relatively safe, inexpensive, easy to manipulate—what more could the sport-loving ask?

Politics and Personalities

A more ridiculous situation than that which exists in the United States senate during closing days of tariff revision would be hard to imagine. Logrolling and vote-trading are certainly not lacking in precedence, but this latest spectacle of personal greed is enough to make the most hardened weep.

Oil, lumber, cement, plate glass, and sugar are acting cohesively on the cohorts of the new senatorial group which arose over-night to demolish the six months' achievements of the Coalition. "You scratch my back, and I'll scratch yours" is their time-honored motto. Tariffs on all these schedules had been denied during consideration of the bill in committee of the whole—but what was a little obstacle like that? There were still individual amendments to be considered, and a second vote to be had for the asking. What could be easier than to pool their separate interests and, with the aid of stand-patters who can be trusted on all occasions to deliver a high-tariff vote, achieve what they all wanted? Of course, a few convictions might have to be sacrificed; but surely constituents interested in oil wouldn't mind paying higher prices for their sugar and lumber, and so on down the line. So lumber and oil senators who had voted against sugar on the first ballot cheerfully reversed themselves on the second. Sugar senators who had opposed the cement duties "switched" without compunction. Open accusations and denunciations from fellow-senators and the press deterred them not at all.

To show what the consumer pays for tariff-making of this sort, we quote Senator McMASTER's estimate as follows: $902,000,000 for oil, $32,000,000 for sugar, $50,000,000 for lumber, $15,000,000 for plate glass, and $53,000,000 for cement—a total of more than $1,000,000,000. It does make our tax reduction of $160,000,000 seem rather insignificant, doesn't it?

American Engineers at Home in Nicaragua

With long months of work ahead, the United States army engineers now in Nicaragua to make a complete survey of the route or routes for the proposed new interoceanic canal, are settling down to hard labor. The battalion, under command of Major Dan I. Sultan, Engineer Corps, established headquarters at the city of Granada on their arrival in November last. The force of 24 officers and nearly 300 men have been divided into three companies with company headquarters at points most convenient to cover the entire route of the canal from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

"Dense, featureless, gloomy jungle, all steep slopes, swampy ground and creeks flowing in every direction," is the picture of the route as given by Lieutenant Kerynan Rice, one of the survey officers. For this reason, as well as other factors such as rainy seasons, it is not expected that the report will be completed before the end of 1931. However, the officers report conditions as cheerful and express gratitude for the radius which bring them Amos 'n' Andy as well as other American echoes. Some of the officers have brought their wives down and installed their homes in comfortable cabins at the camps. The cordiality and helpfulness of the Nicaraguan people have been emphasized in reports from the battalion. Every class of Nicaraguan, from laborers who help build the camps, fishermen who serve as guides, and humble families in the village to high officials of the Republic, have been lauded for their helpfulness.

To unite all of Nicaragua in a network of surface roads, the country is turning over a large proportion of national revenue to highway construction. These highways will serve to transport to railways and airports the coffee, hardwoods, cattle and other products for exportation. Expansion of Nicaraguan commerce with the rest of the world is shortly expected to surpass by far the 1928 record of $11,700,000.

The Open Road

Passports at ten dollars each were issued to 196,930 Americans last year, according to the state department at Washington. Why do we go to Europe—to purchase Paris gowns, to look at cathedrals, and to say "Yes, I've been abroad"? Or do we travel with the exhilarating idea of meeting and knowing citizens of other countries in their native setting? Catering to the second category of travelers is the work of a non-profit-making organization, The Open Road, existent in New York since 1925.

Groups that travel under Open Road auspices invariably have a common interest, be it professional, cultural, or social. Through collaborating organizations in other lands, American travelers are received and entertained by Europeans also having that interest. One large branch of Open Road activity concerns itself with the roomings of college students during vacation time. An advisory committee of prominent educators supervise these academic tours which include the broader cultural and educational travels as well as the special interest or vocational trips.

To help make reciprocal its plan for international contacts, the Open Road will sponsor this spring a tour in America to be taken by a large party of distinguished journalists from the northern countries of Europe who will visit America as guests of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

COUNTY NORMAL NEWS.

For the next two weeks house-keeping is in charge of Miss Ogden and Miss Abbey.

Last Friday morning some interesting singing exercises were conducted by Miss Ogden and Miss Trimble. Every Normal student is to know a certain number of the songs in the Golden Book, and these two student teachers helped us in learning some of the more important.

A St. Patrick's party was given by Mr. Sullivan and Miss Jolls at Miss Jolls' home on Friday of last week. The games and decorations were in keeping with the occasion as well as the delicious refreshments which were served later.

Interest is very keen now between the fourth and sixth grade classes of spelling. The blue side, or fourth grade, are still ahead, as they have been from the start, but the red side or sixth grade, are making a desperate attempt to catch up with them.

Music and art formerly taught by Mrs. McKee in the Normal room have been discontinued during the last term. However, every student teacher is allowed to teach both music and art for one day in the Training room.

Half day teaching has begun again for the other half the class who didn't get a chance to teach a half day during the second term. On Tuesday afternoon Miss Richardson teaches and on Thursday afternoon Miss LaCour.

On Monday morning two outstanding evidences of spring were noticed by the Normal students. One was the real pusses, which were placed among the various plants about the room and the other was Miss Biggie's familiar Ford.

Last Friday morning the Normal class very much enjoyed playing indoor baseball for physical training.

THE UNEMPLOYED

President Hoover says the unemployment situation, the worst in years, is beginning to clear. Industrial, utility, and governmental expansion programs are already absorbing thousands of idle workmen. Thousands of additional workmen are expected to find employment when the more suitable building months of the year arrive.

This is the most encouraging news we have heard in a long time. Unemployment is the world's greatest menace to progress. When men are hungry and out of work everybody suffers. Not one class, but every class, feels this economic pinch. Even the arts and sciences are affected when poverty stalks abroad in the land.

We cannot hope to cure the ills of unemployment entirely through legislation. But there is certain kinds of legislation that would be helpful. The employment of two million boys and girls in factories while two million men, heads of families, are without work is an economic mistake. It should be corrected by law.

Boys and girls should not be allowed or forced to work in factories except in unavoidable cases where extreme necessity demands. They should not be working during the years when they should be playing, laboring when they should be learning. Our greatest waste today is in impaired bodies and undeveloped brain power. We should not need to be urged to insist on a better contribution to posterity than we are now making.

THE CANDIDATE

We catch the sound of new voices crying aloud in the wilderness. The political season is beginning. Already a few have announced their intentions and hopes. The chorus will increase in volume as the season advances. Always we find that "Many are called, but few chosen."

Political years are creative of an entirely new atmosphere surrounding our local, state and national horizons. If we do not take our politics too seriously these biennial contests are always interesting. When we become too absorbed in candidates and policies we spoil much of the pleasure that should be found in the selection of our public servants and the things they stand for.

Every person who aspires to public preferment cannot expect to be favored at the hands of the voters. To imagine that everyone who is not an active supporter is an enemy, is a mistake. Oftentimes the people are forced to choose between a half dozen candidates for the same office. This position brings about many embarrassing situations.

Not many of us would object to being singled out for political honors by our fellow citizens. That, in many cases more than the salary attached, causes people to seek office. But after being elected to office the candidate finds himself confronted with the task of doing his job well, and of keeping on the good side of the voters. Not everyone can do this double headed job. But that won't keep us from having plenty of candidates when primary day approaches.

FARMS vs. JUNGLES

There has been considerable talk about the use of butter substitutes by dairy farmers.

A large number of people use butter substitutes on account of economy. Pound for pound the oleomargarines are cheaper. In terms of food values a pound of butter is worth at least two of the competing substitutes. Dairy farmers know that and for this reason should be the last to use competing products.

When butter is of high price other things will be used. A lower price for butter affects the market for its substitutes. Michigan is interested in using butter. We profit from the cow, not the coconut. It those who now use substitutes would realize the much greater food value of butter, it would help the dairy industry.

CRIME NEVER PAYS

Scarcely a single day in the year passes that does not see a new face among the inmate population at the Michigan Reformatory. Some days there are several new faces. Gradually the prison population grows. The end never seems in sight.

These inmates are mostly first term men. They comprise all kinds and classes of society. They come from the dregs of the city, from respected homes, from places high in their community, but invariably they come because of a desire to possess something without giving adequate value in return.

COMPARE VALUES BEFORE YOU BUY AN AUTOMOBILE

Low charges for distribution of the new Ford save you at least $50 to $75 in addition to the many savings in making the car

THESE are days when every dollar counts. The period of reckless spending is over. People are going back to the good old-fashioned principles of thrift and economy. Value is again being carefully considered.

Nowhere is this more important than in the selection of an automobile. For the purchase of a car represents a considerable investment. It should not be decided on hurriedly, but only after analyzing every important factor that concerns cost, value and performance. The time to do this is before buying—not afterward when it is too late.

ON THE basis of cost, performance and the actual comparative worth of every part, the new Ford is a value far above the price you pay. It is made of better materials and with greater care and accuracy because of the recognized efficiency and economy of Ford manufacturing methods.

The value of these methods is known and understood by millions of people. It is not generally realized, however, that these same principles of efficiency and economy are applied also to every step in the distribution of the Ford car. The low cost of selling, financing time payments, etc., means a direct saving to you of at least $50 to $75 in addition to the money saved by Ford economies in making the car. Here are three reasons why this is so.

(1) The Ford dealer does business on a smaller margin of profit because of the greater number of cars he sells. His discount or commission is the lowest of any automobile dealer. The difference in your favor, ranging from 25% to nearly 50%, comes right off the price you pay for the car.

(2) The Ford charges for financing are low.

(3) No expensive extra equipment is needed when you buy a Ford. The car leaves the factory ready for use. The f.o.b. price includes a Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield and an extra steel-spoke wheel, in addition to four Houdaille double-acting shock absorbers and fully enclosed four-wheel brakes. Any accessories you may wish for your individual taste are sold considerably below the usual prices. None of these charges for selling, financing or accessories is marked up or increased to cover a high trade-in allowance on a used car.

Get all the facts, therefore, before you buy and figure out just what you are getting for your automobile dollars. Go beyond the f.o.b. price and find out how much more you pay the dealer than the dealer pays at the factory. Analyze the used-car allowance. Compare all charges—item for item—value for value.

WHEN you do this you will have a new appreciation of what the Ford Motor Company and Ford dealers are doing to keep down the cost of Ford cars. You will also know why it is possible to put so much real value into the new Ford and still retain the low price. The money you pay goes for value in the car. It is not wasted in excessive costs in manufacturing or selling.

FORD MOTOR COMPANY

A checkup of the Ionia institution reveals that most crimes are committed for money. And the price of crime is human happiness destroyed by prison and disgrace.

There is not one man among the two thousand or more inmates whose earnings from crime ever equalled a fair compensation compared to that enjoyed by the man with a job. They might better have taken a job digging ditches. At least they would have saved their happiness and self respect.

We study this single phase of the crime problem. We wonder at the incongruity of those men who were foolish enough to try to wrest even a small gain out of the poorest paying business in the world.

THE RECKLESS DRIVER

There is not much consolation for the reckless driver in the action of the state supreme court, which a few days ago came out strongly for the validity of the negligent homicide act. Heretofore the court had been divided on this question, with the result that many prosecuting attorneys were reluctant to prefer charges under the act against drivers of automobiles involved in fatal accidents.

Although we have no speed limit under the Michigan law, the driver of an automobile is supposed to have his car under control all the time. The court by its latest ruling says that this is all that a jury needs to know in deciding whether a driver was negligent or reckless in causing death.

The law says in effect: "You may not drive recklessly, you must have your car under complete control, you must be able to stop within the assured clear distance ahead, and if there is an accident, your failure to stop is prima facie evidence of recklessness on your part."

NOT SO BAD

It is frequently said that because the stock market went to pieces that this condition should not affect trade in nutting communities.

Perhaps it should not, but it does. Quite a few people in small towns were speculating. The number was greater than we might ordinarily believe. And the folks from the small towns went down as did those from the larger cities.

But the effect upon business has been in another direction. The fall in stocks was dramatic and striking. It sent a chill through everybody, irrespective of their market activities. Necessity compelled many people to again measure the value of a dollar. That was contagious.

It will do the nation as a whole no harm to spend carefully for a while. It will help everyone to save. There is nothing at all wrong in having people live within their means, contract spending and expand saving.—Grand Rapids (Minn.) Herald-Review.

AT THE MOVIES.

Real Frenchman Directs Jeanne Engels' "Jealousy."

Paris is the setting of the new Paramount picture, "Jealousy," starring Jeanne Engels, which comes to the Palace Theatre for two days starting Saturday, and every precaution was taken at the Long Island studio where it was produced to insure the faithful creation of a Parisian atmosphere.

A French director was a matter of course. He was Jean de Limur, who directed Miss Engels in her first big talking picture, "The Letter," a man whose home was in Paris for the greater part of his life and later a technical director in Hollywood on pictures having to do with French life.

"Jealousy" is based upon a French play by Louis Verneuil. It tells the tragic love story of a girl who had a fashionable dress shop in Paris, was the darling of a rich old man and of the clash between the two. The dress shop and the residence of the characters, both interior and exterior scenes, are particularly faithful to the French manner.

Spearing for great northern pike, grass pike or pickerel will be permitted in non-trout rivers and streams from May 1, to May 31, inclusive.

All fishing will cease April 1 in all inland lakes of the state, until June 25, except on designated pike and trout lakes in which fishing will be permitted after May 1 for perch, wall-eyed pike, grass pike, muskellunge and non-game fish, and all species of trout. The limit catch of pike is five per day. Each pike must be at least 14 inches long.

CITY OFFICIALS INSPECT POWER PLANTS

Seek Suitable Unit to Add to Charlevoix Power Equipment.

A matter demanding a lot of attention from city officials at the present time is the selection of a new unit for the municipal power plant.

Dan Soule, superintendent of the city light and water departments, returned early this week from the upper peninsula, where he inspected plants at St. Ignace, Newberry and Marquette.

Wednesday afternoon members of the council left for St. Louis, Michigan, where they will inspect a Diesel plant which seems to have given good satisfaction and is much in favor. The proposition will be settled when the City Dads find suitable equipment.

Reading room Tuesday and Saturday, 3:00 to 5:00 p. m.

The public is cordially invited to all services.

"Substance" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Christian churches on Sunday, March 16.

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Then Peter said, Silver and gold I have none; but such as I have give I thee: In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk" (Acts 3:6).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Christian Science declares that Mind is substance, also that matter neither feels, suffers, nor enjoys. Hold these points strongly in view. Keep in mind the verity of being—that man is the image and likeness of God, in whom all being is painless and permanent" (p. 414).

WON COUNTY CHAMPIONSHIP
HERE FRIDAY NIGHT.

Boys City Junior in Second Place;
Consolation Went to Harbor
Springs Basketball.

Coach Bingham's scrappy junior high school basketball team gave Charlevoix their first title of the year last Friday evening when they defeated Boys City Juniors 17 to 15 in the finals of the 2nd annual Charlevoix county junior high championships played in the local gymnasium.

The final contest was a nip-and-tuck affair from start to finish. At a disadvantage against the much larger players on the Boys City squad, Charlevoix's juniors made up the difference by superior basket-shooting and fighting spirit. Boys' inability to locate the ring cost them the victory. Although leading by several points at the close of the third period, Charlevoix saw their advantage dwindle as the fourth quarter advanced. The final gun found them out in front by two points, however, which was sufficient to win the title.

Richardson, Charlevoix right forward, led his team-mates with 6 points. Chew scored 5, Withers 4, Anee and Dixon each one. Fitzpatrick, with 8 points, led Boys' scoring.

In the opening contest of the tournament, Charlevoix easily defeated East Jordan by a 17 to 9 count. In the other half of the afternoon bill, Boys City entered the finals by defeating Harbor Springs, 13 to 8.

In the opening game on the evening program, Harbor Springs defeated East Jordan in a close game by a count of 14 to 10 to win the consolation.

To Charlevoix, the winning team, goes possession for one year of the championship cup. The trophy was held last year by Boys City, who won the initial tournament at East Jordan. The team winning the cup three times takes permanent possession. The runner-up and consolation winner were awarded handsome plaques.

John Ferenz, athletic director of Traverse City schools, was the referee of all tournament games. At the close of play he awarded trophies to the winners, and announced the following all-tournament team:

Forwards: Crawford, East Jordan; Chew, Charlevoix, captain; center: Allred, Harbor Springs; Guards: Davis, Boys City; Dixon, Charlevoix. Utility players—center, Fitzpatrick, Boys City; forward, Lane, Harbor Springs; guard, Batterbee, East Jordan.

STRAITS ICE GIVES CARFERRY TROUBLE

The car ferry, Chief Wawatam is beginning to encounter trouble with the ice moving in the straits and closing up her channel, a trouble which is met with every spring. The great body of ice extending out into Lake Michigan has started to crowd down and this will continue until the straits are clear. The ice coming down finds an outlet to the north of Mackinac Island and into Lake Huron. The ice bridge at Point Nipigon is still firm.

THE WEEK'S WEATHER

As we go to press today, this region is experiencing another of those early spring blizzards. The storm started late Tuesday afternoon and is still going strong. The ground, once bare, is piled high with snow and road crews are having difficulty keeping highways open. We thought for a while that Spring was here, but—well, what's the use of kicking.

Temperatures have been generally low for the past week. They are furnished as follows from the U. S. Coast Guard station:

POSTPONED FEBRUARY TERM
OPENED HERE MONDAY.

Several Criminal, Chancery and Probation Cases Have Been Disposed of at This Time.

The postponed February term of circuit court for Charlevoix county opened Monday morning with Judge Parm C. Gilbert of Traverse City, presiding. Up to the present time a list of probation cases, several chancery cases and some criminal cases have been disposed of.

Nelson Baker and Philo Ostrum pleaded guilty to breaking and entering and will be sentenced later.

Bernard Newson of Burgess, was ordered to pay costs of $500 for violation of the prohibition law. He was placed on probation for two years under $500 cash bond.

John Potoskey and Edward Walker were fined $50 each on a similar charge and were placed on probation. John Olson of Boys City, pleaded guilty to a charge of embezzlement. He was ordered to pay costs of $200, and was placed on probation under $500 cash bond for a period of two years.

William Scott of Eveline township, pleaded guilty to a charge of black-mail. He was ordered to pay costs of $500 and was placed on probation for two years under cash bond of the same amount.

Edward Lachene of Boys City, pleaded guilty to violation of the prohibition law. He will be sentenced later.

Several probationers have reported to the court and in all instances their cases were continued.

The jury was dismissed Tuesday afternoon and will not be recalled. Several cases needing jury-men have been discontinued, others dismissed and some carried over. Judge Gilbert tried divorce cases Wednesday morning and will probably adjourn the present term either Wednesday afternoon or Thursday.

BENZIE SLAYER IS SENT TO PRISON

Morris Brozofsky Draws Maximum Term for Crime Committed.

Morris Brozofsky, 36-year-old ex-convict, must spend the rest of his natural life in Marquette branch prison for the slaying of undersheriff Edward Rarey of Benzie county, at a deserted Platte Lake cottage, recently.

Sentence on the self-confessed killer was passed by circuit court judge Parm C. Gilbert of Traverse City, at Beulah last Friday night.

Brozofsky was captured in the Traverse City residence of an elderly acquaintance Tuesday night of last week after an intensive search by northern Michigan sheriff's posse.

He was taken to Beulah from the county jail at Manistee, where he had been held since his arrest because authorities feared mob violence. Rarey was shot down as he and a party of deputies cornered Brozofsky as a cottage prowler.

CHARLEVOIX MAY GET STATE MEET

WANT MICHIGAN AMATEUR GOLF TOURNEY HERE.

Event Attracts Over One Hundred Amateurs—Would Be Held Late in Month of July.

If negotiations now under way are successful, the Belvedere Golf Club course will be the scene of two major golfing events during the 1930 summer season. Officials of the Club have been invited to hold the Michigan State amateur tournament during the latter part of the month of July, and definite word of their acceptance is expected within a short time.

The Michigan State amateur tournament would be a four-day event, with the tentative dates set for July 23, 24, 25 and 26. It would attract between 100 and 150 golfers to Charlevoix and coming shortly after the Great Lakes Open, which is already assured, would certainly be a nice attraction. The players pay their own expenses and prizes are furnished.

The following Associated Press dispatches, appearing in the March 21st issue of the Grand Rapids Press, give additional information concerning the event. The first is issued from Pinehurst, N. C., quoting John R. Bowker, executive secretary of the Great Lakes Golf association, and the second from Detroit, quoting James Standish, Jr., who is in charge of the Michigan amateur event. The dispatches follow:

"John R. Bowker of Detroit, chairman of the Charlevoix Golf Club committee, vacationing here, said the 1930 Michigan State amateur tournament might be played on the Charlevoix links. He received a letter from James D. Standish, Jr., of Detroit, asking if the course would be available for the Michigan State event, and saying that the Jackson Country Club course is not in condition. The Charlevoix Club probably will grant the request, Bowker said."

"James Standish, Jr., in charge of arrangements for the 1930 Michigan Amateur Golf tournament, said that the Jackson Country Club has given up plans of holding the tournament on its course. Any plans for holding the tournament at the Charlevoix Club are only tentative, he said."

Charlevoix interests are very much in favor of the tournament and have expressed the desire that the Belvedere Club may see its way clear to hold the event.

ANNUAL SENIOR PLAY APRIL 3RD

"UNDERTWENTY," A THREE-ACT
COMEDY, TO BE GIVEN.

Excellent Plot and Cast of Characters Promises Excellent Evening Of Entertainment.

On the evening of Thursday, April 3, after several weeks of arduous preparation, the Charlevoix high school seniors will present their annual class play at the school gymnasium.

The production, a three-act comedy entitled "Under Twenty," is a Samuel French publication. The plot is an exceptionally good one. Mr. Farnum, a middle aged character of 45, and supposedly wealthy, was in danger of bankruptcy because of the extravagance of his wife and daughter, Grace. His youngest daughter, Peeks, a lively, if somewhat mischievous girl of 17, proposes to have the more dignified Grace, of 20 years, marry a man of wealth, thus saving the family from bankruptcy. Grace is already in love with Ted Rutherford, who at the time cared more for pleasure than work, but at the suggestion of Peeks, Grace agrees to marry Donald Brown, who works an oil well on a 50-50 basis with Diana Edgerton, a friend of the Farnum family and very much determined to marry Don.

Eventually Don proposes to Grace during the absence of Ted, who has gone to Chicago to visit his uncle, a chewing-gum king, and upon his return to the Farnum family with Diane, he, himself, is a chewing-gum king. He encounters Grace, who declares she will go through the wedding with Don, although she is in love with Ted.

Peeks and Ted get their mind together and successfully plan a happy ending for the young couples.

Following is the cast of characters:

Russell Farnum.....Roy Kelderhouse
Ida Farnum.....Doris Solomon
Grace Farnum.....Dorothy Withers
Peeks Farnum.....Arlene Supernaw
Rannie.....Marguerite Gimble
Ted Rutherford.....Joe Smith
Donald Brown.....Oscar Stroud
Diana Edgerton.....Esther Goldstick
Bill Boyd.....Ronald Swanson

BEAVER ISLAND HAS AIR MAIL SERVICE

Temporary Contract Awarded to Michigan Air Express.

Through the efforts of Postmaster George W. Weaver, a temporary contract for air mail service between Charlevoix and Beaver Island has been granted for the period until navigation opens. Crossings by Carl Left and Charles Martin, winter carriers, were discontinued between Cross Village and St. James on March 17th.

George Austgen, Michigan Air Express pilot, made the first trip to St. James last Saturday. A second trip was to have been made on Tuesday of this week with a 6-passenger cabin plane, but storm conditions have held up the flight. The temporary contract calls for two trips weekly.

SMELT RUN STILL IS GOING STRONG

Several Creeks in County are Open —Look for Run at Stover.

Smelt dipping in Boyne river and other streams running into Lake Charlevoix continues to be the favorite pastime of local sportsmen as well as those of the entire state, and many out-staters.

The run started in Boyne river a week ago last Monday and is still going strong. Big catches were made throughout last week. The run diminished somewhat last Thursday and Friday because of cold weather, but started again Saturday night full blast. During the past week, tons of smelt have been dipped.

Horton Creek, Porter Creek and Jordan river have also been opened, although catches there have been smaller. Charlevoix is still waiting for a run in Stover creek. Local sportsmen think it will start at any time. An Ann Arbor official of the conservation department took the temperature of the water last Saturday night and says it's too cold. So we're all waiting for a rise in temperature.

COUNCIL VOTES PUR- CHASE OF POWER UNIT

Nordberg Full Diesel Motor Will Be Added at Steam Plant.

At an adjourned session held Tuesday evening, the Charlevoix council authorized the purchase of a Nordberg full Diesel motor as an additional electric unit to be installed in the municipal steam power plant here.

The motor is a three-cylinder, 660 h. p., two-cycle, air-injection, cross-head type, and is a duplicate of the one inspected by the council at St. Louis, Michigan. It is connected to a three-phase, 60 cycle 4000 volt alternating current generator, also directly connected with a Westinghouse generator of 450 k. w. capacity.

The new unit, upon delivery, will be installed in the city-owned steam plant. An addition will be made on the south-east side of the present plant for the purpose.

CHARLEVOIX WINS CLOSE BALL GAME

POLAR BEARS DOWN MIDLAND
24 TO 23 FRIDAY.

Cements Win Lively Scoring Game
From Cigars 31 to 18—Nearly Everyone Scores.

(From Potoskey Evening News.)
The basketball season for high teams, games was officially closed in Potoskey Friday night with two very exciting games, the climax coming in the closing seconds of the Charlevoix Polar Bears-Midland game, which Charlevoix won 24 to 23. The end was exciting as any game could be for, the large group of Charlevoix rooters being in an uproar of excitement as Midland missed one of the very easiest chances for victory with but seconds to go.

The battle was under the Midland basket with Charlevoix trying hard to increase their lead by the danger point. Midland finally captured the leather and shot it down the length of the court to Sankoris, who had the entire half of the floor all to himself. With no one near to hurry him, Sankoris in his over-anxiousness, shot the ball by the basket and outside.

Charlevoix led at the half 10 to 8 with Midland missing their chances for pointers. The Central Michigan team showed pretty team work with rapid fire passing to work the ball down. In the third quarter Sankoris sank four fairly long shots and Midland led 23 to 18 as the fourth quarter started.

Brown, Charlevoix center, controlled the tip-off and played a nice game, with four field goals to lend his team on points. Coach, guard, had three and a free one and Kipke, who coaches the high school, had two baskets. Davenport added one and a free toss and Klenks, center forward, shot one from the field. Sankoris, left guard, was high for Midland. He sank five field goals and three free shots. Langley, the other guard, sank another and McClutsky added three. Madill, right forward, had another and Parker, left forward, went scoreless, due mainly to Charlevoix's fine guarding.

Charlevoix's play was to work Midland out of position and dribble in close for quick passing to the basket. Midland did very little dribbling, depending on longer speedy passing. Mayne of Charlevoix was referee and Watson of Kalkaska, umpire. In the opening game of the two game "evening" the Potoskey Port-Cement company team out-scored the Central Cigars in the opening half and held them more than even in the second to take the game 31 to 19. Ernst was high for the Cements, finding the rim 6 times for field goals. Sherwood was his running mate under the basket and sank four. Each had a free one. Ernst was the best in the first half and Sherwood in the second. Murray added a couple and Bear one and a free one. Campbell failed to find the hoop.

For the Cigars, Lane led with three from the field, while Dudek was close behind with two and a free shot. Braudino made 2, Moran 2. Craw's shots all went wild. Substitutes included Crick for the Cements and Reusch, Berndtley and Galinski for the Cigars.

"KONJOLA WORKS WONDERS," SAYS SAGINAW CITIZEN

Had to Live on Milk and Crackers—New and Different Medicine Came to Rescue.

MR. ED. WOHLSCIED.

Konjola is, in countless cases, more than a medicine—it is an investment, putting men and women back on the job. Take the experience of Mr. Ed. Wohlschied, 314 South 21st street, Saginaw. Imagine his joy when he was able to say:

"Konjola works wonders; it certainly did in my case! My digestion was so bad that I had to live on bread and crackers. I am a painter, and there were days when I was too weak to climb a ladder. I was restless at night, and was losing weight, strength and vitality rapidly. My attention was attracted to Konjola by the many endorsements I heard and read. I decided to try it, and that was the wisest decision I ever made. The first bottle proved that I was in the right road, and five more bottles solved all my health problems. I make this statement hoping that my test of Konjola will lead others to give this amazing medicine a chance. To me there is no medicine in the world like Konjola."

METHODIST CHURCH.

If your nerves are giving way and you have a blue, discouraged feeling, what you need is the tonic of church services with its different atmosphere, its incentive to new thoughts and promotion of other feelings. That was surely what Jesus meant in Matt. 12:28-30.

An outstanding investigation of the moving picture industry and its effect on national life has been made by Fred Eastman of Chicago. His evidence not only includes that the movies are a mess, but a menace in their present condition. This is the reason for the present Brookhart bill before congress. This evidence will be presented and discussed at the Sunday evening service at 7:30 p. m. Every parent of movie-loving children should be present.

Church school is at 12 noon. Epworth League meets at 6 p. m. Weather permitting, the Ladies' Aid will meet with Mrs. George McGee on Tuesday next.

COUNTY NORMAL NEWS.

This has been a busy week in the County Normal. Through the efforts of Mr. Palmer and Miss Bigge and the cordial cooperation of the rural teachers, the Normal students were afforded an opportunity to visit some of the schools of the county.

Mrs. Andrews and Miss Richardson kept the home fires burning in the training room while Mrs. Dick and Miss Bigge visited the county normal department of the Cheboygan school. This seems to have been visiting week, since a representative from the Howell Co. Normal was also there. Needless to say—a round table discussion followed.

The class enjoyed following through to disposal a case in the circuit court during this term's session. Civics becomes a much more personal and practical subject after such a demonstration lesson.

On Thursday the State Club leaders, Mr. Kettener and Miss Wixon are to be the attraction of the day. They will review the general nature of rural club work and explain the rules and regulations under which such clubs may be organized.

Invitations have been received for the class to attend the annual County Normal Day observance at Mt. Pleasant on May 2 and 3rd, and a similar program at Michigan State College at Lansing, May 15 th and 16th. As yet no definite plans have been made by the class.

THE PROHIBITION POLL

The first results of the prohibition poll being made by the Literary Digest among twenty million American people was made public last week.

The figures released by the Digest were from two eastern, three central, and five western and northwestern states, a fairly composite section of the country as a beginning, although the arid south and extreme west are yet to be heard from.

Of the 291,588 persons voting, 86,739 were in favor of enforcement of the present laws; 91,915 wanted modification, while 118,534 voted for repeal. Weekly releases of the vote being taken will be made by the Digest until the entire poll has been completed. The poll is the most stupendous thing of its kind ever attempted and is attracting nation-wide attention, being devoid of oratory or argument and confined strictly to the secret expressions of the voters themselves.

ONLY THREE WERE NORMAL

A Detroit judge the other day got curious about the mentality of the criminals who were coming before him for sentence. So he got a psychiatric clinic to examine 100 of them, choosing at random. The results were surprising.

Only three of the 100 were found normal. Two were outright insane. Thirty-three more were feeble-minded; 25 more were branded of "inferior intelligence" and the remaining 37 had "deviations in personality" which the psychiatrists said, handicapped them in their efforts to adjust themselves to their environment.

Summing up, the psychiatrists recommended that two of the group be sent to insane asylums and that 71 more be imprisoned as "poor community risks." Fifteen were called "reasonably good community risks," and were placed on probation by the judge; and of 12 classed as doubtful the judge imprisoned some and paroled some.

These findings shed a good deal of light on our "crime situation."

The judge who called in the psychiatrists only did what every court ought to be doing regularly. The results that he got prove it.

Obviously, if only three per cent of convicted criminals are normal mentally and emotionally, a set of rules and punishments devised on the basis that the average wrong-doer is fully normal is not going to work. The man who is off balance cannot be swayed by arguments, threats and coercive measures such as would an ordinary mortal. He needs some sort of special treatment; just what that treatment might be, our psychiatrists could probably tell us.

All of this is a simple matter of self-protection. This special treatment is not something that we owe the criminal; it is something we owe ourselves. Considering the speed with which our prison population is growing, it is fairly evident that our present system is not protecting us from holdup-men, murderers and kidnapers. Why not follow the lead of this Detroit judge and see if psychiatry cannot defend us a little better? Bemidji (Minn.) Sentinel.

BUSINESS CONDITIONS

The bill, which official and unofficial reports reaching Washington a week ago indicated, is believed to be but temporary at the least. Official Washington believes that this comparative inactivity is preparatory to a real movement forward, beginning with early Spring. Some hesitancy in spending by those amply able to buy has been observed, but this is not expected to materially affect conditions in general throughout the country. There is reason to believe that with the tariff out of the way it will act as a business stimulant all along the line. The employment situation continues to improve, although slow in certain sections, but which will be cleared up to a great extent when weather conditions permit many big industrial expansion programs to get under way. So far as the fundamental condition of the country is concerned, we are in better shape than we were a year ago.

Clair S. Webster motored to Kalamazoo last Saturday after Mrs. Webster and small son, who have been sojourning at Sarasota, Florida. She accompanied her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Cross, as far as Kalamazoo. They will visit relatives at Plainwell for an indefinite period before returning to their Charlevoix home.

Charlevoix citizens who attended the funeral of John Wegemer at Petoskey last Saturday were: Fr. R. E. Fitzpatrick, the Dominicans, Mrs. and Mrs. L. S. Orlovski, Mr. and Mrs. James Gaskins, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Howard, Mrs. Chas. Hamlin, Mrs. Joseph Foster, Mrs. James McCann, Mrs. Charles Hebert, Mrs. Earl Miller, Mrs. Ray Faulkner and Mrs. Albin Smith.

David Coulter and "Bill" Brown were the week end guests of Mr. and Mrs. V. Y. Tuttle of Grand Rapids. They flew to the Furniture City last Saturday as guests of the Michigan Air Express, returning Tuesday. The two boys are enthusiastic members of the Charlevoix Air Club, and it was through their interest in aeroplanes that the Michigan Air Express gave them the unusual treat.

George N. Disette and son, Robert, of Lynchburg, Va., who were guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Seymour, have gone to other northern Michigan points to visit relatives before returning to their former home in Barton, North Dakota. Mr. Disette's sister, Mrs. A. C. Thompson, has also been visiting her daughters, Mrs. Raymond Seymour and Mrs. John Cross.

FOUR NEW BALL
CHAMPS ARE NAMED

State Tournament Ends in Excitement Saturday at Detroit.

Four new state high school basketball champions were named Saturday night in the closing games of the Michigan state tournament finals in Detroit. Clarksville's team of rangy players came through to victory in Class D, beating Rock, of the northern peninsula of the state 24 to 23. Clarksville is the team that put St. Francis high school, Class D regional winners at Petoskey, out of the race.

St. Augustine high of Kalamazoo upset St. Mary's of Lansing in the most one-sided scoring game in the final round, winning 40 to 9 for the Class C race. St. Augustine upset Wayne, giving her the first defeat in about two years. Wayne won a tight game from Harbor Springs in the first round.

In Class B the title came back north in possession of the fighting Negaunee boys. This team, whose home town is between Marquette and Ishpeming in the upper peninsula, won the peninsula title the week before and carried the same brand of ball to Detroit. Apparently outclassed at the start of the game the boys let the crowd know that they had not yet begun to fight. Before the battle was over the crowd was with them.

Detroit was made happy with one title. Detroit Northern took a desperately fought 16 to 14 game from Kalamazoo Central for the championship of the larger schools. Detroit had been doped to win easily but found it had a desperate fight on its hands. The score was the lowest Detroit had made in a long time.

Attendance at the tournament exceeded 18,000 fans. They came from all over the state. This is a new high record for the state turney.

Delightful refreshments were served.

ROLL OF HONOR BANK

1905

1930

Under State Supervision

DEAR MR. JONES:

From 65c to a bank presidency.

Years ago, a newsboy walked into a bank in a small city in Wisconsin with 65c and was informed by a teller that he must have a dollar with which to start an account. He turned and left the bank with hanging head and with, maybe, a tear-drop or two in his eyes.

In less than five minutes, he returned to the bank, walked up to the teller's window, doffed his cap and said: "Say, mister, when I own this bank a fellow can come in and open an account with whatever he has, and it won't have to be a dollar, neither."

Fourteen years later, this same newsboy occupied an official position in that institution and at sixty-eight years of age he retired from the presidency of that institution.

Thriftiness, persistence and ambition did it. You can accomplish equally as much if you will but practice these virtues.

AGRICULTURAL NOTES

By B. C. Mellencamp

It Pays to Castrate and Dock Your Lambs.

The most successful farm flock owners dock and castrate their lambs because they realize it means increased profits. These increased profits come through the advantages which docked and castrated lambs have over those which are entire. Some of the advantages of castrating lambs are listed below:

1. Wether lambs fatten better than ram lambs as a general rule, making a 8 to 10 per cent rapid gain.

2. Wether lambs produce a better carcass by putting on a larger proportion of flesh and on the parts which give the high priced cuts, such as the leg and the loin, while ram lambs develop more in the neck and shoulder.

3. Ram lambs soon become nervous and discontented and begin to annoy early on to annoy the ewe lambs.

4. A few ram lambs among the feeders make the whole flock restless, so no good feeder feeds ram lambs with ewes.

5. Buyers prefer a uniform bunch of lambs, ewes and wethers, over a mixed bunch containing some rams.

6. The quality of meat from large rams is strongly discriminated against by consumers. Marketing such meat has a tendency to discourage the demand for lamb and mutton.

7. Bucky lambs are high in cost of production, but low in market value.

8. Castrate all lambs except good purebreds, then we are sure ewes will not be bred by or to scrub rams.

9. Ram lambs sell for less money.

The Advantages and Reasons for Docking.

1. Gives the flock a more uniform and blocky appearance.

2. Docked lambs are cleaner and less subject to maggots in moist, hot weather.

3. Long tails interfere with breeding ewes with the result it is hard to sell long tailed ewes for breeding purposes.

4. Lambs with long tails are discriminated against by feeders.

5. Docked lambs is an indication of pride in your business.

6. Carcass has a neater appearance.

7. Tails have a draggy appearance to the lambs and distracts from their selling price.

8. Tails on domestic sheep serve no useful purpose and may actually become an impediment.

9. Remember the old saying,
"dock your lambs or the market will"
is only too true.

The time to dock and castrate is when your lambs are seven to fourteen days old. When done with older lambs there is more danger from infection.

Docking and castrating indicates careful shepherding and flocks which are managed by men who regularly perform these two operations are likely to be better bred, better fed and better managed in every way than are flocks whose owners neither dock nor castrate.

Losses can be prevented in docking and castrating if certain precautions are used. Lambs operated on on rainy, dark days often die, so pick out a bright day to perform the work.
Never worry or excite lambs previous to the time, as this has its ill effects.
When done too suddenly, lambs also often die. Always disinfect the instruments used as well as the wounds.
Practice a general cleanliness in every detail. If left in the barn following the operation, be sure to bed down the stall. This place should also be quiet. Watch so there is no excessive bleeding. This will seldom occur when young lambs are docked and castrated. Remember the best time is seven to fourteen days old.

From Youth to Age

There are three trying periods in a woman's life: when the girl matures to womanhood, when a woman gives birth to her first child, when a woman reaches middle age. At

What "Boosting Charlevoix" Means

"Boosting" is a good old Yankee word that means a great deal more than merely saying pleasant things about your town. "Boosting" means raising up our community to a higher plane of health, happiness and prosperity.

Real honest-to-goodness "Boosting" means that every citizen of Charlevoix must put his heart, soul and effort into the things necessary to raise our town to its highest civic level.

A Booster gives his full moral and material support to any movement that benefits his community.

He is faithful in his civic duties, for he recognizes the importance of an honest, efficient administration.

He lends his influence and support to our churches and schools, for he knows that these institutions are the builders of character in our children.

He does his part in keeping

Charlevoix attractive, for a clean city suggests health and order to prospective citizens.

He buys merchandise from his home town merchants and patronizes local professional men because of their efforts and contributions, pleasures and advantages which our community offers.

Every signer to this and the other community pages has pledged himself to earnest and active boosting for Charlevoix. And they urge you to co-operate with them in making our town one of the best in the country.

We, the undersigned, Believers in Charlevoix, heartily endorse the above:

HOLD DOWN POTATO CROP IS WARNING

ANNUAL CROP OUTLOOK IS ISSUED AT LANSING.

Increased Acreage Should Be in Sugar Beets, Oats and Alfalfa Seed Department Says.

A warning for Michigan farmers not to increase their acreage of potatoes or beans during 1930 because glutted markets and lowered prices may result is contained in the annual crop, fruit and livestock outlook prepared by the U. S. department of agriculture at Michigan State College last week.

Increased planting of sugar beets, oats, and alfalfa seed are recommended.

"The 1929 potato prices were relatively high because of low yields," the report says. "In 1930 there will probably be an increase in the United States potato acreage, which if coupled with average yield will cause lower prices. The sound policy, however, is, for the Michigan potato grower to maintain an average acreage of potatoes. The individual should adjust his acreage to best fit his crop rotation and his farm management plan."

"Estimates show there will probably be an increase in the potato acreage in the United States of approximately 6 per cent over that of 1929. With average growing conditions in 1930 and a consequent average yield of 118 bushels per acre, a total production of around 421,000,000 bushels can be expected in the United States. In former years when approximately this same quantity was produced, the December 1 average farm price for Michigan was about 40 cents per bushel compared with $1.25 per bushel on December 1, 1929, when the United States production was 357,000,000 bushels."

In 1929, Michigan growers harvested 263,000 acres of potatoes with a total production of 18,410,000 bushels. The 1928 acreage harvested was 306,000 acres with a total production of 35,802,000 bushels. In spite of the lower acreage and production of 1929, this crop was worth

60 per cent more than the 1928 crop, based on the December 1 price. Severe droughts in the summer of 1929 were largely responsible for the decided cut in total production. The average yield per acre in 1929 was 70 bushels as compared with the average yield of 117 bushels in 1928. "Figures recently compiled indicate intentions to increase the potato acreage in Michigan by 10 per cent over the 1929 acreage. This is approximately 8 per cent more than the average acreage harvested for the years 1924 to 1929 inclusive. The average yield per acre for the five-year period 1924-1928 was 110 bushels. If this yield were obtained in 1930, the crop would be 31,790,000 bushels as compared with 29,460,000 bushels, the average for the 1924-28 period."

FARMERS NOTICE—Many Pickle contracts are in, and at the high prices being paid. Charlevoix will have a fine pickle acreage this year. Farmers not having contracts should get them promptly. Phone in, or see Albert Brower.—Adv. 1311.

WASHINGTON NEWS LETTER.

The Vice President Breaks Tie Vote on Clothespins.

Excerpts from six pages of the Congressional Record containing weighty arguments on the weighty matter of a higher tariff on spring clothespins:

Mr. Norris: Mr. President, we must not forget that we are here to help the farmer, and here is an opportunity to do it again. Note, I said "again."

This is a contest between the washerwoman and the farmer. . . . the farmer raises the wood . . . out of which clothespins are made. Let us increase this tariff, and all over this broad land farmers will commence to plant trees so that their great-grandchildren can make clothespins. Think of it?

Mr. Thomas of Oklahoma: Does the senator think that our great-grandchildren will be wearing clothes?

Mr. Norris: They may not be wearing clothes, if we get the prices of clothespins too high.

Mr. Norris: The object of a tariff is to increase the price which the poor man who makes the article will get. . . . The same argument is made in every case. This is only a little, this is just a mite. In this case it is the washerwoman's mite. It will not mean much for every American family, and the same little thing happens when we come to sugar, when we come to lumber, when we come to gasoline, when we come to steel, when we come to everything. It is only a little, but in the aggregate it makes up the cost of living of the American people.

Mr. Barkley: Why should there be any discrimination as between seasonal clothespins? Why should summer and autumn and winter clothespins be discriminated against if we are going to increase the tariff on "spring clothespins?"

Mr. Thomas of Oklahoma: I refer that inquiry to the distinguished chairman of the committee on finance who presented the amendment.

The profound tone of the discussion produced such a state of intellectual uncertainty among our statesmen, that the vote was tied, 40 to 40. At this crucial moment, Vice-President Curtis rose nobly and voted for the amendment raising the duty from ten to twenty cents per gross on spring clothespins.

Congressional Wives Are Not Idle.

What do congressmen's wives do while congressmen legislate? All the dining, tea-ing and dancing that Washington offers can not wholly occupy their days. Nor does one find them leaning over the rails of the galleries reserved for official families, breathlessly observant of their husbands' words and votes. For senators' wives, the problem of evening diversion is more complicated since the upper house has taken to night sessions until the tariff bill is disposed of.

Some light is shed on their activities by a recent news item telling of the organization of a committee of congressional women to aid four child welfare organizations. These organizations maintain a Thrift Shop which is stocked with contributions of discarded materials and sold for the benefit of the welfare groups. Under the leadership of Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the senior senator from Virginia, a campaign to secure donations of clothing, books and house furnishings for the shop is in progress. Other women composing the committee are: Mrs. Tasker L. Oddie, wife of the junior senator from Nevada; Mrs. Charles Deneen, wife of the senior senator from Illinois; Mrs. Royal Copeland, wife of the senior senator from Pennsylvania; and Mrs. James Parker, wife of the representative from New York.

Canada Courts Reindeer Immigration

From our federal territory of Alaska to the delta of the Mackenzie River in Canada is a long way to transport 3,400 reindeer. Two Danish brothers, Erling and Thorjorn Porsild, were selected by the Canadian government to explore regions northwest of the Yukon and ascertain the possibilities of this part of North America for breeding "Santa Claus" steeds. After two years of traveling more than 7,000 miles with dog sleds, the brothers reported that they had visited all the Alaskan reindeer herds and that the owners were willing to sell. More investigation entailing a journey of 16,000 miles along the coasts of Bering strait and Arctic ocean revealed ample pasturage in the summer and a suitable trail for the reindeer to make the trip.

Since reindeer can travel only in the winter months, when snow and ice make lake and river crossings possible, it is thought that transportation will not be completed until 1931. Erling Porsild has been busy since last Christmas directing the trek from Alaska. His brother will fly 2,000 miles from Ottawa to the boundary of the Eskimo hunting ground, from whence he will proceed by dog sleigh to meet the herd.

Senator Grundy Relieves the Farmer.

Senator Joseph R. Grundy of Pennsylvania does things in a big way. Senator Reed Smoot and his followers tried all summer and fall to relieve the farmers of about $600,000,000 through tariff taxation; Mr. Grundy in about six weeks' time is actually relieving them of a sum well in excess of $1,000,000,000.

Probably the brightest dream Senator Smoot ever had was that of attaching his name historically to a highly protective tariff bill. It was an ambition that might easily account for his ceaseless activity that finally placed him at the head of the mighty senate finance committee. Well, the bill is being written but Senator Grundy, as head of the "Unholy Alliance" of sugar-cement-oil-lumber, is getting the credit or discredit for it. Some political prophets are whispering that the bill now being framed, if it gets by congress and is signed by the president, will be known to history as "the Grundy Tariff Act that killed the Grand Old Party."

Perhaps even the Democrats who frankly traded votes on sugar for high tariff votes on cement and oil will vote against the bill itself and give their party the 1932 campaign slogan, "We killed the Grundy Bill and saved the American consumer." Perhaps the Democratic party will prefer to let the Grundy Bill pass and make their slogan, "See what the G. O. P. did to relieve the farmer of all he had left!" Right now Mr. Grundy has defeated the Democrats and the Coalition. But there is still the power of the consumers' protest, which may bring about a presidential veto. In any case the consumer had better take notice right now instead of awaiting possible outcomes. If he emits a final howl of anguish, Grundysm may perish from the earth.

Now Comes Automatic Groceryman.

Drop a coin in the slot and out comes gum or mints, cigarettes or canned music. There's nothing new in that idea. But what if you could obtain, instead, a loaf of bread, a bottle of milk, aspirin tablets, or an ice cream cone? Well, maybe you can in the not too distant future. This announcement recently came from J. A. G. Pennington of the specialties division of the Department of Commerce at Washington.

Apartment houses, as places for distributing food and drug staples through automatic venders, are tempting the manufacturers of coin-operated machines. Mr. Pennington states, "Emergency shopping" at any hour of the day or night is trusted to give a strong impetus to the vending machine trade. A recent exposition of coin-machine operators and manufacturers in Chicago indicated deep interest in methods of adapting machines to perishable food-stuffs. Devices for incorporating refrigerating units for vending machines to retail beverages, ice cream, and frozen confections were shown and discussed. Even tiny automatic soda fountains which mix carbonated water and syrups are now the subject of experiments.

The general trend of the industry, according to Mr. Pennington, is toward high class merchandising and amusement machines, with quality rather than prices the main incentive to sales.

U. S. Navy to Look for Pearls.

The lowly, unattractive oyster is not in itself the subject of extensive consideration except as a foodstuff. But the oyster that harbors a pearl; that is a different matter! To study and cultivate the pearl oyster resources of the Hawaiian Islands, our Federal Bureau of Fisheries with the assistance of the navy department, will make a survey this summer.

A whole colony of pearl oysters was discovered by fishermen during the spring of 1928 in the lagoon of Pearl and Hermes Reel, about 1,200 miles northwest of Honolulu. For some time the discovery was kept a dark secret, but private concerns soon began to fish for the pearl shells which yielded the commercial mother-of-pearl as well as valuable jewels. Since the extent of the pearl oyster beds was not known, government officials became worried over their possible destruction through exploitation, and the governor of Hawaii requested the Bureau of Fisheries to ascertain what methods could be undertaken for perpetuation as well as for further production of the pearl oysters by artificial means. A ship, the U. S. S. "Whippoorwill" has been assigned by the navy department for that purpose, and already equipment is being assembled and plans completed for the month-and-a-half survey. It is noteworthy that the territorial legislature of Hawaii appropriated the fund for defraying the expenses of bureau employees.

CENSUS TAKING IS IN PROGRESS

HUNDRED THOUSAND WILL BE AT WORK FOR MONTH.

Work is Most-Elaborate Ever Undertaken in United States—Twenty-four Questions.

An army of 100,000 enumerators set forth Wednesday to devote a month to the problem of listing every inhabitant of the United States. The fifteenth decennial census is expected to show that the population has increased to 123,000,000.

Mrs. Bessie Dean has been appointed census taker in the city of Charlevoix. I. L. Dice is covering Norwood and Marion township and Kit Carson of East Jordan, the county business districts. We have been unable to obtain the balance of the list of enumerators.

William Mott Stewart, director of the census bureau, declares the enumeration "the most colossal of all statistical projects." In addition to the data collected concerning human beings, the government seeks detailed information on 6,250,000 farms, 2,500,000 mercantile establishments, 200,000 manufacturing plants, 14,000 mines and quarries and more than 100,000 irrigation and drainage projects.

The census schedule this year is applied to individuals is more elaborate than ever before. The first census, taken in 1790 when the population numbered only the name of the head of the family and the number of persons in the family.

These are the questions to be asked this month:

1. Relationship to head of family, including a statement as to the home-maker in each family.
2. Whether home is owned or rented.
3. Value of home, if owned, or monthly rental, if rented.
4. Radio set.
5. Does this family live on a farm.
6. Sex.
7. Color or race.
8. Age at last birthday.
9. Marital condition.
10. Age at first marriage.
11. Attended school or college any time since Sept. 1, 1929.
12. Whether able to read and write?
13. Place of birth of person.
14. Place of birth of person's father.
15. Place of birth of person's mother.
16. Mother tongue of each foreign-born person.
17. Year of immigration to the United States.
18. Whether naturalized.
19. Whether able to speak English?
20. Occupation of each gainful worker.
21. Industry in which employed.
22. Whether employer, employee or working on own account.
23. Whether actually at work?
24. Whether a veteran of the United States' military or naval forces; and for each veteran, in what war or expedition he served.

Among the new items on the schedule are those regarding the value of homes or monthly rentals, ownership of a radio, state of employment and degree of military service. Of these the most important, in the eyes of the government officials, is that concerning unemployment. Authorities hope that by accurate data they may be able to eliminate a great deal of enforced idleness. A separate schedule on unemployment will ask the following questions:

1. How many weeks since he (or she) has worked on his present job?
2. Why was he not at work yesterday, or in case yesterday was not a regular working day, why did he not work on the last regular working day?
3. Did he lose a day's pay by not being at work?

SENIOR GIRLS ARE CLASS CHAMPIONS

WIN IN FINALS OF INTER-CLASS BASKETBALL MEET.

Winners in the inter-class basketball tournament, the senior girls of Charlevoix public schools, are crowned, is over for the 1929-1930 season. NO CONTEST FOR MONDAY ELECTION

EVERYTHING PROMISES TO BE QUIET WITHIN CITY.

Scraps on in Four Adjacent Townships Where Two Tickets Are in the Field.

From present outlook, there will be a sharp contrast between the election to be held Monday, April 7th, and the primary early in March. With contests in every ward, interest ran high at the primary, with the result that a record vote was cast in the city.

There are no contests in sight for next Monday, and, unless voters take it upon themselves to exercise their voting franchise as they should, the poll is going to be a light one. It will be recalled that a year ago the votes cast numbered less than one hundred. That should not happen again.

Polls will be open next Monday at 7:00 a. m. and close at 6:00 p. m. Following is the line-up of candidates:

City Ticket.

For Mayor, Arthur Bergeon. City Clerk, Ray S. Hamilton. City Treasurer, Robert E. Rife. Park Commissioner, E. A. Young. Justice of the Peace, Robert Withers.

Justice of the Peace (fill vacancy) Horace R. Fowler.

First Ward.

Supervisor, Harry A. Craig. Alderman, Clair S. Webster. Constable, Joseph Howard.

Second Ward.

Supervisor, Frank Partridge. Alderman, F. J. Fessenden. Constable, Elmer L. Johnson.

Third Ward.

Supervisor, Archie Alcock. Alderman, Harry Hooker. Constable, Wm. J. Weikel.

In four of the townships adjacent to Charlevoix, two township tickets are in the field and the election promises to hold more interest there than in the city itself.

BAND CONCERT DREW SMALL ATTENDANCE

Severe Blizzard Kept Many From Hearing Excellent Program.

The Charlevoix school band realized a little over $50 towards paying their expenses to the district band tournament at Traverse City as a result of their band concert last Wednesday evening, according to figures just received.

It was very unfortunate that the second severe storm of the winter season should have to fall on concert night. Bad weather undoubtedly cut the attendance down.

Those who did brave the elements to hear the concert, however, were well repaid for their trouble. The program rendered was of very high calibre and marks the organization as a strong contender for tournament honors.

The band members and their leader, Mr. TerWee, wish to express their appreciation to those who supported their efforts.

FARMERS' NIGHT A HUGE SUCCESS

WELL OVER ONE HUNDRED WERE IN ATTENDANCE.

Several Interesting Talks Given on a Variety of Important and Timely Topics.

All attendance records were broken at the "Farmers' Night" meeting of the Charlevoix Association of Commerce held last Thursday evening at the I. O. O. F. hall. From start to finish, the meeting was a decided success, from standpoint of interest, entertainment, and all.

President C. J. Winder opened the session with a couple of timely stories after the guests had partaken of an excellent banquet dinner served by the Lady Maccabees. His first introduction Jack Byrne of Grand Rapids, president of the Michigan Air Express, who, in a very convincing manner, gave a talk on aviation in its various phases, stressing particularly the requirements and reasons why every community should have a community airport.

Following Mr. Byrne's talk, Richard Paddock, chairman of the agricultural committee, took charge of the meeting. The first number on the program was a dance by the Misses Julia Gladys and Margery Partridge, who won hearty applause and favored the assemblage with an encore.

Burton C. Mellenkamp, county agricultural agent, gave a very interesting talk on the agricultural extension work that has been carried on in Charlevoix county under his supervision and with the aid of specialists from Michigan State College. He pointed out far-reaching and gratifying results and sufficient reason why the work should be continued. Mr. Mellenkamp and Charlevoix county as a whole are very proud of the champions turned out in the various divisions of club work.

The final speaker of the evening was Prof. O. Urey of the farm economics department, Michigan State college, East Lansing. His address covered a wide range of topics vital to both rural and city interests. He urged co-operation between the two and told of the many efforts being put forth by the college to benefit both.

Because of the length of the program arranged, the business session of the Association was dispensed with. Another meeting will be held in the near future, at which time numerous reports will be given and other projects outlined.

ROBBERS ENTER SEVERAL LOCAL STORES

Fred Myers, Korth's Market and Bonthron Shop Broken Into.

Robbers are operating in the city again, and officers are following out every possible lead to apprehend the guilty party or parties.

Fred Myers' store was entered early Sunday morning and a sum of cash, a silver watch and some merchandise taken. The robbers made entrance by breaking a back window. The same evening, Robert Bonthron's plumbing shop and R. C. Korth's market were also entered. Nothing was taken from the first place, but a quantity of merchandise is missing from the other.

The 4-H Club will serve dinner at Marion Center Grange Hall on election day, April 7th.—Adv. 1411.

MERCHANTS ATTEND PETOSKEY MEETING

Meet Friday Night to Organize Local Business Interests.

Quite a large delegation of Charlevoix business men attended a merchant's meeting held in the Knights of Columbus temple in Petoskey Tuesday evening.

The meeting was sponsored by the Merchant Minute Men, an organization behind the Henderson anti-rain store move. C. V. Penner of Detroit, one of the organization's speakers, addressed the meeting.

A similar meeting will be held in the Charlevoix council chambers on Friday evening of this week. Every business interest in the city is invited. Plans are to perfect an organization in Charlevoix and a Petoskey speaker will be present. Another meeting is planned for the near future with an outside speaker.

Those interested in improving business conditions in Charlevoix will get behind the worthy cause.

The Methodist Ladies' Aid will serve a Kaster supper in the church parlors Wednesday, April 9th.—Adv. 1411.

DELAND TOSSES HAT INTO THE RING

Will Be Candidate for Governor at Next Summer's Primary.

Charles J. Deland, state representative from Detroit, former state senator from Jackson, and secretary of state under former governor Alex Groesbeck for three terms, has announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for governor.

Deland's announcement makes him the first out and out candidate for the office now held by governor Fred W. Green.

His statement follows in part: "For eight years I served the state as a member of the house of representatives and of the state senate and, for six years, was secretary of state and a member of the state administrative board under the administration of former governor Groesbeck and, during that six years, had considerable to do with giving the state sound, sensible, honest and economical administration enjoyed during that period. If I am elected governor, I will use all the experience and energy I possess to give to the people of Michigan the kind of government I know they want. No person, or the campaign I shall make, shall keep me from doing this."

OLDER BOYS MEET HERE NEXT MONTH

GROUPS COMING FROM ENTIRE NORTHERN REGION.

Y. M. C. A. Sponsoring Gathering and Will Bring Noted Speakers to Address Sessions.

The annual Northern Michigan Older Boys' conference which was originally undertaken and organized by the Petoskey City Wide Boys Work association, in co-operation with the state Y. M. C. A., is to be much more of a northern Michigan affair this year than ever before.

First the conference included only Emmet county boys who had attended that state older boys conference, and their friends. Then it grew into an Emmet-Charlevoix county affair and lately into a one-day meeting for youths of several counties. This year the new regional Y. M. C. A. committee has taken it over and is making plans for a large meeting.

The session will be held in Charlevoix sometime in May, the date being fixed so as not to conflict with other duties already undertaken for May. Assisting will be Walter J. MacMillan, head of the city wide boys work in Petoskey, and the man most responsible for the establishment of the northern conference; Walter Gospi, the state regional Y. M. C. A. secretary who has headquarters in Petoskey; E. A. Byrum, Detroit, state boys work secretary for the Y. M. C. A.; "Dad" Elliott, of the Y. M. C. A., who has spoken to more Y conferences in Michigan than most any other man; and Ray E. Johns, associated state secretary of the Y organization in Michigan, with headquarters in Detroit.

The delegates attending will be sponsored by the various churches, schools, Hi-Y groups, Sunday schools, etc.

SEEK MORE TRIPS TO B. ISLAND WITH MAIL

Plane Unable to Carry It All in Two Weekly Trips Allowed.

Air mail service was resumed between Charlevoix and Beaver Island again this week. A Michigan Air Express plane made a trip Monday and another Tuesday forenoon. A trip last Saturday was unsuccessful when the pilot was unable to land on the island.

Mail continues to pile up at the local postoffice and the carriers have so far been unable to clean up the accumulation. It is understood Postmaster Weaver will attempt to have the postal department authorize additional trips above the two a week called for in the present temporary contract.

Entertained with Bridge Party. Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Cooper entertained with a bridge party at their home on Dixon avenue Tuesday evening. Sixteen tables were in play, honors for women going to Mrs. John McCann and Mrs. W. L. Zerbis, and to Richard Finnan for the men. Miss Helen French won the door prize. Refreshments were served following cards.

NEW LIST GAME LAWS ARE HERE

CHANGES IN REGULATIONS FOR 1930 ARE LISTED.

All Trout Angler Over 18, Either Sex, Must Have License—Season Open June 25th.

Three hundred thousand Digests of Fishing Laws of Michigan are now in the hands of all conservation officers, county clerks and other agencies and are available to the public.

The 1930 digest lists all changes in the inland fishing laws as provided by the last session of the legislature and enumerates all designated open trout streams, smelt streams, trout and pike lakes, and other local provisions.

For the first time game fish are specifically listed in the new digest, as they were listed by the legislature. Some new features in the 1930 regulations are as follows:

Only non-game fish, except great northern and grass pike, may be taken in the non-trout rivers and streams during April and May by hook and line or spearing. Great northern and grass pike (pickered) although listed as non-game fish, may be taken in this manner only during the month of May. The trout season opens May 1st in previous years. Perch and wall-eyed pike may be taken after May 1st from all designated pike lakes and from all rivers and streams.

The general fishing season this year will open June 25 instead of June 16, in the lower peninsula and July 1st in the upper peninsula as was in effect last season.

The old law permitted the use of dip nets to take suckers, carp, mullet and ruddsides in March and April in the rivers of the lower peninsula, and until May 15 in the upper peninsula. Now dip nets may be used in non-trout streams for taking suckers only from April 1 to May 31.

Changes made in license requirements and fees by the last legislature are now in effect. All trout anglers over 18 years of age, both men and women, are now required to have a license which costs $1 a year.

All non-residents over 18 years of age, fishing in Michigan's inland rivers and lakes must have a license costing $3. Formerly two forms of non-resident licenses were issued; one permitting the catching, in season, of all species; the other, all kinds of fish except trout and black bass.

The new law makes it necessary for anyone over 18 years of age, taking minnows for commercial purposes to have a license. This license, costing $10, is sold only at the Department of Conservation offices at Lansing.

Those who cannot secure a copy of the digest locally, may obtain one by writing to the Fish Division, Department of Conservation, Lansing, Michigan.

STOVER CREEK GAVE UP ITS FIRST SMELT

Dippers, Took Small Quantity Tuesday Night—Look for More.

Despite the fact smelt runs are practically over in other streams and rivers of the county, Charlevoix sportsmen are still looking for a run in Stover creek.

The first real sign to indicate there would be a run was Tuesday night, when quite a few smelt were dipped after 10 o'clock that evening. The fish were seen in great numbers in Lake Charlevoix off the mouth of the creek all day, and a large crowd was ready to get their share that night.

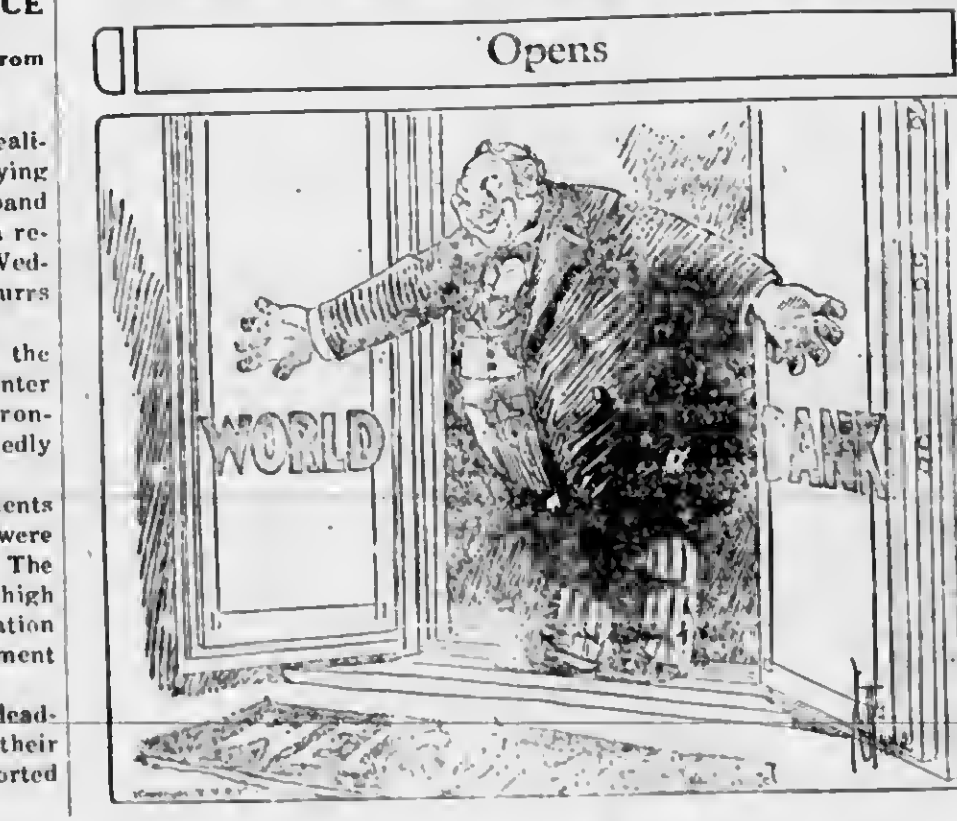

Dippers may get a few in Stover creek, but all indications are that the run will be light.

A E F VETERAN ENTHUSIASTIC OVER KONJOLA

Modern Medicine Relieves Ailment of Man, Who Suffered Since Service in France.

MR. ALBERT THOMPSON

"Six bottle of Konjola ended all my health troubles, and built me up in every way," says Mr. Albert Thompson, A. E. F. veteran, 1326 Dadermacher street, Detroit.

"Ever since I returned from France I was miserable with catarrh, pains in my stomach and head, kidney trouble and a faulty liver. I tried medicine after medicine, but with the same result—failure. Then Konjola was recommended to me, and how glad I am that I took the advice to try this new and different medicine. In a few days I took six bottles, and in six weeks Konjola had brought complete relief. No wonder Konjola is a household word in thousands of American homes."

This is just one of tens of thousands of such victories as Konjola wins, even when all else tried has been found wanting. Konjola is designed to make good, and does it.

Konjola is sold in Charlevoix at F. J. Pesenden's drug store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

We Join the Ranks of GRAHAM dealers

QUALITY IS THE BEST POLICY

TODAY we become dealers for Graham cars and, because of our knowledge of the Graham brothers and their product, we are deeply gratified to make this announcement.

The Graham Eights and Sixes, led by the four-door Town Sedan at factory list price $845 and the Universal Sedan at factory list price $895, impressively climax the Graham's three-year program of quality and value building.

These cars, in and of themselves, dramatically and conclusively demonstrate the Graham ideal that quality is the best policy.

They demonstrate that by strict adherence to quality standards in massed production, motor cars can rise above the common run in quality and still be held down in price.

The visual evidence of the Graham's achievement in this regard is present in car-features, in sound engineering and manufacturing, in the Graham-built chassis and the Graham-built bodies, in the complete protective equipment of shatter-proof safety plate glass, and in a gratifying combination of brilliant performance with extraordinary fuel economy.

We are ready now to have you call and inspect the latest Graham Sixes and Eights, and we shall be especially glad to welcome our friends and customers in our new capacity of Graham dealers.

CHAPTER II, Continued.

"Please don't. I must have the work—the pleasure—the obligation of the children. Mother wants it that way. She sits in her window, and I can see her from the schoolhouse, and we wave our hands at each other every little while. She can see the children, and they are always thinking about her. Even during hours they don't forget. You see, they are as much another's as mine, and we cannot turn them over to Miss Wilson. Mother and I need them. You won't send for Miss Wilson—until it is necessary?"

"No."

As she rose from her chair she took the picture of Paul's wife from the desk and stood looking at it with her back turned to the light coming through the window. Thus Paul could see them both—the profile of Carla, her exquisitely cut features, the grace and beauty of her head, and his wife smiling up at her out of the picture. After a moment Carla smiled gently in return.

"When is she coming home?" she asked.

"I don't know. She doesn't keep me in touch with her plans. Some time before Christmas, I think."

He wondered why the note of bitterness persisted in coming into his voice when he spoke of his wife. It annoyed him. He tried to keep it back. Yet it would come out.

"She likes to surprise me," he added, walking around the end of his desk to stand beside Carla. "When the time comes I will get a telegram from her saying she is on board ship or to New York. 'Home, Paul,' she said last time. 'When are you coming in to see me?' I wish she loved children as you love them."

"All women love children," replied Carla mysteriously.

"No, she doesn't. I've wanted a lot of them. Boys, mostly. Claire could be such a wonderful mother."

"She will be, some day," said Carla. "I saw the painting of it in her face when she was here, and I see it now—shining in her eyes—in this picture. She has a soul as deep as the sea, Mr. Clarke, and she must love children."

She replaced the picture on the desk, and Paul helped her again with her raincoat.

"May I go with you?" he asked. "Take the children, I love your mother."

"Oh!"

The word escaped her lips, and the eagerness of it made his heart throb.

"You mean that? You are not saying it just to be good to me? You love my mother?"

"Yes. Next to my own mother, who has been away from me so long."

He could not understand what he saw in her face. It was as if a flame had suddenly thrown a glow upon it.

They went out into the rain, and on the narrow cinder path Carla's arm touched Paul's. A soothing and pleasant sensation accompanied the gentle pressure of it, and he glanced down at her head near his shoulder, imprisoned in his hand. He could see the silken mesh of her long tresses gathering the rain mist.

A few minutes later the mother welcomed him from her chair near the window, from which she could see Carla's school. Carla had taken his hat and coat. A new spirit had entered the house with her. She was smiling, kissed her mother, chirruped a few notes to a bird in a cage as she went for a moment into the kitchen. What a magnificent sight! The cottage was filled with birds and flowers. Out where Carla had gone a canary was singing. A sleepy cat was purring on a cushion at Mrs. Hildan's feet. In a small grate a fire was burning. Contentment and happiness, and not the shadow of death, seemed triumphant about him.

Mrs. Hildan was the soul of this cheer. Twenty-five years in America had taken from her the ruggedness of her native mountains but had left the spirit of their beauty. She looked at Paul with the same eyes that Carla had. Her hair was wavy, like Carla's, and almost white. Paul had a vision of her back in her mountains, a quarter of a century before. How much she must have looked like Carla then! What beauty grew in those out-of-the-way places, like flowers lost in rugged rock crevices, with ages of history and the struggle of life behind it to give it character. A beauty with indelible memory of love, most of all. He knew that Carla's father had died twenty years before, but one could always see him clearly in the eyes of Carla's mother, and when she talked about him it was as though he had gone away on a little visit only yesterday.

Carla would be like that. One love, one man, forever.

There was no pretense in her mother's gladness that he had come. They visited for an hour, and Carla made tea and served little cakes. Never had Paul seen Carla so beautiful as during this wonderful hour he spent with her mother. When he was about to leave, and stood with her alone for a few moments, it seemed to him he could feel the throbbing of her body near him. Her lips pressed his hand a little impulsively when he said good-by.

"You have made me happier than I have been in a long time," she said. "The words repeated themselves in his mind after he had gone. No woman had ever told him that he had made her happy, except his mother. Carla—and his mother. He took a long walk in the rain—up through the jack pines into the heavier evergreen timber, where the drizzle penetrated only in a mist—and the two women walked at his side. Then his wife joined them. Three wonderful women: his mother, Carla, his wife—with a fourth waiting for death back in her chair. The world must forever continue to be beautiful with such women in it. It was Claire, his wife, who turned him about and took him back to her mother's home. He talked about her that evening. But he said nothing about the other three. They were locked in his heart, and it seemed sacrilege to open the door upon them.

CHAPTER IV

The next day was Saturday, and Paul started for Peribonka early in the morning with Carla. Bad weather had given way at last to glorious autumnal sunshine and warmth. He was glad the rain-soaked sand and clay made a horse and buggy necessary. Carla was different, had grown different overnight. The beauty which had come into her face when he was with her mother had not disappeared to leave it so tense and strained again. She seemed nearer to him, infinitely more dependent than yesterday, and happier—if there could be such a thing as that emotion left in her life.

They crossed the great blueberry "barrens," with miles and miles of that wild country about them, reaching toward the lake on one side and the timbered wilderness on the other. Only at wide intervals was there a habitation's home, and they met on one of the sticky road. Even this barrenness Paul loved. He talked to Carla about the country. All nature, no matter how desolate it might appear to others, was beautiful to him, he said. Nature could not make a desolation that was not beautiful, and never was there a barren note in its handwork. Because most humans could not see the beauty and pathos of a fire-blackened stub or the enchanting mystery of a dormant pond was not proof that Nature had made an error. It was merely evidence that most human eyes were blind.

In a sandy place he got out and cut bushes weighted heavily with blueberries, and they plucked the luscious fruit from the same stems and ate it as they rode along. It was almost happiness. Only the grim thing shadowing them kept it from being that, and even this shadow seemed to fold its wings for flashing moments. It grew warm, and, with the habit of her mother's people, Carla buried her head to let the air stir in her hair. Paul looked at it, with the restless desire in him growing stronger. It was always so smooth and soft, with its silky coils so gracefully titling her head, that it seemed a loss of something precious not to touch its beauty. He thought of what Lucy-Belle had told her husband of the love story in Carla's life. Some man had loved it. Some man had put his hand upon it. As their road came into green timber and he listened to Carla's voice telling him that in her own heart was a love for Nature so great that she would never live in a city again, he wondered what it was that had spoiled her romance so that she would never care for any other man or marry.

"They came to Peribonka, and Mr. Chaudelaine set them a luncheon in the old-fashioned little dining room overlooking her garden, with its luxuriant array of vegetables and flowers. The admired Carla, and brought in a little girl she had adopted to show her what loveliness one might come to possess if one lived right. Carla was a bit embarrassed, and Paul delighted by such ardent and frankly spoken approval. Samuel Chaudelaine, tall, thin, and the main prop of Peribonka's church choir, joined them at the table for a visit, and after a time Paul took him aside and explained his mission. They went up the street together, and when they returned the business was over. The small square of ground with its wild honeysuckle vines belonged to Carla.

He took her to see it after they said good-by to the Chaudelaines, and when they stood at the gate looking down at the river, he saw tears in Carla's eyes for the first time since he had known her. She made no movement to hide them or wipe them away when she smiled her gratitude at him. He held out his hand, and she gave him her own. He held it for a few moments, and neither broke the silence which fell between them as they walked down the footway path and through the picket gate.

An impulse which neither attempted to voice held them for a time in Peribonka. They went down to the river's edge and stood where they could see the birds splashing water over themselves on the sandbars. They saw the dumpy little twice-a-week boat from across the lake unloading goods for the villagers and inhabitants at its dilapidated wharf. On the opposite shore, close to the wayside, was a shanty. They could see its cross from where they stood, with the sun shining on it.

When they were ready to go Paul felt as if he were leaving something in Peribonka, just as the warmth of Carla's hand had left something in his heart. Carla, Peribonka, the little plot of ground—they would be as forgettable as Mrs. Hildan's memories. He thought of this as they rode back through the afternoon. He thought of it later when he stood in his mill again, and looked down upon the sun and grain of machinery in the pit. It troubled him and made him restless and uneasy. This day, burned deeply into his life, seemed unreal now that it was over. It was as if an experience but turned into a dream, a thing of a few minutes instead of hours.

The friendly, faintly smiling gaze of his wife followed him about the room. He answered her letter that evening, and in his pages to her his freshly roused emotions found their voice. He told about the tragedy in Carla's life, of the little plot of ground in the cemetery. Writing in his office, with his wife's face looking at him, it was not difficult for him to let the words pour out, just as he had let them once or twice before in his six years of married life with her. He was a man, wanting a woman. He wanted his wife. He did not want her in Europe or Egypt or waiting for him in a palace at home. He wanted her with him. He told her this as tenderly as a man could write to a woman. It was a letter of love, of ardent hope, of closings—in his wife, Carla was the inspiration of it.

He sealed and addressed the letter and put it in the company's mail. What a glory life would be if his wife would come at last! He had painted a picture for her in the letter—her golden beauty a part of the blue of open skies, a thing near and wonderful for him to have. But when he went out into the night and looked at the row of lighted cottages on the hill he thought of Carla, and yearning to hear her possessed him again.

This impulse bewildered him. He went to his bachelor quarters and tried to read. One by one the houses grew dark. Still he endeavored to make his books and magazines interest him. Never had his nerves been more sleeplessly alert, and their obstinacy persisted after he had undressed and gone to bed. Something kept him awake—an incessant stream of things passing through his mind, detached, illogical, unreasonable, and always bringing him back in one way nor another to Carla and her mother. He got up and dressed. It was after midnight. Over the pit hung an illumination which reached up into the sky like the glow from a volcano. He turned down the cinder path and was soon among the men. No one was on the job who did not know him, even in the night shifts. Many of them spoke to him in a friendly way, but their friendliness failed to wipe away the disquiet of mind which had compelled him to get out of bed. He looked at his watch and found it was one o'clock when he reached the far end of the workings. A gravel-made road led to the forest trail higher up, and he took this road out of the pit.

It Was Carla! No One Else In The Cottage Could Be Crying Like That.

After a little he came to the row of cottages. There was a light in the Hildan home, and he found himself wondering what Carla did with the long nights in which she waited for the coming of death. Was it possible for her to sleep? Or did she sit alone through dragging hours watching her mother, praying for the day?

STEPS that led to the introduction of New ISO-VIS Motor Oil

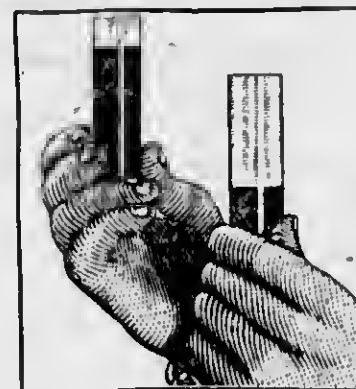

A GROUP OF MEN were gathered in the research laboratory of Standard Oil Company (Indiana).

Before them stood a motor. It had been driven 25,000 miles—the "turn-in" period of the average car. Bit by bit it was taken down. Micrometer measurements were made. In the 25,000 miles of driving it was found that wear on every moving part was far less than normally occurs.

Literally hundreds of these tests were made before we announced New Iso-Vis Motor Oil. Scores of cars of various makes were used. Here are the results:

- 1 Less than normal wear on every part of the motor.
- 2 Less carbon deposits (almost 50 per cent less than the average of various oils).
- 3 Effective lubrication at extremes of heat and cold.
- 4 Absolute proof that New Iso-Vis will not thin out in the crankcase.

You can get New Iso-Vis at all Standard Oil dealers and service stations. Try this better motor oil today.

GRUDDLING road tests proved that New Iso-Vis increases the life of the car. Engine parts, by accurate micrometer measurements, showed much less wear than usual.

New Iso-Vis forms decidedly less carbon than most oils. Thorough tests prove it. New Iso-Vis saves time, trouble and money.

THE GROWING TAX PROBLEM

Michigan is engaged in investigating the growing tax problem. It is a splendid idea from which much good will result. Such an investigation is bound to reveal that not all of our tax troubles are being caused by a state tax, but that things bought by a township or county comes out of the taxpayer's pocket. All government gets its money by taxation.

Nobody can deny that Michigan has a high tax rate, perhaps higher than the average for the entire country, but an examination of your receipt will show that 85 per cent of your present tax burden is self imposed. State taxes enter into only a small part of the picture.

When without question you vote special assessments for drains, roads, equipment, buildings; when you replace one room schools with elaborate structures with staffs of teachers and janitors and costly transportation furnished scholars who formerly walked to school, you must expect your taxes will be increased.

When petitions are signed eagerly for paved highways and streets costing millions, with a large part of the cost spread upon the taxes of the property immediately benefited, there should be no complaint afterwards from those responsible for such expenditures.

Many of the men heard before the special commission, appointed by Governor Green to study the situation, are township and county officials whose voices back home are never heard in protest against reckless expenditures in local affairs. They present a queer anomaly in government—going afar to find the diamonds of entrenchment that lie under their own doorsteps.

OPEN THEM WIDE

Past and present developments in customs of night ventilation of sleeping quarters make an interesting story. It was not so long ago that tightly closed windows were in many quarters the established custom—that was about the time when the fear of "dark night air" was rooted most deeply.

Then came the movement for fresh air in the bedroom, and open windows fell heir to increasing popularity. But the thing became a fad with some enthusiasts. There came into being the fresh air fiend, the fellow who bragged about keeping his windows completely open, winter and summer, and who incidentally spent many an uncomfortable night in consequence.

The faddists have had their day and in their stead has come a more sensible doctrine, namely that windows need be opened only a trifle at some seasons of the year, and that in some cases, for instance on extremely cold and blowy nights, windows may be kept entirely closed without danger to health. The seepage of fresh air between the sash and casement and between the upper and lower windows, according to the Michigan Tuberculosis Association, lets all the aced air into the room.

Common sense as this reform is, it is to be hoped that it will not have the result of keeping windows glued down for a large part of the year. Spring-time breezes are far different than winter gales. The present is not the time to close your windows. Rather, open them wide—it's better to risk having too much air than not enough.

WHERE THE JUDGE WAS WRONG

The principle of freedom of the press won an important victory when an appellate court in Ohio set aside the conviction of the editor and an editorial writer of the Cleveland Press for contempt of court because that newspaper had criticized a judge for granting an injunction restraining a sheriff from interfering with race track gambling.

The court, held that the editorial was not in contempt because it did not intervene in a pending case, nor interfere with the court. The decision declared in effect that a judge is not sacrosanct. "If he can set himself above the rest of mankind and sit in judgment on grievances in which he is the injured party," said the court, "we are establishing a dangerous precedent."

It is a general and well-established rule of journalism that the decision of a court shall not be criticized unless it clearly contravenes a constitutional right. This is not through fear of contempt proceedings, but because of a conviction that the courts should be upheld in the interests of organized society. If an elected judge commits acts which shock the general sense of justice, the people can depend on to refuse to re-elect him.

But when a judge attacks a right guaranteed by Federal and State Constitution, it is the duty of a newspaper to protest, for the court is a creature of the Constitution, and the Constitution is superior to all courts. The decision of the Ohio court of appeal is a complete vindication of the right of a newspaper to criticize a judge under such circumstances.—Detroit News.

WHAT IS A FRIEND?

It is a person with whom you dare to be yourself. Your soul can go naked with him. He seems to ask of you to put on nothing, only to be what you are. He does not want you to be better or worse.

When you are with him you feel as a prisoner feels who has been declared innocent. You do not have to be on your guard. You can say what you think, so long as it is reasonably you. He understands those contradictions in your nature that lead others to misjudge you.

With him you breathe free. You can take off your coat and loosen your collar. You can avow your vanities and envies and hates and vicious sparks, your meanness and absurdities, and in opening them up to him they are lost, dissolved on the white ocean of his loyalty. He understands and you do not have to be careful.

Rest of all, you can keep still with him. It makes no matter. He likes you. He is like fire that purges all you do. He is like water that cleanses all you say. He is like wine that warms you to the bone. He understands, he understands.

You can weep with him, laugh with him, sin with him, pray with him. Through and underneath it all he sees, knows and loves you.

A friend is one with whom you dare to be yourself.—From the Michigan Tradesman.

HELP THE CENSUS MAN

The average citizen regards the effort of any one not a personal friend who attempts to gain knowledge of their personal affairs, as an unwarranted piece of nerve. Undoubtedly some people will assume this attitude shortly when the census takers start the work of completing the decennial census for the U. S. Government. This is not mere "nosiness" however, but a very necessary attempt on the part of the governments needs to secure information which is vital to the nation's records. The law requires that such information shall be given the census taker and the information so divulged is kept in the greatest of confidence. The undertaking is a huge one and entails the necessity of directing the work of an army of people. It cannot be successfully finished without the cooperation of the people. For this reason every citizen is expected to do everything in their power to facilitate the work of the census taker when he drops in, which will be shortly after April 1.

CHAIN LETTER PESTS

Headed allegedly by the names of Senator Heflin, Bernard Shaw, Arthur Tarin, Charles G. Dawes, Henry Ford and Colonel Lindbergh, another pestiferous chain letter is making its way over the face of the civilized but suffering globe.

This time it is a letter "started by a railroad officer" asking each recipient to send on to nine friends the message, "Cross Crossings: Cautiously." The nine friends in turn are requested to pass it on to nine more, on the same terms, as part of a worldwide safety first movement. If any one breaks the chain he is to have hard luck; if he continues it within twenty-four hours, he will enjoy good fortune in eight days—or whatever other tomfoolery the latest victim of superstition wishes to include in his letter. It is easy to imagine Bernard Shaw passing on the letter to his enemies with a wicked gleam of mischief in his eye as he reflects what fools these mortals be—if Bernard Shaw ever saw it.

Nothing in the way of penal legislation appears to have been done, so far, against the chain letter pest. The surest way to break its promise of good luck would be to provide hard luck, in the way of a postal law fine, for any individual convicted of starting a chain. Macintyre there is, always the waste basket.—Grand Rapids Press.

KEEP THE TRADERS OUT

There has been much complaint in past seasons about the number of peddlers and hawkers infesting the State parks and trying to sell their goods, to the annoyance of visitors. Now that we are on the threshold of warm weather, it is time the authorities took action in this matter and prohibited the activities of these salesmen.

They should go even farther and abolish all concessions in the parks. People visit the parks to get away from cities and towns, to play among the trees, to enjoy nature. The hot dog stand, the restaurant, the dispensary of bottled drinks, do not belong in the picture. They are an intrusion, and they should not be permitted.

A great many visitors to the parks bring their own food supplies. Those who do not should be able to find, outside the parks, whatever they may require. It is in no sense the duty of the State to furnish refreshment or extraneous amusement to park visitors. To do so is to nullify the purpose for which the parks were created—to furnish places for the study and enjoyment of nature. Keep trade out of the parks; let them be unspoiled. A multitude of people will then voice thanksgiving for these havens of peace.—Detroit News.

LESS PRISON LABOR

The number of state prisoners employed in Michigan road building has been cut from twelve hundred to seven hundred and Governor Green gives assurance that the reduction will continue below that figure.

That is heartening to residents who have wondered why at a time of excessive unemployment, when any number of honest men out of prison would be glad of a job at thirty cents an hour, the state should keep its prison wards on the highways at that figure. Of course the argument is that all cell and no work is bad for prisoners, and in the piping times of prosperity it may be necessary and wise to give them tasks on the roads for the sake of their health and state of mind. But in periods when the welfare of thousands of out-of-work and law abiding citizens are in the balance there is no question, who should have the job.

As a matter of fact state highway authorities long have felt that the state achieves an actual economy, even in the best of times, by prison labor employment as against a straight contract bid system. The only argument for it at any time is one of prisoner morale.—Grand Rapids Press.

THEY WENT BACK HOME

A few days ago a special train left the Northwest bound for New York. It contained 150 aliens bound for Ellis Island. These folks were being sent to their native lands, deported for the violation of the laws of the United States.

It would seem that deportation is doubtless an effective way to deal with those who have no appreciation of the laws of this nation. No doubt those who return to the disordered nations across the ocean will find that they cannot do what they did in the United States. This land of freedom allows too much latitude, not only to those of foreign countries but to their own citizens.

Deportation sets an effective example.

How to Spend Your Money is rather an unusual title for a bank ad. —But we're serious in making this suggestion.

It's astonishing how some people let money slip through their fingers. Experience teaches that the person with plenty of cash available is almost invariably found to be the easiest and quickest buyer of non-essentials.

The most successful way to stop these leaks is to possess a checking account and draw as the need may arise.

There is no necessity for skimping or for going without, but the checking account is a constant reminder, and one that most always results in the small savings that so rapidly mount.

Your account with this bank will be thankfully accepted.

AGRICULTURAL NOTES

By B. C. Mellenkamp

Forty-five Farmers Keeping Accurate Farm Account Records.

One of the most important, and, in fact, fundamental projects to be carried on by Charlevoix county farmers is that of keeping farm records to enable them to find out the results of the years work, as well as to discover the relative efficiency of each part of the farm business.

Already one year's records have been finished as of March 1, 1930, and the second year has been started. One of the greatest surprises that the cooperators have noted thus far is the large amount of money being handled during one year just from the sale of eggs, dairy products and crop sales, and the cost of feed and supply bills necessary to make the above income possible. Again it has been of great value to the farmer to actually take inventory of his land value, farm buildings, equipment and machinery, and feed and supplies on hand at the beginning. When this is done, the cooperators begin to realize what a large business he is managing and the importance of having accurate knowledge of how efficient each farm department is toward the entire total.

Of a total of thirty-one farmers who started the project last year, twenty-five actually finished the job and had completed books to be checked in H. A. Berg, farm management specialist of Michigan State College, who spent March 10, 11, 12 and 13, in this county for this purpose. This is the largest percentage of finishers that any county has in Michigan, and of ever greater significance is the fact that each of the twenty-five are continuing the second year.

The following farmers kept farm records last year and are continuing this year:

Charlevoix: Oakley Saunders, Geo. Meggison, H. C. Newman, Lee Sneathen, Richard Paddock, Mrs. Orson Cook, Ecklund Bros., W. K. Stray, Charles Withers; Bay Shore: Wm. D.

MICHIGAN STATE COLLEGE WEEKLY BULLETIN

M. S. C. to Increase Farm Radio Service.

Expansion of farm radio service from station WKAR, Michigan State College, will follow more favorable assignments granted the station by federal radio authorities, according to announcements made this week by R. J. Baldwin, director of the M. S. C. extension division.

A noon broadcast, featuring market reports, weather forecasts, and short, timely farm talks, will be continued, it is said. This program has been carried regularly on week days for several years, and is followed closely by thousands of Michigan farmers.

An early evening farm radio school will be started early in the fall, if plans of the college authorities are carried out. This "school of the air," started originally in the winter of 1924-25, was the leading feature of WKAR programs until the last two years, during which time the station has been limited to daylight hours. A new allocation, affecting a number of stations, is expected to give the college more time on the air next year.

Other special broadcasts under discussion include a cooperative program for high school agricultural classes, and a special afternoon home-makers' hour.

When the proposed changes go into effect, WKAR expects to broadcast on a wave length of about 361 meters, with a thousand watts of power. The station is at present operating on 288 meters.

Train Will Carry Forestry Message.

Trees and their value as a crop for idle acres in Michigan will be the subject for a group of speakers who will accompany a special forestry train over the Pennsylvania lines from Kalamazoo to Petoskey, April 14 to 19.

This is the first time that a special train has been used in Michigan to show the advantages of forest cover for increasing the attractiveness of the State as a resort country, in making a future supply of lumber possible, for furnishing protection for wild life, and for preventing the erosion of rough areas.

The U. S. Forest Service, Michigan State College, the Michigan Tourist and Resort Association, the Isaac Walton League, and farm and civic organizations will furnish exhibits or speakers for the train. Three cars will be used to carry the exhibits and one car is to be used for the lectures which will be given at each stop.

An essay contest in which prizes will be awarded to school children will be conducted on the subject, "Why Reforest."

The train will make stops in Kalamazoo, Grand Rapids, Ravenna, Muskegon, Cedar Springs, Howard City, Big Rapids, Reed City, Nanton, Cadillac, Traverse City, Kalkaska, Manistota, and Petoskey.

Start Poison Plot Against Fruit-Fly.

Two fruit-flies which differ in their color scheme but which are similar in their tastes for Michigan cherries are going to have a hard season if the advice given by the entomology department at Michigan State College is accepted by orchard owners in the state.

The few days which intervene between the time when these flies emerge from their underground pupal cases, and the time when they start laying eggs on cherries is sufficient to insure the control of the pests if a spray of two and one-half pounds of powdered arsenate of lead to 100 gallons of water, with or without two gallons of liquid lime sulphur is used promptly.

This spray can not be used on cherries which are not going to be thoroughly washed before they are eaten. Lead arsenate is poisonous to people as well as flies and the residue of the poison which remains on the cherries must be washed off before they are used as food.

The spray has to be applied immediately after the flies emerge as adults and, as this time varies in the different sections of Michigan, observing stations are used in each area to find the exact time when the spraying should start. Newspaper, extension workers, the radio, and other agencies aid in getting the warning to the growers.

Circular bulletin No. 131 recently published by the college gives detailed instructions for cherry fruit-fly control.

COUNTY NORMAL NEWS.

Although the Normal students regretted the fact that their vacation did not come at the same time that the college vacation did, they are glad now because of the unexpected snow. Spring vacation comes the second week in April.

Last Friday night Miss Baker and Miss Richardson sponsored a class party, games being played at Miss Baker's home and delicious refreshments being served later at the home of Miss Richardson.

Among those on the sick list last week were the Misses Abbey, Sutton and Ouden.

What a feeling of relief passed over the Normal class as Miss Bigge announced that every student had earned a Palmer Method certificate. "The next thing is paying thirty cents to obtain these certificates."

This week marks the end of the first teaching period of the last term. Everyone has been assigned new subjects for the next teaching period.

After interviewing Miss Bigge and Mr. Palmer, the student teachers are making applications for some of the schools in Charlevoix county.

Mrs. Andrews has been out of school the last few days on account of the illness of her small son.

Civics class has been studying the manner of naturalizing foreigners in this country. A playlet to that effect was given in class Monday morning. The characters were as follows: Antonio Salvo, the foreigner, Miss LaCount; county clerk, Miss Dorothy Smith; witnesses, Miss Crump and Miss Richardson; judge, Miss Baker.

fence which enclosed her flower garden, and his ears caught a sound which did not come from the pit. It was like a cry. He opened the gate quietly and went in. A window was open, somewhere, and he could hear clearly a voice that was sobbing. It was Carla's. No one else in the cottage could be crying like that—surely not Carla's mother. His heart thumped against his ribs. His breath came a little short. He went to the door and knocked against it gently. Then more loudly. Some one came, and the door opened. He entered and stood beside Carla. She had not been in bed, had not been undressed. She was as he had left her hours before, except that her face and eyes were stricken with a grief that terrified him. Then, in the dim light, a miracle happened. She smiled at him through tears. "I was hoping for you," she said.

"I was passing—heard you crying—" He said no more, because he had guessed only half the truth. He was careful to speak so that his voice would not awaken Carla's mother, if she were asleep. His mind was not working quickly, he was bewildered and frightened by the agony in Carla's face, the way she turned and went ahead of him into the big room with Mrs. Haldan's empty chair near the window, and from that to another room that was full of light, and from which the sobbing must have come at the gate. In the open door of this room Carla waited, and without turning her head gave him her hand. It was a cold, lifeless little hand, with no spark left of the warmth and thrill which he had felt in it a few hours before. He closed his eyes over it tightly, for the hand, more than Carla's face and eyes, struck the truth to his heart. They went in. Mrs. Haldan lay in her bed. Her face was flushed with peace, her lips were gently smiling. She was very white and very still. Paul knew she was dead.

Carla drew him nearer. When they were beside her mother she looked up at him. Her eyes, flooded with their pain, were starry bright, almost with pride, almost with glory. "Beautiful," she whispered, the word breaking in her throat.

"Paul loved his home. Yes, she is beautiful," he said, fighting to keep his voice even. The hand which was not holding Carla's he placed on her mother's white forehead. For a few moments they stood in this way. Then the same impulse which had drawn his boyish lips to his mother's cold face when her soul was gone made him bend over and kiss the smooth, white brow where his hand had lain. A little cry tore itself from Carla's breast, and finding her hand from Paul's she sank down upon her knees and pressed her face closely against her mother. For an eternity it seemed to him, he stood over her—an eternity in which he could find no words for his lips to say, nothing which might help a little to ease the grief which had come so suddenly and crushingly upon her.

Slowly he put out a hand until it rested on Carla's head. Then he gently stroked her hair, and after a little the restlessness went out of Carla's body, and she seemed to be sleeping beside her mother—sleeping with wide-open, misty eyes, which Paul could not see, while through the partly open window came to them the drone and grind and distant tumult of the pit.

On Tuesday they went to Peribonka.

For thirty minutes there was silence in the pit, the first time in three years. The pit demanded it. It cared nothing for James Kirke, on whose millions it fed, but for Carla Haldan it held a warm affection. Out of the pit came tributes of flowers which smothered the little cottage on the hill, and when Carla and her mother went to Peribonka the soul of the pit went with them. For the first time Paul looked down upon it and almost loved it.

The next day Carla was among her children in the school. This was the most amazing part of her fortune. Two days later Paul was called unexpectedly to New York.

The new life which submerged him for a fortnight, its passionate business details, its conferences, the talk of still more millions, and of greater activities, was like a plunge into a maelstrom. His father and Durand had perfected a fresh scheme for bringing in another hundred million dollars of other people's money. Each day they were struggling to reach a little farther. Their huge new office building, with its appalling efficiency and ceaseless rush of living creatures, oppressed and dismayed him. And he was startled by its unexpected effect upon him. It was worse than the pit, for the pit had its redeeming edge of wilderness and its human forces at work with their inked hands in rock and clay. Here his mind seemed dulled, his wits blunted, his senses overwhelmed by the magnitude of the things which he knew were happening without the physical use of hands and bodies, without the flesh and blood vigor—the strain of brawn and muscle—which had made the pit endurable for him. He made no great effort to enter into it or to understand it. The house where his mother had lived seemed no longer even the hulk of a home. It was filled with a cathedral stillness, wrapped up, packed away, moth-protected, like a palace whose occupants had suddenly died, a place guarded by soft-footed and obsequious servants who made him shiver. It was a sanctuary of hopes for him, a place of safety and laughter and entertainment for Carla. Here he felt about him a clinging emptiness, a great loneliness, a haunting unrest—and in this same environment Carla would find amusement and happiness when she returned. The truth of the thing added to his heaviness of heart. A new note had come into his thoughts. He was beginning to ask himself if Carla, with all her wealth and freedom, were really happy. And if, in any way, it were possible for him to make her happy.

He had written to her immediately after the death of Carla's mother, and toward the end of the fortnight he sent her another letter. He wanted her more than ever, and in this last letter, his third since he had heard from her, he told of the loneliness of the great house, its emptiness, its coldness, and how only her golden presence could bring it back to life. In spiratorially he made a suggestion. If she would come back and spend only a little while with him upon the Mistassini, he would take her anywhere she might want to go when the job was off his hands—around the world, if that would please her. It would be rather wonderful, wouldn't it? Around the world—just they two! He asked the question with almost boyish hope and earnestness.

He was glad when the day arrived for him to leave for the Mistassini, for there seemed to be something of home-ness about the pit for him now. The company boat took him at Roberval, across the lake. When he first caught the gleam of sunlight on the white, bare walls of the monastery at the mouth of the Peribonka, he felt as if a soothing and friendly influence had come to possess him.

A press of business awaited him at his office, and not until the day after his return did he see Carla. She was among her children, in the closing hour of school in the afternoon. The tragic strain which he had observed in her face before her mother's death had disappeared. A deeper and more permanent thing had taken its place, and though it was less poignant, it stirred him for a moment with a sensation of uneasiness, as if he had personally lost something. He could not tell just what it was, then or afterward. She seemed older, as if he had been away two years instead of two weeks, and he felt, in an uncomfortable way, as if a distance as wide as the pit itself had come between them. Even the little tremble of gladness in her voice when she greeted him did not dispel this effect.

He walked with her to the cottage and she gave him flowers for his office, and when he returned with them and put them on his desk, he was oppressed still more by the sense of having missed an important and necessary thing which he had expected to find when he came back to the pit. He was sure that Carla had been glad to see him. But she was not the same. Carla he had taken over the little berry patch to Peribonka. He doubted if she would personally come to his office with flowers again.

In this he was mistaken. She came on Saturday morning with an armful of asters. Another light or two of frost and they would all be gone, she said. She asked about Carla and they talked for a few minutes of his visit to the city. She did not speak of her mother, or Peribonka, or anything that had to do with her self—except her flowers and her school. As she arranged the flowers she bent over his desk so that the slimy head which he had stroked with his hand was very near him, and suddenly he felt himself overwhelmed by a flame that left no part of him untouched. When Carla's deft fingers finished their task, she found Paul looking at her with a face that was wholly Indian once more. He thanked her as he might have thanked her a year ago. His hand touched hers for just a moment, and a swift throb came in Carla's throat. Their eyes met, Carla's faultlessly clear and pure and filled with a shining light—Paul's with a somber, settled grimace far back in them.

At his door they paused another moment. Then Carla left him.

It was her last visit to his office.

Within an hour after she had gone Paul was driving to Peribonka alone. The roads had hardened, and he made it quickly in his car. The asters and a bunch of roses which had come to him from Roberval he placed on Mrs. Haldan's grave. Carla had been there, for the grave was well cared for and covered with flowers from her garden, most of them faded and shriveled by the frosts. These he gathered in a cluster and placed in a pot by them selves, near his roses. He remembered that Carla loved flowers even when their color and life were gone.

He made no effort to blind himself to the fact which had leaped upon him so irresistibly when he had looked at Carla's head bent over his desk. The utility of such evasion struck him with almost equal force. He wanted Carla, and that was as much a part of him as his vision or his sense of the obligations of life. It was she who had brought him back to the Mistassini with a feeling that he was on his way home. His regard for her was not a sudden eruption brought about by a physical or emotional restlessness, which might have been stirred by her nearness and her beauty. He could look back and see where it had been growing in him slowly over a period of three years, so slowly that it had not been difficult for him to escape its true significance. But now there was no longer the possibility of either avoidance or self-deception. He knew that Carla meant more to him than friendship, and that only a miracle had kept his arms from taking her into them.

He also believed that a flash of understanding had come into her eyes when she looked at him and saw in his face the grim shadowing of the fight which from that moment he was bound to make.

After this Paul was more than ever filled with the desire to go among the men and work with his hands, and he was seldom in his office. Every minute in his body yearned for the strenuous activity of work which he saw pulled upon others, and he let down the bars which his position had compelled him to accept, until, at times one coming upon him in the pit would have taken him for a laborer. He was skilful with the ax, and one day late in October he had finished hewing a saddle into a heavy timber when he turned about to find Carla standing a few feet away, looking at him. She had come to the far edge of the pit to find the father of one of her boys, and for a moment it seemed to Paul that he caught in her face a look which bridged in a few seconds the abyssal gulf which he had felt growing between them since her mother's death. He went to her, breathing quickly the sense of his exertions, and Carla laughed softly, almost with a little triumph in her throat, when he showed her his hands blackened by pine pitch.

He went to Peribonka frequently during these autumn days, and once a week he had flowers sent to him from Roberval for Mrs. Haldan's grave. Carla knew of his visits to the little cemetery, and Paul made no effort to conceal them from her. He never went on Sunday, which was Carla's day with her mother. When she tried to express to him the depth of her gratitude, he talked as if it were the spirit of his own mother he was thinking of when he took flowers to Peribonka. But he felt he was not hiding the truth from her, and was rather glad of it. It was a satisfaction for him to know that Carla was conscious of his thoughts about her. It made his fight easier, gave it a certain thrill, which comes to a man when he is aware that some one he cares for is watching him. And the knowledge of it could not harm Carla in whose life another love had fastened itself so securely that no corner of her heart could be filled with an emotion responsive to his own. They made no effort to avoid each other, except that he did not take her to Peribonka and she did not come to his office any more, and one day when they were together he asked her frankly why she did not marry. No sooner were the words spoken than he was sorry. He could see the hurt flame up for an instant in her eyes, like a fire from which a curtain had been suddenly snatched away; and then it died out, leaving her face a little whiter, but smiling at him gently, as if she were apologizing for letting it affect her in that way. Then she told him it was almost tradition in their family that a woman should have but one love. And she had loved a man, still loved him, with all her heart and soul, though he was gone from her forever. The love had come into her life a long time ago. She emphasized this fact, looking away from him with her long lashes veiling eyes filled with mystic visions.

He was glad he had heard the words from her own lips. It built up a new comradeship between them and made him more positive of his triumph over himself. A letter from Carla helped him. His wife laughed at him pleasantly for his whimsical suggestion of a journey around the world, and then painted in his picturesque and vivid way the torture which she knew such a trip would be for him. "Without your forests, your open skies, your big outdoors, you would die before we got half around, Paul," she wrote him. "It would be merciless of me to make you pay in that way for my presence up at the Mistassini. I am coming, and just because I want to come. I am anticipating seeing something very wonderful up there, something which will mean greatly more to you and me than six months or a year rambling around the earth. As for such a trip, with you in it"—and then she went on to tell him more about himself than he thought she had ever known. The letter thrilled him. It gave him a new vision of Carla, who had never understood him in this gentle and understanding way, portraying for him the life which he loved as though it were a part of herself. But in the end, after assuring him again that she was coming to him and was looking forward to the time when they would be together, she said her return to America might be postponed until the following May or June. Could he wait that long?

Don't Stub Your Toe!

One dark night—so the story goes—a certain monarch placed a large boulder in the middle of the road. Thousands of his people, thereafter, severely stubbed their toes or troubled to walk around. At length, one lusty youth—wiser than the rest—seized the stone and heaved from its path. And where it had rested, he found a bag of gold.

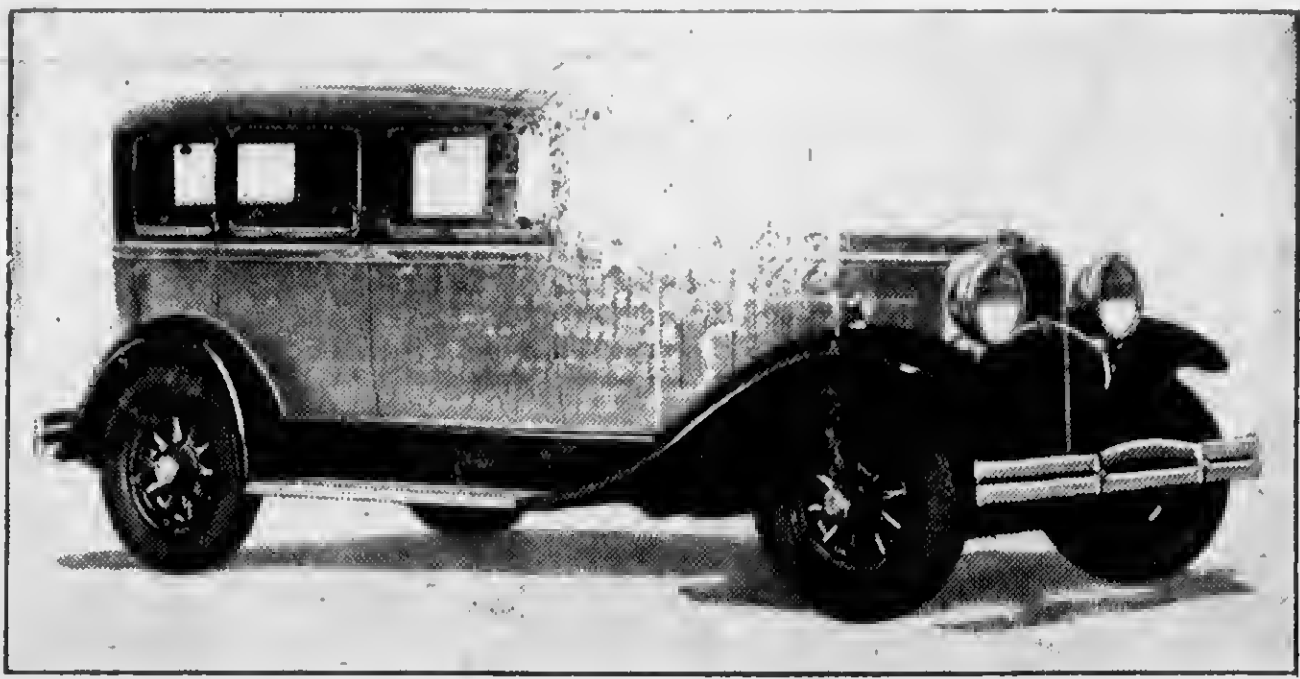

Are you stubbing your toe? Are you overlooking any bags of gold? How about the advertising in this paper? Do you read it—consistently? It is a bag of gold to many of our readers. In our columns you will find the advertisements of alert, progressive merchants and manufacturers who seek to tell you something they think you ought to know. This advertising is news about the very little things that interest you most—articles that will save you money, lessen your work, or add materially to your comfort and well-being.

Thrifty men and women read advertising. To them it is a plain, every-day business proposition—a duty they owe themselves and their purses. It tells them where they can buy exactly what they want at a price they can afford to pay.

Advertising pays them. They make it pay.

IT WILL PAY YOU TOO. READ IT.

BROWN TAKES OVER GRAHAM-PAIGE LINE

James Wyers Represents Agency as Exclusive Salesman.

The new Graham-Paige representatives have procured one of the most desirable automobile franchises in the industry. With the backing of the three Graham brothers, the Graham has risen rapidly in popular favor. Last year's registration figures showed that it was one of the few makes of cars that had an increase in actual sales as compared with the previous year.

The line of Graham passenger cars now comprises two new medium-priced models, two sixes, and two large custom eights; in addition, the Paige commercial car is available in two body models.

The standard and special eight models introduced this year, have 100 h. p. motors incorporating strikingly advanced engineering, with a unique fuel distribution system that includes an unusual design of manifold and heat control device.

Since acquiring the factories of the Paige-Detroit company, the Grhams have more than doubled their manufacturing facilities. Two body plants—first one at Wayne, Mich., and then a great new factory at Evansville, Ind.—were acquired and equipped with the most modern production machinery. Lumber mills were erected at Perry, Fla., to supply these plants with hardwoods for body construction.

Benjamin Brown has the Graham-Paige agency for Charlevoix and territory south to Elk Rapids, and James Wyers is salesman exclusively for this line. Mr. Brown's announcement adv. is elsewhere in this issue.

COMMUNICATION

Charlevoix, April 1, 1930.
Editor of the Courier:

Dear Sir—Forty-nine years ago the first Monday in April, I attended my first election in Marion Center. John Shapton, Sr., George Anderson, R. S. Shapton, Wm. Shapton and myself walked across from the State road through a mile of solid timber; over snow from two to three feet deep. Deer tracks were not as scarce then as they are now, neither was ground hemlock for deer to feed on.

At that time not a tree had been cut on my farm. Only five or six acres had been slashed on Wm. Shapton's. A trail was blazed through the woods from where Wm. Shapton's house now stands, to a little clearing of an acre or two on George Ball's place.

That spring Wm. Burns sawed 100,000 feet of hardwood lumber taken from the land where his buildings now stand.

There was no bank on the corner then, nor one in the county. There was only one church in Charlevoix—the Methodist. There were three general stores and on Saturday the Indians came full force to get their supplies.

The women folks didn't telephone in their orders and have them delivered by a fine truck. There were a few plank sidewalks, but mostly we walked in sand up to our ankles. Cows ran at large and each one wore a bell. The old wooden bucket was in use, and in case of fire, a line was formed and passed buckets along to the fire.

The Fountain City and Idaho were regular callers, bringing passengers and provisions and taking on a supply of four-foot wood at an outside dock. Some years later the Fountain City came into the harbor and the town nearly went wild with delight.

The resorters were just beginning to come to Charlevoix. That year the Chicago Club was built, taking thirty days to complete it. A few cottages were also built, as also at the Belvedere.

John S. Dixon conducted a dairy where the Inn and those cottages are. Horseback riding was quite the thing, and later bicycles. I remember one year there were about 70 on the Club grounds. We thought we were living in a wonderful age. And it's my guess that in a very short time resorters will be buying farms and raise their own vegetables, chickens, lambs and milk and cream, and have a landing place for their airplanes. Very truly yours,
Isaac Mills.

AT THE MOVIES.

"Lost Zeppelin" One of Year's Big Pictures.

One of the year's most exciting talking and sound pictures opens at the Palace Theatre April 9 and 10. It is "The Lost Zeppelin," a Tiffany production, featuring Conway Tearle, Virginia Valli and Ricardo Cortez.

"The Lost Zeppelin" is a combination of romance and adventure. The thread of thrilling romance follows the huge dirigible to the antarctic regions, where there is a smashing climax. With everybody talking about Zeppelins and with ambitious north pole plans for the giant Graf Zeppelin, this picture has tremendous interest aside from the absorbing story it tells.

"Marianne" and Marian Davies in Joint Triumph of Film and Star.

With all the ingredients for a modernized light opera, "Marianne" will score a distinct triumph at the Palace Theatre April 5 and 6, when it is presented by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer as Marian Davies' musical-talking feature debut.

This is the most tuneful talking film yet to reach the screen without suffering an infringement upon its dramatic values and it sparkles with a romantic charm seldom approached in any other entertainment medium.

GIVE CENSUS TAKER TRUE FARM VALUE

No Gain in Over Stating Value of Your Farm Property.

Over-valuation of farm lands and buildings, when reporting to the census takers, may mean over-taxation of farmers in following years. This warning was issued March 24 by R. Wayne Newton, director of taxation of the Michigan Farm Bureau.

"Census reports are confidential, and tax officials are not permitted to look at the individual returns," Mr. Newton said, adding, "however, farm value figures published by the bureau of the census are frequently used by federal and state officials, and by many others interested in the subject of taxation, as a guide to checking assessed valuations for taxation purposes."

"Many farmers over-state the value of their farms because they have no desire to sell and would not sell unless paid a price that is considerably above the present market value. The amount such men would take for their farms has very little to do with the true value. It has frequently been said that the money value of a piece of real estate is the price it would bring at a sale between a willing buyer and a willing seller. Farmers who are unwilling to sell are advised to consider what their farms would bring on the market if they did want to sell, when preparing their answers to the census question No. 26 which asks: 'Total value of this farm (land and buildings, including farm land and buildings rented from others.)'

"Copies of the farm census schedules have been sent to many farmers in all parts of the state and the census agents will begin their work in April."

"Farmers are advised that a report is required by law from every operator of a farm and are urged to co-operate with census officials so that the census will give a true picture of present day farm conditions."

WAYNE COUNTY LOST HIGHWAY FUND SUIT

State Supreme Court Denies Petition to Force Changes.

Wayne county has lost its fight for a new system of distribution of highway finances under which it would have benefitted by $679,062 during the last two and a half years. The state supreme court last week denied the county's petition for a writ which would have compelled the auditor general to redistribute funds collected since August 1927 when the last amendment to the auto gasoline tax was passed.

The court's decision was unanimous. It stated that the intention of the legislature was clear despite the fact the wording of the acts involved might permit of the interpretation claimed by Wayne.

The court pointed out that the 1927 legislature rejected a wording which would have distinctly carried the meaning Wayne placed upon the act and that in 1929 the statute was again approved when it was up for minor amendments.

Wayne's contention in the suit was that the $6,000,000 given the counties from the weight tax should be divided entirely according to the number of cars in the various counties.

The highway department has divided seven eighths of the sum in this manner, but has split the remaining eighth equally.

The case was of great interest to every county in the state, for had Wayne won, most of the other counties would have been very heavy losers.

PIONEER RECALLS EARLY STRUGGLES

MRS. ANDREW STRUTHERS WAS EARLY COUNTY SETTLER.

Box of Matches Lasted Family a Year
Then—One Ox Team Borrowed
Back and Forth.

Heart-breaking struggles for a meager existence in the unbroken wilderness of Charlevoix county back in the early 80's are still vivid experiences to Mrs. Andrew R. Struthers, pioneer of South Arm and Innes townships, who passed her 90th birthday anniversary on Valentine's day, February 14.

Times when a nickel box of matches must supply the family for a year or two; when her husband traversed many miles afoot over wilderness trails to bring necessary supplies for the table; when the small garden plot among the logs and stumps was cultivated with a hoe for lack of other implements, and many other similar vicissitudes that beset the hardy settlers of Northern Michigan, are still fresh in her memory.

Elizabeth Walker, who was born January 14, 1840, at Stratford, Ontario, married Andrew R. Struthers on November 11, 1864. The young husband was a marine engineer on the Saginaw river, but forsaking this occupation, he brought his bride to settle in Northern Michigan. They arrived at Pine River (now Charlevoix) by boat. In addition to a trunk of personal belongings, their capital was exactly four dollars.

The first summer of their married life was spent in a squatter's cabin on what is now the site of East Jordan. They gained a livelihood mostly by hunting and fishing. A small garden, planted among logs and stumps and cultivated with a hoe, raised sufficient potatoes and vegetables to provide the table the following winter. Their nearest neighbor lived four miles away and there were but three families in the vicinity.

Mr. Struthers cleared enough land for a cabin site and with an axe fell and cut timbers and logs for the structure. Through extreme diligence, he managed to save enough money to buy a cow. In 1868, when South Arm township was organized as a part of Antrim county, Mr. Struthers was elected supervisor. With his year's salary from this office, he purchased a steer. For some time he drove the cow and steer together, but later traded the cow for an ox. This team was the first in the township and for a period of four or five years it was loaned back and forth to enable farmers to cultivate their lands and conduct logging operations. It was five years before the luxury of a team of horses could be afforded.

Mrs. Struthers relates that Oscar Metz was the only match manufacturer in the region. A box about four inches square cost five cents and was sufficient to last a year or two. She used to send her son five miles through the woods to Metz's place after the matches. One winter they ran out and had no money to purchase more. With practically the last match, her husband set fire to a dead maple tree. The core, similar to punk, burned until spring, and each morning they would bring live coals from the burning tree to kindle their fires.

During the winter of 1867 Mr. Struthers cut wood at a camp many miles away from home. Mrs. Struthers was left alone from Sunday until the following Saturday of each week. The nearest neighbor lived several miles away, and the region was then wild and fierce. This same winter, it became necessary for her husband to go to Charlevoix, nine miles away, after necessary supplies for the home. Upon his return, he carried a sack weighing seventy pounds, the contents being evenly divided between the various articles of merchandise in one end and a live pig in the other.

THE WEEK'S WEATHER

The temperatures for the past week at Charlevoix are furnished as follows by the U. S. Coast Guard station:

	High	Low
Wednesday	46	26
Thursday	42	32
Friday	54	34
Saturday	66	46
Sunday	44	32
Monday	34	28
Tuesday	34	30

To walk such a distance in mid-winter through heavy snow, which, in many places was unbroken, was a severe test for any man.

These are but a few of the difficult experiences Mrs. Struthers saw during the earlier pioneer days in Charlevoix county.

Mrs. Struthers now resides with her son, John Struthers, in Innes township. She has six other children. They are: Mrs. Lucinda Hagerty, Mrs. Viola Peterson and Charles W. Struthers of Portland, Oregon; Mrs. Amelia Howe, Andrew Struthers and Robert Struthers, all of Charlevoix. There are thirty-three grandchildren and 17 great-grandchildren.

On the occasion of her 90th birthday, nearly 50 neighbors, friends and relatives gathered at a surprise party to help her celebrate. Mrs. Struthers was the life of the party. She is very hardy and only a year ago traveled from Portland, Oregon, to Charlevoix by train, unaccompanied.

W. E. Byers, popular and well known auctioneer, announces that he will hold another community auction sale in the near future, date to be set later. DELINQUENT TAX LIST IS LARGER

100-PER CENT INCREASE IN THE LAST TEN YEARS.

Increase General, But is Composed Largely of Property in Eastern Part of County.

According to County Treasurer Joseph Wm. Flanders, this year will see the largest sale of tax delinquent property in the history of Charlevoix county.

From a total of 827 descriptions in 1919, the list has gradually grown year by year. In 1922, the number of delinquent parcels had increased to 1247. In 1929 there were 1575 descriptions, but the present year tops them all by a large margin, showing a total of 1803. The increase since 1919 is considerably over 100 per cent and in the past year practically 30 per cent.

While inability to pay taxes is somewhat general throughout the county, the greatest share of delinquencies are in the eastern portion, with the city of Boyne City heading the list. According to Mr. Flanders, tax collections at the settlement date on March 1 last, were up to the general average and in some instances better.

Charlevoix city is the best pay in the county, which, by the way, is a considerable source of satisfaction. Out of a total tax of $45,819.54, Charlevoix returned only $6,548.54, or about one-tenth. Boyne City returned $8,660.11 out of a total tax of $29,460.24, or a little less than a third. East Jordan did better, returning $3,890.83 out of a total tax of $20,421.78.

After reading the above figures, it is not at all hard to see where the tax money is coming from. Charlevoix pays more than all other cities and one of the highest assessed townships put together. Collapse of the lumber industry hit East Jordan and Boyne City a hard blow, but with a little time, they will probably readjust themselves.

STATE PARKS HAVE PLAYGROUND EQUIP.

Forty-eight Parks Provide Amusement Features for Children.

Forty-eight of Michigan's state parks are now provided with playground equipment, obtained through the state athletic fund.

Last year 28 of the parks received playground equipment. By the end of the 1930 season all of the supervised parks will have such equipment, according to the Parks division of the Department of Conservation which is now putting the parks in condition for the rush of visitors which will begin about June 1. The supervised parks will be formally opened in the public May 30.

FORMER RESIDENT DIED LATE SUNDAY

EDMUND SHAPTON HIGHLY RESPECTED IN VICINITY.

Was for Many Years a Resident of Barnard District, Marion Township—Ill Short Time.

Charlevoix residents and those of the Barnard district of Marion township were grieved Monday to learn of the death of Edmund Shapton, which occurred late Sunday afternoon at his home in Flint, Michigan.

Mr. Shapton, a former highly respected resident of this city and for many years an equally well liked farmer of Marion township, had been ill for several weeks prior to his death.

Deceased was born March 17, 1867, at Avonport, Berth county, Ontario. At the age of 12 years he came with his parents, John and Sarah Shapton, to Charlevoix county, settling on a farm on the State road in Marion township. He received his education in the rural school there and also attended Charlevoix schools. Following the death of his father, Mr. Shapton took over management of the farm, and resided there until the spring of 1919, when he moved to Charlevoix. For the past three years he had been residing in Flint.

Mr. Shapton was married in 1893 to Miss Elizabeth Bennett. To this union were born two children. A daughter, Mrs. George Sands of Flint, survives besides the widow. A son, Leslie T. Shapton, was killed in France during the World war. Leslie T. Shapton Post No. 225, Charlevoix, is named for him. Other relatives are a sister, Mrs. George Anderson of this city, and four brothers, Richard and William Shapton of Charlevoix; Thomas Shapton of Flint, and John Shapton of Aberdeen, Washington.

Mr. Shapton was deeply religious and a faithful church worker. He was for many years a trustee and usher of the Methodist church in this city. In Marion township, he had held the office of highway commissioner and, like in Charlevoix, was held in the highest esteem by all who knew him.

Following prayer at the Martin Block home on Bridge street, funeral services will be held Thursday morning at 10:30 from the Methodist church, Rev. John E. Lockyer, officiating. Interment at Brookside.

TWO BIG GOLFING EVENTS ASSURED

MICHIGAN STATE AMATEUR
MEET HERE JULY 23-26.

Great Lakes Invitation Open Championship July 15-17—With $1,000 Top Prize.

The rolling fairways of the Belvedere Golf Club course will be the scene of two major golfing events during the 1930 summer season.

Associated Press dispatches are out with an announcement from James Standish, Jr., Detroit, president of the Michigan State Golf League, that the Michigan State Amateur tournament would be held here July 23 to 26. This announcement follows acceptance by Belvedere Golf Club officials of the league's invitation to hold the meet in Charlevoix. Former plans were to hold the tournament at the Jackson Country Club, but changes were necessitated by the course not being in shape.

The State Amateur event will draw between one hundred and a hundred and fifty of the profession.

Announcements are also out for the second annual Great Lakes Open Golf Championships, with dates set for July 15, 16 and 17. Outstanding changes in the program are a substantial increase in prize money and making the tourney an invitation affair.

With $1,000 posted as first prize, the event will be Michigan's greatest golfing attraction and one of the nation's leading tournaments of the 1930 summer season. Inaugurated in August, 1929, the meet drew most of the big guns of the profession, including Walter Hagen, British open champion, who copped off first money; Horton Smith, professional golf's big cash winner for the last two years; Tommy Armour, Abe Epstein, Al Watrous, Bill Melhorn, Danny Shute and others.

Other prizes listed for the 1930 tournament are as follows: Second prize, $500; 3rd, $300; 4th, $200; 5th, $100. Four prizes of $50 each go to the professionals making the low medal round for 72 holes and a gold medal for the low scorer. Other prizes, not yet listed, will be given the low amateurs.

John R. Bowker, executive secretary of the Great Lakes Golf Association, who has been following most of the big winter golf tournaments in the south, states that all of the pros who took part in the Great Lakes Open last summer are planning to return for the 1930 event, and that in addition many others will be here.

With two such major golf attractions assured, together with the unsurpassed beauty of the Belvedere course, Charlevoix is destined to become famous as a golfing resort.

SURPRISE AFFAIR AT WITHERS HOME FRIDAY

BUSINESS PLACES FORM ASSOCIATION

Merchant Minute Men's Assn. is Headed by Charles Gale.

At a meeting held last Friday evening in the council chambers, Charlevoix business interests organized a Merchant Minute Men's association with Charles Gale as chairman and Robert Bridge as secretary-treasurer. W. H. Gibson of the Fochtman department store, Petoskey, addressed the gathering. His remarks, based on plain business facts, were enthusiastically received.

The newly organized association plans to have some of the best speakers available address local mass meetings in the near future, and negotiations are also under way to obtain W. H. Caslow of Grand Rapids, for a meeting early in May.

The next association meeting will be Friday evening of this week at the Charlevoix Hardware company store, at eight o'clock. This change in meeting place was made so as to have radio connection. Information of the birth of the association in Charlevoix has been wired to Henderson at Shreveport, La., with the request that he broadcast a word directly for Charlevoix between the hours of 9 and 10 p. m. He acknowledged the request Monday night.

All business and professional men are invited to come and hear what Henderson has to say.

STOP FISHING IN LAKE CHARLEVOIX

SEASON CLOSED FROM MARCH 31 TO MAY 1ST.

Local Anglers Protest Rule Closing
Lake for One Month Period—
Say It Is Not Consistent.

Many local sportsmen are considerably wrought up over the closing of Lake Charlevoix to fishing, and would like to know what it is all about.

We refer them to the 1930 digest of fishing laws, which are now available at license agencies, from the county clerk, or any game warden.

The Digest specifically states that connecting waters to the Great Lakes are under state supervision and regulation. Thus, Lake Charlevoix is included. Lake Charlevoix is classified as a "pike lake." Under this regulation, it is lawful to take mackinaw trout, with hook and line, from May 1 to March 31. In those lakes classified as "trout lakes," the season for mackinaws is May 1 to Sept. 1. In other lakes not coming under the above mentioned classifications, the season is from June 25 to Mar. 31. The same regulations cover such non-game fish as cisco, suckers, whitefish, smelt and others. Therefore, it is unlawful to catch any of them now.

Thus the situation is explained. Why in the world the conservation departments want to close Lake Charlevoix for that period of one month, Mar. 31 to May 1, is more than the average person can figure. A man has to be a "Philadelphia lawyer" nowadays to figure out the mass of laws governing fishing, or any other sport, for that matter. Looks like some more of those "swivel chair" laws like the 3-foot handle on smelt dip nets. The fact remains that it is law, however, and that's that. Should our Lansing officials get out and study local conditions before making laws governing them, they would probably have better cooperation from sportsmen.

The game is limited to boys under 15 years of age.

In most communities groups will represent Sunday schools, scouts and other organizations paying some attention to the interest of boys. The city contests likely will be held early in May, the district a week or so later, with the area contest late in May or the first day of two in June.

TOWNSHIPS CHOSE OFFICERS MONDAY

BIG VOTE OUT IN SEVERAL NEARBY PRECINCTS.

Hayes Had Record Poll With Many Split Tickets—"Bill" Cook Wins in Charlevoix Township.

Interest in the election Monday in townships adjacent to Charlevoix showed a sharp contrast to that held within the city. In four out of five precincts two tickets were in the field, and some instances competition was pretty warm.

In Charlevoix township, the veteran supervisor, William H. Cook, who came in on ticket No. 2 through his defeat at the caucus, carried the regular election with flying colors. The north-enders had the edge on their fellow citizens on the south side of town all the way through. In most of the other townships, old officers were returned.

Following are the results:

Charlevoix Township.
Supervisor, William H. Cook.
Clerk, Vern Norton.
Treasurer, Mrs. Minnie Stroud.
Highway Commissioner, John Marten.

Justice of the Peace, Colon McKenzie.

Board of Review, E. E. Stroud.
Apparently they need no law enforcement in Charlevoix township, for no constables were elected.

Hayes Township.
Supervisor, Howard Stephens.
Clerk, Mrs. Zula Struthers.
Treasurer, Frank Burnett.
Highway Commissioner, Grant Ferguson.

Member Board of Review, Platt Webster.
Justice of the Peace, Wm. Hair.
Overseer of Highways, John Strigley.

Constables, Robt. White and John Murray.

A record poll of 196 votes were cast in Hayes township, with 124 split tickets. Battles for the several officers were closely contested in every instance.

Marion Township.
Supervisor, Geo. Meggison.
Clerk, William Withers.
Treasurer, Charles Withers.
Highway Commissioner, Bert Elliott.

Justice of the Peace, Fred Mason.
Overseer of Highways, Clint Blanchard.

"The public want to rock with laughter. Look at Bud Fisher, Billy DeBeck, George McManus, Rube Goldberg and the other comic strip artists who have landed in Easy Street because of their ability to make readers laugh."

"Why Bring That Up?" is from an original story written by Octavus Roy Cohen for the Two Black Crows. It carries them from obscurity on small time vaudeville to the heights of success and closely parallels their own lives. "Why Bring That Up?" will be shown at the Palace Theatre April 16 and 17.

The picture has an excellent supporting cast, headed by Evelyn Brent and Harry Green. There are a number of new songs and many spectacular chorus girl dance scenes.

CHAPTER IV, Continued.

Carla also received a letter from Claire. It was filled with a womanly tenderness and sympathy for one who had suffered a great loss, and was filled with the intimate knowledge and sentiment which could only have been given and inspired by Paul. Carla let him read it. Her eyes were strangely alight, though she had prepared her self to show it to him.

"You told me once that millions could not buy sentiment," she said. "And millions could not bring what has come in her letter. It is her heart speaking to me."

Carla became so deeply absorbed in work outside of her school that he did not talk with her again for a week. She formed evening classes, in which she taught English to the adults who wanted to come to them, and the few spare hours of her afternoons were spent among the mothers of her school children. With the coming of winter Paul buried himself more passionately in the actual stress of outdoor labor, leaving his office routine largely to others, and the change benefited him. Carla, on the other hand, seemed to have assumed too great a burden. The strain, if it were that, began to show its effect on her, until Lucy-Belle noted it and remonstrated with Paul.

"Every day she is growing less like the Carla we knew before her mother died," she told him. "She is breaking under an effort to keep her mind away from herself. Yesterday I dropped into her cottage for a moment when I knew she was there, and I found her crying. She is growing paler, and it frightens me to see the loveliness fading slowly out of her face. You must do something, Paul, make her drop her night classes, send her away for a vacation if you can. I think I am the only one she confides in at all, and I should not betray her confidence—not even what I have guessed about her. But something is eating at her life which isn't entirely the loss of her mother. She insists that her night work is a pleasure, says she is feeling well and doesn't want to go away. But I know of a dream she has always had of visiting her mother's country. If the company could arrange something like that—"

Paul saw Carla the next day, a cold Sunday with snow on the ground. For the first time in many weeks they had a long walk together, and at the beginning of it she settled any suggestions he might have had in his mind. It was as if she saw written in his face what Lucy-Belle had said to him. She mentioned Mrs. Lawrence's visit and told him what she had said about her work, smiling the other's fears away as assured and without reason, and adding with a very decisive little note in her voice that to give up this work or go away, as Lucy-Belle had suggested, was the last thing she would think of doing.

She had heard again from his wife. It was her third letter, and came from Capri, where she was spending the winter, painting. Claire had sent her a little sketch of the vineyards and the picturesque houses on their rock cliffs. These letters, Carla said, would always remain brightly in her memories, they were so friendly and cheering. She had answered them, and had tried to tell Claire a little about her own work, and of the glory and beauty of the great forests and mighty rivers near them. But she lacked the creative soul which his wife possessed, and could not adequately describe them.

Paul knew that something of Carla's real soul was gone even as she talked to him.

His own dragged heavily through the winter. Spring came, and his days at the pit were almost over. August would see his work finished. He did not know what he would do then, he told Carla. Things were happening in South America. He might go there. Carla's future was settled for another year. The government had offered her a contract to remain with the children on the Mistassini, and she had accepted. She hoped that within a year or two she might be able to find a place in Peribonka, near her mother.

Late in May Paul's wife sailed from Chesham, and, to his surprise, was coming straight to Quebec to join him.

"That is wonderful of her," said Carla, her eyes shining with the light which was always in them when she was thinking or speaking of Claire. "She is coming directly to you?"

The day he left for Quebec he saw her for a few moments to say good-by. "I wish I were a man—and you," she said.

A radiance was in her face when he left her.

That evening, at dinner, Lucy-Belle said to her husband: "Carla's school was closed this afternoon. Beryl told me she disliked the children because she had a headache. We must go over and see her."

"I have been there," replied Beryl. "I was a bit worried when one of the boys told me what had happened, so I went over to see if she needed me, and found her—crying."

"Oh!" exclaimed Lucy-Belle. "Now I think I understand!"

She said nothing more to her husband about Carla's mood.

CHAPTER VI

The crowning point of anticipation in Paul's six years of married life was his journey to meet Claire. From the Mistassini to Toberval, from Toberval to Metechewan, and from there down to Chisham, where he took the "cross-country" train to Quebec, he built steadily to the vision which the increasing interest and comradeship in his wife's letters had helped him to create during the long winter. That she was not following her usual precedent of going to New York, but was coming to him, gave him an emotional thrill which it had not previously been his happiness to experience in his relationship with her. He believed that for Claire to divert herself in this way from home, her own people, and a host of friends after an absence of nearly a year, that she might come to him in a wilderness which she frankly detested, was almost dramatically significant of a change in her attitude toward him. It was the mystery of this change which withheld from his feeling the one thing which might have made it a real passion of expectancy and joy. In none of her letters, which had drawn her nearer to him than she had ever been, had she spoken of love. Even in response to the warmest of his communications to her she had given him no definite satisfaction, except to write him in a way which, without openly avowing herself, drew her closer to him, and gave to his ideals of her a glowing, fleshly reality which excited and possessed him as he went to meet her.

He could not keep Carla out of his mind. She came to him vividly when he stood in the shadow of the ancient chapel of the Ursulines, at Quebec, where he had seen through the chapel's grating the lovely nun whose face and eyes had looked so much like Carla's. In Lower Town he went into the little old church of Notre Dame des Victoires, and he felt as if she were standing at his side. She seemed to be a part of the composure and beauty and age-old enchantment of those quiet and hallowed spots which he loved, as if in some past day her soul had helped to mold and fit their destinies. There, like himself, Carla could dream, and see ghosts and mystic fabrics of forgotten things where others saw only slow dissolution and ruin of brick and mortar and wood. In her eyes were the deep and shimmering lights which linked the memories of the past with the mysteries of the future—in Claire's the vibrant life of a glorious present. Together, he thought, those two women held the world in their breasts, from its beginning to its end.

He was at the dock an hour ahead of the ship. When it arrived he drew himself back of the waiting people, for he knew that Claire would not be in the rush of disembarking passengers, nor would she be along the rail

She Raised Her Lips and Kissed Him, With the Light Touch of Her Mouth, Which Was a Part of Claire.

In the crush that always gathered to wave their greetings to friends and relatives, it surprised him when he found her to be one of the first on the landing walk. As she came down he could see that she was looking for him. She was the same Claire, lithe, slim, exquisitely dressed, a woman to be picked up in a thousand. He could always expect Claire like that, a wife any man would be enormously proud to possess. He waved his hat, and she saw him. A swift, beautiful smile passed over her face, and in his eagerness to reach her he made his way a little roughly through the crowd. His heart was jumping. He was meeting her alone—no one but himself to greet her, while always before there had been many. One dream had come true!

When they met he held out his arms. But that was not Claire's way. She was always right, never forgetful of the fitness of things—and gave him her hands. Her fingers closed warmly about his. She raised her lips and kissed him, with the light touch of her mouth which was a part of Claire.

"Dear old Paul!" she said. "At last I'm home!"

Three days after her arrival Claire was mistress of the townhouse which her husband had purchased for her visit. Thereafter Paul could look from the window of his office to the physical realization of the second of his dreams. Claire was at last one of the wives who lived in the row of cottages on the hill. While this dream, like the friendly but dispassionate greeting of his wife in Quebec, missed something in its fulfillment, it had opened doors through which he was looking to still greater things for himself, and the woman who was making this fight against prejudice and environment for him.

"This time I am going to stay until you become tired of me and send me home," she told him.

The change in her was inexplicable, unless he accepted it as one of sheer sportsmanship. This he did, and was warmed by the thought of what he was bound to give in return for it. Behind her effort he was not at all blind for him to see the truth—her struggle against instincts and impulses as deep as his own as was his own Indian blood in himself. The desire to please him, his sunny cheer and friendliness, was an inspiration to him and strengthened his resolution to twist and bend his life, so that it would fit in with hers. He did not tell her this. The thought of explaining to her that he was about to make a mighty endeavor to cross the gulf which lay between them was embarrassing to him. Claire had said nothing about her own effort. Her actions had shown him the way. This lack of intimacy between them at times made him feel sorely closer to her than some of the many friends she had. It was a thing which he could not tear down even in moments when some injustice or situation seemed to draw them very close together.

He knew that Claire felt it as well as himself. Facing it, smiling at each other, waiting for some force greater than themselves to break the way for them, they said nothing about it. Each was happy, and struggling, that this thing between them might be triumphed over. But it persisted in spite of them.

Each day he found something new and unexpected in Claire to increase his admiration for her. She became acquainted with the pit. She put on rubber boots and explored its muddy depths with him. She made no discrimination among his friends, and nodded and smiled as pleasantly at a foreman or a laborer as she did at the others on the hill. More puzzling to him than these things was her intimacy with Carla Martin. After her first few days on the Mistassini they were together much of the time when Carla was not at her work. Even in this Claire joined her now and then, and talked to the children in Carla's classes about the boys and girls in other lands, and came to know their mothers, until she began to fill a little of Carla's place among them.

Carla came to his office again, but always with Claire. She was unlike the Carla who had brought him flowers, so different from her that he was left with a dull painful sense of loss when he was alone and thinking about her, as if someone very dear to him had died, leaving only memories behind. The paradoxical reason for this emotion in him was that Carla appeared to be strangely and forgetfully happy. She was lively and gay, and joined freely in the small social affairs of the camp from which she had always held herself more or less apart. She talked only a little of Peribonka, and the forests, and of the places which he knew she loved, but seemed to hold her heart when listening to Claire's colorful descriptions of interesting places his wife had visited. The two had a real affection for each other. No matter how uncertainty might cloud his judgment in other ways, there could be no doubt about this sentiment of mutual regard which had grown up quickly between them.

One evening Claire said to him: "It is strange how deeply I care for Carla. There is something about her which draws me out of myself, to her. Yet I am finding it more and more impossible to paint her as I want her, she is so completely changed. Where is the real Carla, Paul? What has happened to her? Do you know?"

Her head was bowed over a bit of lace work in her lap, and she did not look at Paul.

"I have noticed the change in her," he said. "It has happened since you came. I think you have helped to bring her out of the terrible grief which oppressed her after her mother's death."

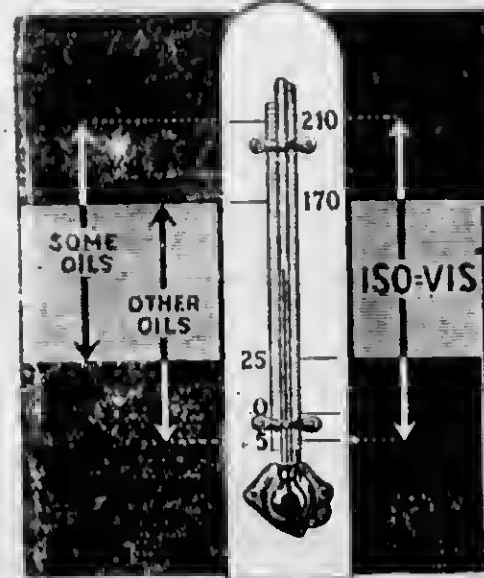

Claire smiled gently at her husband. For a few moments a contemplative light lay in her eyes, as if she were looking—not at him—but at a child.

"You think she is happier—since I came?"

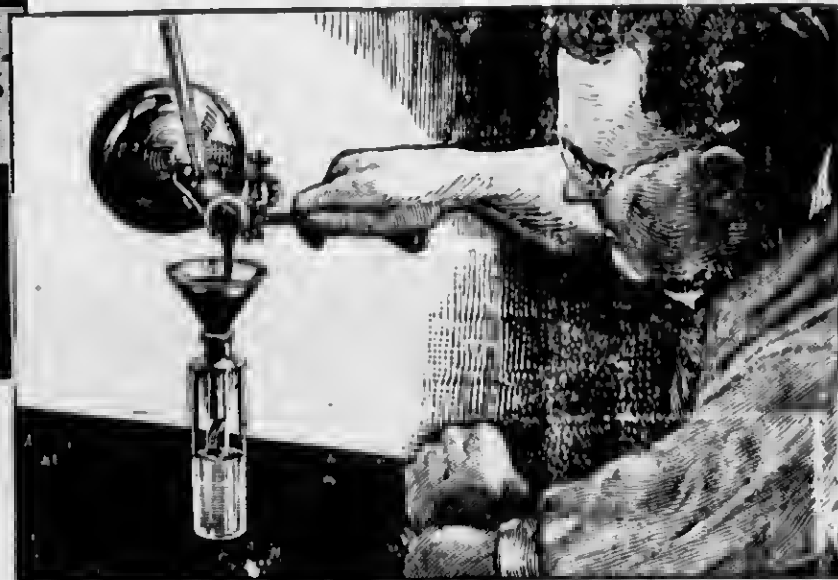

"There is no doubt of it," he declared.

THE GRAPHIC STORY of what this new type oil does for your car

SOME OILS lubricate effectively at high engine temperatures but do not work well when the motor is cold. Others reverse this condition. New ISO-VIS gives good results at either extreme.

NEW ISO-VIS does not "thin out" or "break down" in your motor. You will find that its body is as heavy when you drain it off as it was the day you put it in your crankcase. It will give you a new idea of the type of lubrication it is now possible to put into your automobile.

New ISO-VIS also gives what engineers call a "greater viscosity range". It not only stands up better at high engine temperatures but it gives more effective lubrication when the engine is cold.

In addition, there is a radical reduction in carbon deposits. Both laboratory and road tests with New ISO-VIS show a carbon residue far below most premium-priced oils.

New ISO-VIS marks an important step forward in motor lubrication. It is now available at all Standard Oil dealers and service stations. This improved motor oil is worth trying. Drain, flush and fill up your crankcase today with New ISO-VIS.

"But I cannot paint her. And it is because—there is so much unhappiness behind what she is trying to make us see in her face."

In his puzzled silence, she added: "I am wondering why she tries so hard to make me believe she is happy, Paul."

Before he could answer she began to tell him about her talk to the children in Carla's school that day.

CHAPTER VII

Claire came to the Mistassini on the first of June. It was the fifteenth when they went to what Paul called the big gorge, ten miles back in the rocky forests. This is the date which will remain a long time on the calendars of the shrewd-hearted folk north of Lac St. Jean, because of the miracle which happened on it. It is a date almost to be canonized. Priests speak of it, and people point it out, as a day of infallible proof of the omnipotence of God.

Lucy-Belle is not remembered, though it was she who planned the expedition to the gorge. In it, besides herself, were her husband and Paul, Claire and Carla. For two days preceding the journey Paul had been on the rough and narrow trail clearing it of obstructions and overhanging limbs and brush so that they might travel over it on horseback.

Paul had seen Claire turn white and tremble at the foaming unrest of the Mistassini, beating eternally against its rocks. Just as he had felt her shiver, one evening, in a deep and gloomy place in the forest, where the wind was whistling through the pine tops over their heads. He had taken her hand, and her fingers had clung tightly to his, as if those things which he loved sent a horror through her. On the morning of this eventful fifteenth of June, with sunshine and birds about them, he and Derwent rode a little behind their wives and Carla, and never had Claire looked so lovely to him. Her beautiful body seemed vibrant with the thrill of the day, her voice was sweet to hear, her eyes were filled with laughter, until he could almost make himself believe she loved the things which she was facing, and which had so completely conquered her until now. Her unbent golden head and Carla's dark one rode side by side, one a shining radiance in the sun, the other richly lustrous, with gleamy pools and seas of darker shadow in it. For half a mile they followed a trail so close to the river that its roaring tumult drowned their voices and cawebby drifts of spray came in wet their faces. Through this Paul rode close to the side of his wife, and saw her smile and fight to hide its effect upon her. Then they struck Indian file into the narrow, rocky, deeply rooted trail to the gorge, with Paul at the head

PENNSYLVANIA TESTS

Pennsylvania staged the greatest state brake test in the United States last fall. It meant business. It examined 1,522,588 cars for brakes, horns, lights, steering gear, windshield wipers and mirrors. That was nearly ninety per cent of all the cars in Pennsylvania.

It found, in round numbers, 80,000 brakes which required relining, of actual washing in 35 weeks

THIS is the record-breaking pace set by a Speed Queen Aluminum Washer owned by a Hand Laundry in Butler, Pa. (name on request). It ran from 8 to 10 hours a day, 6 days a week, for 35 weeks—a total of 2040 hours—and is still going just like new. This is equivalent to 40 years of service in the average home.

Only a washer with such fine materials and workmanship as used in the Speed Queen could withstand the constant strain of one heavy batch of clothes after another for so long a time.

This unusual record offers concrete evidence as to why the Speed Queen carries one of the strongest guarantees in the washing machine industry.

Although the Speed Queen sells for $30 less—it offers you every advantage of washing efficiency, colorful beauty and guaranteed durability found in the highest priced machines. By all means—before you buy a new washer—see the Speed Queen.

350,000 to be adjusted; 50,000 headlights completely missing or requiring replacement and a million cars with headlights requiring adjustment; 9,000 horns to be replaced and 50,000 to be adjusted; 33,000 steering gears to be replaced and 96,000 adjusted; 44,000 cars without rear view mirrors and 38,000 without windshield wipers.

These defects were remedied. Fatalities in Pennsylvania from automobile accidents dropped from 185 in January, 1929 to 124 in January, 1930. For December, 1928, the deaths had been 230; for the same month of 1929, just after the brake test campaign, they fell to 165.

That would seem to be evidence enough as to whether these statewide equipment tests pay. Michigan made a weak play at holding one last year. This year the state should place the campaign in state police hands and go about it with some of the effectiveness indicated in Pennsylvania. Grand Rapids Press.

THE 'PEDESTRIAN'S' RESPONSIBILITY

Several accidental deaths have occurred in Michigan lately, caused by persons being struck by automobiles while walking along the highways after nightfall.

That the majority of these accidents happened at the edge of cities where there is electric light service, would indicate that drivers, with vision impaired by the overhead illumination, are unable to see the usual distance ahead and are so near when their victims flash into their range of vision that an accident is unavoidable.

It is the intention of the state that pedestrians shall use the highways at any and all times, regardless of weather, lightning, or other conditions. But until better safety devices in the form of rural sidewalks or bypaths are adopted, it behooves the pedestrian at night to exercise every bit of precaution especially where there is a single thing to prevent the driver of a car from having a clear vision of the road.

No automobile driver wants to run anybody down, but practically every owner of a car can recall having a pedestrian, or an unlighted vehicle, suddenly loom up before him. If he avoided an accident he was lucky. Those who walk or drive a horse-drawn vehicle on the highway at night can see the light of an approaching car at a much greater distance than the motorist can detect their presence. As a measure of safety they should leave the direct path of travel until the car has passed.

BEWARE THE FAKIRS

A few days ago the Michigan Securities Commission warned holders of securities against turning them over to strangers for disposal. "A bang," said the commission, "is working in Michigan who secure possession of stocks and bonds through fraudulent means and are never seen again."

We should also beware of the solicitors who are using the U. S. mails to ensnare victims. Right now a certain western individual is flooding the mails of this state with offers to an investment guaranteed to pay three and four times the usual dividend returns. Out of the goodness of his heart he is giving you an opportunity to get in on the ground floor with the original investor.

If you receive an offer consult your banker before deciding to part with any of your money. Let him pass on the reliability and worthiness of the scheme. If he gives his approval after investigation your chances of loss will be reduced to a minimum.

But rest assured he will give no such advice. Any reliable corporation, netting big interest returns, won't be using the mails to get financial aid—they'd have trouble shoeing insistent investors off the front doorstep.

THE OLD AND THE NEW

There is quite a contest on. On one side is the surplus wheat—a low price for this great commodity—a glutted market.

On the other side is the great government of the United States with open purse strings.

Ranged with one side are the old, ancient and generally accepted ideas and principles of crop surplus, supply and demand and the half dozen other theories that we have heretofore accepted without much challenge.

With the other element are the new theories of a control of crops and prices by the producers acting through the government.

There is really nothing new about the struggle. It has been under way off many a generation, in fact, ever since the first general markets for agricultural products existed. There has always been overproduction—always lower prices on account of it. With it has come a time old demand for control of the crop either before or after it was raised.

The present test is one of the most extensive that has ever been made. There is more determination back of it. If it succeeds it will be an encouragement to other efforts of the future.

LOCAL YOUTH A VICTIM OF AUTO CRASH

William Pant Killed Last Sunday North of Muskegon.

An automobile accident which took the lives of two youths at Muskegon, Sunday, claimed as one of the victims a local boy, William Pant, son of Mrs. Goldie Pant, this city.

The accident occurred on US-31 about seven miles north of Muskegon. According to newspaper reports, Pant and Lyle Hazard, the other victim, were discussing a minor auto accident preceding the fatal crash, and were on the highway back of the headlights of one of their cars. Two other companions were also injured.

Blinded by the lights of the stalled machines, Don Hager, also of Muskegon, who drove the death car, did not see the men until he bowled them over. Pant and Hazard suffered crushed skulls and fractures to both legs. Their death was instantaneous.

Remains of the local lad were brought to Charlevoix for burial on Tuesday and funeral services will be held Thursday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock from the Methodist church, Rev. John E. Lockyer, officiating.

Pant is survived by his mother, Mrs. Goldie Pant; two brothers, George of Muskegon; Clarence of Lapeer, and a sister, Mrs. Lillian Crambell of London, Ohio.

He was well and favorably known in Charlevoix and his family have the sympathy of the entire city.

LARGEST PINE LOGS CUT IN PELLSTON LAST MONDAY

Quite a crowd gathered at Jackson & Tindle saw mill on Monday of last week to witness the cutting of some of the largest pine logs in its history. Although several hundred thousand have been cut during the winter, never before have there been such mammoth logs. The largest log measured over 16 feet in length, sealed 1-343 feet; the next in length sealed 1-214 feet, and the last fourteen feet long sealed 840 feet. Plank were cut four inches thick and 39 feet wide without a flaw.

DINNER PARTY AT P. R. ROSS HOME

Out-of-Town Guests Among Those at Delightful Affair.

The following news item taken from the Antrim County Record tells of a delightful party held recently at the home of Mr. and Mrs. P. R. Ross:

"The home of Mr. and Mrs. P. R. Ross of Charlevoix, was the scene of a very happy gathering Saturday evening, March 29th, when Mrs. Ross entertained for her sister, Bertha Smith, with a seven o'clock dinner party.

"Places were attractively laid for twenty-two, twenty of that number being from Bellaire. Those enjoying the occasion were Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Fate, Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Spafford, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Bechtold, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Ousterhout, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Richards, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Maltby, Mr. and Mrs. Leon Doney, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Lee, Mr. and Mrs. Arlie Smith, Bertha Smith and Raymond Sexton.

"Mr. Ross happened to be celebrating a birthday, which added to the attraction of the affair. After an evening of dancing at "Moonlight Gardens," the Bellaire folks departed for home, visiting Mr. and Mrs. Ross real entertainers."

HARBOR HAS ITS OWN SMELT FISHING

Fishermen Catch Many in Bait Nets in the Harbor.

While hundreds of people have rushed excitedly to the smelt runs of Boyne City and Charlevoix, a few Harbor Springs fishermen have stayed at home and enjoyed smelt dinners regardless. Few of the real lake fishermen will eat smelt, but prefer the old reliable Mackinaw trout.

Each morning as the trout fishermen raise their herring nets they frequently find plenty of smelt in them. In many cases there are great quantities of smelt spawn entangled in the nets. These smelt are usually extremely large, averaging around twelve inches in length and in one case exceeding twenty inches.

It is expected that within a few days there will be runs in the larger stream emptying into Lake Michigan and into the bay in this vicinity. At present no one looks for as large runs as were had at Boyne City or Benah; and a few of the old timers insist that there will be no run. Time only will tell.—Harbor Springs Graphic.

1930 TROUT LICENSE IN HANDS OF AGENT

Cost to All Residents Over 18 is One Dollar—Non-Residents $3.

All county clerks and other license agents for the Department of Conservation will have a supply of 1930 resident trout and non-resident fishing licenses by the first of this week.

The licenses are now being mailed out from the department's offices at Lansing together with copies of the 1930 digest of fishing laws.

This year the resident trout license button is white on a flaming red background. The resident trout license, which must be obtained by all resident persons over 15 years of age, costs $1.00. The non-resident license which permits the taking of all species of fish during the respective open seasons, costs $3.00. Before this year two classes of non-resident licenses were issued; one for the taking of all species except trout and bass and costing $2.00, and one for the taking of all species costing $5.00.

AGRICULTURAL NOTES

String Beans and Beets to Be Discussed April 18.

All farmers raising produce for the canning factory are strongly urged to attend an important meeting to be held in the K. of P. hall, East Jordan, at 7:30 o'clock standard time on Friday, April 18th.

Of particular gratification to all is the announcement that we have been successful in scheduling Prof. George E. Starr, horticultural specialist from the Michigan State College, to discuss the efficient and profitable growing of canning factory crops.

Many farmers have had experience in the raising of string beans, but in the case of beets, this is the first year that they are being received by the East Jordan cannery, and as a result farmers, generally speaking, have no past contacts with this crop.

Prof. Starr has had considerable experience with canning factory products, and at one time operated a large tract of land for the production of seeds. He is considered one of the outstanding vegetable men of the U. S. and enjoys an enviable reputation among workers in this field.

If you have any particular question relative to any phase of string bean or beet production, by all means bring it with you and careful consideration will be extended by Prof. Starr. Remember the time, date and place and be present.

Sheep Notes.

If you have not castrated and docked your lambs, don't put it off. Now is the time, and tomorrow may make the job more difficult to perform as well as being more dangerous for the lamb.

Remember the best age for this operation is from seven to fourteen days of age. At this age there is the minimum danger of infection.

A short time ago a letter was sent to every sheep owner in the county asking them to assist in making out a new and complete list of sheep owners, but so far only four replies have been received, which is not sufficient.

If Charlevoix county is going to make a creditable showing in the Lamb Improvement contest, it is necessary to secure the names of all owners of sheep and the number that castrate and dock their lambs. Will you help?

AGRICULTURAL NOTES.

It is well to stentian hoifers with the milking herd for two or three months before calving. If they are brushed gently and handled every day they will become accustomed to the attendant and will be easier to milk.

Calves to be fattened for beef should not be allowed to lose the fat they have gotten from milk feeding. Quality and finish are very desirable in fat yearlings. Half-finished yearlings do not usually bring enough on the market to make their production profitable.

It is more economy to crowd chicks in the brooder. Better chicks can be produced by placing 350 chicks under a 500-chick brooder than by filling it to capacity. Ease and comfort are essential to the development of the chicks into strong, healthy pullets which should begin their laying period at the right time and continue through the fall and winter months when egg prices are high.

Before using a new masonry cistern the inside walls should be allowed to air and cure for a month or more. Sprinkle them occasionally with water to convert the free lime in the cement to carbonate of lime which is only slightly soluble in pure water. A new cistern should be pumped out two or three times before using the water for drinking.

Don't plant the entire supply of string beans, bush lima beans, sweet corn, lettuce, or radish at one time in the farm garden. Make successive plantings from 10 days to three weeks apart, so that fresh vegetables may be had throughout the season. For successive harvests of peas, plant early, medium late, and late varieties and plant all varieties early. Late plantings of peas give low yields.

The longer the broody hen is allowed to sit on the nest, the longer it takes to get her back into laying condition. As soon as a hen is seen to remain on the nest at night, she should be removed and put in a broody coop; that is, a coop with a slat bottom so that the air circulates underneath and tends to keep her from sitting. While confined in the coop she should be fed and watered regularly.

Guinea pigs are increasing in favor as pets, and also for exhibition and food purposes. These animals need about the same diet as rabbits, says the Biological survey. Three things should be kept constantly in each hatch or run—a pan of water supplied fresh at least once a day, a piece of rock salt, and a pan of dry grain such as oats, bran or chopped grain. Guinea pigs need a constant supply of hay and a daily feeding of green stuff. With plenty of green feed, guinea pigs drink little water, but it is well to supply it.

Many adult animals and fowls harbor various parasites and may not show serious effects. In early spring the young stock is making its start, and in many cases the young animals are injured severely. It is well to follow the systems of sanitation recommended by the Federal and State agricultural authorities. The general precaution is to keep all young livestock—lambs, calves, colts, etc.—in clean, safe, well-drained pastures, away from older animals other than their mothers, and away from areas that have been occupied by older animals the previous year.

Lambs should be made ready for market either before or after the rush of lambs from the western range states. In the latitude of the corn belt and the south, where the summers are too hot for late lambs, the lambing period should be early enough to have the lambs finished and ready for market by May or June, or at least not later than early July. In New England and similar territory of that latitude, where grain and other winter feed is relatively scarce and expensive, and where summers are comparatively cool and pastures good, it is more profitable to have the lambs ready for market in early November just after the rush of western lambs.

Keep Them Busy.

Keep young chicks out of mischief and they won't be likely to develop bad habits, advises the U. S. Department of Agriculture. Regular feeding, watering and attention will keep the chicks busy and prevent them from getting too hungry. If you supply green feeds between the regular grain feedings it gives them something to do. Keep the litter evenly distributed, as the chicks usually scratch it into bunches. Let the chicks get outdoors; the bad habit of toe picking often develops when they are too closely confined.

Pasture for Hogs.

The value of good pasture for hogs cannot be overestimated. Rye, oats, wheat, rape, soybeans, and cowpeas

KONJOLA PUTS SPEEDY END TO NEURITIS PAINS

Other Ailments Also Conquered by This New and Different Medicine.

MRS. J. DANGEL

Be of good cheer, you who suffer from the cruel pangs of neuritis and fear there is nothing to help you. Read the words of Mrs. J. Dangel, 315 South Tenth Street, Saginaw, who says:

"I certainly owe Konjola a debt of gratitude, for it put an end to the tortures of neuritis which for months had been almost unbearable. Konjola also cleansed and stimulated my entire system, so that today I feel better than I have in years. My troubles started three years ago, when my stomach and kidneys failed me. My back was lame and I had to be up many times at night. Then the neuritis set in, and suffering I endured was terrible. Then Konjola came to my relief. After taking five bottles I was feeling fine. The neuritis was gone, and my stomach and kidneys were working normally. What a medicine Konjola is!"

No wonder Konjola wins such victories, for it is really 32 medicines in one, and of these 32 ingredients 22 are the juices of roots and herbs long known for their medicinal value. Konjola is sold in Charlevoix at E. J. Fessenden's drug store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

All are good temporary pastures. Sweet clover, and, in the south, alfalfa are the best permanent pasture grasses for hogs, and in localities where this crop is successful no other permanent pasture is necessary.

Fish Oil for Spraying.

As a "sticker" in lead-arsenate sprays used to control the gipsy moth on shade of fruit trees, fish oil has been found very efficient. By using fish oil as an adhesive in lead-arsenate mixtures, the spraying sensation can be lengthened somewhat, as spraying can be started when the foliage is small and good results obtained, says the U. S. Department of Agriculture. Fish oil is added to spray mixtures at the rate of four ounces, by weight, to each pound of lead-arsenate powder or insoluble matter used. Mixtures containing fish oil stick not only to the trees, but to the undergrowth and vegetation, and live-stock should be kept away from trees that have been sprayed.

ART OF BEING HAPPY

To be bright and cheerful often requires an effort; there is a certain art in keeping ourselves happy; in this respect, as in others, we require to watch over and manage ourselves almost as if we were somebody else.—Sir John Lubbock.

Charlevoix belongs to its citizens, and will be what they try to make it.

the topic "Protecting Health in be carried on as a class exercise in is based on the fact that approxi-

PED BY HEAVY ICETug Alice M. Imprisoned Off Harbor
Here Since Sunday.Navigation out of Charlevoix harbor opened last Saturday, but was short lived. Driven by heavy northwest winds, the ice fields closed in again Sunday, trapping one fish tug and giving another a narrow escape.The gasoline tug Alice M., with its owner, Capt. Jos. Smith, Ernest
Smith and Charles Archer aboard, has been imprisoned in the ice about a half mile northwest of the pier heads since Sunday morning. The boat set Saturday and was attempting to beat the incoming ice fields to get into open water when trapped. The craft and its crew have been in no danger. They had sufficient supplies and have been able to reach shore at any time. Coast guards have gone out to them and offered any assistance possible.The tug Charles Frank plowed its way through the ice to reach the harbor Sunday afternoon from a distance of several miles out. They made an attempt to release the Alice
M., but were blocked by heavy ice.
Similar attempts by the coast guard boat were also fruitless. At the time of latest reports, Capt. John McCann was off the Beavers with the Venus, awaiting an opportunity to reach St. James harbor. John Cross is also out with his boat.If off-shore winds prevailing Wednesday continue, the Alice M. will probably be released within a short time, and the bay will once more be cleared of ice.SCHOOL BAND GOES ises to excel the previous record this cars to take the band members to the tournament. They are scheduled to leave the school house promptly at 7:30 a. m., and all those who will

CHARLEVOIX 2ND IN BAND TOURNEY

BENZONIA WON FIRST PLACE FOR CLASS C BANDS.

Charlevoix Won Two Second Places in Other Branches of Competition on Program.

Winning three second places in as many branches of competition at the district band tournament held last Friday and Saturday at Traverse City, Charlevoix's school organization failed to defend the title of class C champions won a year ago.

The Benzonian band, directed by Herbert Bearss, former local leader, won the class C competition. Charlevoix placed second for class C bands and was in the same position in competition for class C woodwind ensembles and class C brass ensembles.

In their article covering the tournament, the Traverse City Record-Eagle says:

"The competition in class D and class C Friday developed much interest and demonstrated the quality of music instruction being carried on in the smaller schools of the region. It was no surprise that the Benzonian band, directed by Herbert Bearss, won the band championship in class C and it will be no surprise if Benzonian goes a long way in the state contest. Charlevoix, the winner last year, placed second.

The results of the contest each day were withheld until the evening concert to insure a larger attendance and to hold the interest of the competing schools for this program. Last year, when the results were announced during the afternoon, several of the visiting groups were reluctant to stay for the evening concert.

Following is the order in which the class C and D schools placed:

Class D Bands.

1. Onkema.
2. McBrin.

Class C Bands.

1. Benzonian.
2. Charlevoix.
3. Lake City.
4. Elk Rapids.

Class C Orchestras.

1. Kingsley.
2. Frankfort.

Class C Woodwind Ensembles.

1. Onkema.
2. Charlevoix.

Class C Brass Ensembles.

1. Kingsley.
2. Charlevoix.

Class C Girls Glee Clubs.

1. Benzonian.
2. Frankfort.
3. Elk Rapids.
4. Gaylord.

Charlevoix has every reason to be proud of the performance given by its school musicians. Lee Shapton, leading bass horn player, was unable to accompany the band because of illness, and his absence was a severe handicap. That Charlevoix placed second in a field of four is no small honor.

In class B competition, East Jordan's school band, directed by John TerWee, who also leads the local organization, won first place. Petoskey was second and Cadillac third. East Jordan is credited with having a wonderful band, carefully trained and capable.

IT WON'T BE LONG NOW—JUST 2 WEEKS

TROUT SEASON OPENS TWO WEEKS FROM THURSDAY.

List of Open Streams in Charlevoix County Printed Below—Several in Antrim County.

It won't be long now—no Sir! Two weeks from tomorrow, Thursday, is that day hundreds have been waiting eight long months for. To the more susceptible, the last two months have been as long as all the rest put together. It's sure a tough job to wait.

Two weeks from Thursday is May 1st—the first day of the trout fishing season. Judging from the present condition of Charlevoix county streams, it's going to be a glorious opening, too. Scarcity of rains have put the streams down to normal, an unusual thing, indeed, for this time of the year. With continued warm weather, the fly fishermen are going to have just as much sport as the "plunker," and with the general increase in plantings last year, there should be plenty of trout.

In connection with this glorious event, it might be well to know some of the rules in effect. All anglers of 18, either sex, must procure a license costing $1.00. For non-residents, it is $3.00. The same limit on catch is in force—15 in one day and 25 in possession—never 7 inches in length.

Charlevoix county sportsmen are not going to be so confined this year. Many additional streams have been opened. All streams emptying into Lake Charlevoix have been taken from the restricted list with the exception of Stover creek, near the City and possibly one or two small streams at East Jordan. Following is the list of additional open streams as published in the 1930 digest of fish laws:

Advance creek, N. branch of Boyne river down from W. line Hudson township, S. branch Boyne river down from highway US-131 in Warner township, Collins creek down from Boyne Valley-Wilson township road, Deer Creek, Horton creek, Inwood creek, Porter creek, Jordan river, McGeagh creek, Monroe creek, South Arm creek, Spring Brook creek down from road running from Cook's crossing, N. branch Spring Brook creek down from road running south from Cook's Crossing, S. branch Spring Brook creek down from road running S. from Cook's Crossing, Warner creek, W. branch Sturgeon river down from Hoffman lake.

Streams open in Antrim county that Charlevoix anglers will be interested in are:

Cedar river from Niles road on E. line section 32, town 30 N., range 6 W., N. branch Cedar river (Wolcott creek) down from E. and W. line road in section 13, town 30 N., range 7 W., Green river in Chestonia township, Jordan river down from W. line section 28, town 31 N., range 5 west, Ogletree creek, all other streams emptying into Lake Michigan.

SPECIAL SERVICES AT THE EPISCOPAL CHURCH

Rev. Edward S. Doan of Petoskey, will hold a Good Friday service in Christ Episcopal church Friday evening. An Easter service will also be held Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock. Special music will be rendered at both services and the public is cordially invited to attend.

CHARLEVOIX BIDS TOURISTS WELCOME

LAUNCH ADVERTISING CAM-PAIGN IN MIDDLE WEST.

Full Program of Entertainment Features Assured for the 1930
Summer Season.

Charlevoix's first bid for tourists and resorters for the 1930 summer season made its appearance in various large daily newspapers throughout the middle west last Sunday, when the initial series in an advertising campaign sponsored by the Charlevoix Association of Commerce, city council and hotel interests was launched.

Newspapers covered were those in Detroit, St. Louis, Mo., Cincinnati, Toledo and Cleveland, Ohio, Indianapolis, Ind. The advertisement, a typical resort display, depicting various sports to be found at Charlevoix, a charming lake with a shore golf club, white birches, etc. The first run is to be followed probably in May and June, by another series, depending, of course, on financial backing given the campaign. The first insertion is financed by the city council from their advertising fund. In addition, space has been taken in the Michigan Magazine and the Magazine of Michigan, both having given Charlevoix much in the line of publicity and which cover a desirable Michigan field.

Another important item in the advertising campaign is a re-run of Charlevoix's attractive 28-page illustrated booklet, which has been delivered and are now ready for distribution.

Charlevoix will not lack for entertainment for its summer visitors. Events already assured are the Michigan State amateur golf tournament, July 23-26, the Great Lakes Invitation Open Golf championship, July 15-17, the annual regatta and Michigan Riviera tennis tournament in August, dates not yet announced. Other features are being planned, which, together with events sponsored by the Chicago Club and Belvedere Club, give promise of a busy summer.

When speaking of the summer season, it might be well to add that preparations are already under way by the various hotels, clubs, private caterers to resort and tourist trade. Improvements running into high figures will be made and the annual program of preparations have been started.

Golf courses are being put into shape, cottages and grounds are going through the clean-up process, the lake front is a busy place putting water craft of our summer visitors in readiness for summer use.

MISS SIGNE THORSON DIED LAST THURSDAY

Was Well Known in Charlevoix—Funeral Sunday Afternoon.

The many Charlevoix friends of Miss Signe Thorsen were grieved to learn of her untimely death, which occurred Thursday, April 10th, at Detroit, where she was teaching school.

Miss Thorsen was born April 7, 1899, at East Jordan, and was 31 years of age at her death. She graduated from East Jordan schools and from Charlevoix county normal. She taught the Marion district school and the fourth grade at Charlevoix before going to Ypsilanti State Normal, of which college she was a graduate. Following her graduation, Miss Thorsen taught one year in Lansing and since that time has been located in Detroit.

Surviving are her mother, residing in East Jordan, two brothers, Emil of Escanaba, and Thomas of Traverse City, and one sister, Mrs. Charles Heise of Charlevoix. She resided with her sister here on several occasions, the last being last summer, and had a large following of friends in Charlevoix.

Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon from the home in East Jordan.

POMONA GRANGE MET SATURDAY

INITIAL GATHERING OF YEAR WITH WILSON GRANGE.

Interesting and Instructive Program Given at Both Afternoon and Evening Sessions.

Charlevoix County Pomona Grange held their initial meeting of the year last Saturday at Wilson Grange hall. Eight Granges were represented with a total attendance of 110.

Master Archie Murphy presided over the business session and appointed committees for the year's work.

A varied and interesting program, covering both afternoon and evening sessions, was opened with community singing. Members answered roll call with remarks on the topic, "What I Like About My Farm Job," and an open discussion on the topics, "How Did the Turner Bill Help the School System?" and "Some Improvements I Plan to Make on the Farm This Year," followed. Other numbers were: reading, "When Granny Brought the Water Up," by George Hardy; discussion, "Do Farmers Spend Too Much Money on Automobiles and Not Enough for Fertilizers," reading, "At Plowing Time," by Laura Hardy; discussion, "How Can I Keep Ahead of My Work?"; discussion, "Should the State Give Its Share to Cover the Burden of School Taxes."

The evening program opened in charge of the lecturer, with the following numbers: community singing; roll call, "What One Word Describes the Season, Its Work and Its Pleasures," recitation, "I'm Just Fifteen," Christobel Sutton; monologue, "April," by Con Nowland; piano-forte solo, Evelyn Hardy; recitation, "I'm Not as Young as I Used to Be," Charlie Shepard; accordion selections, William Tait, accompanied by Tom Shepard; talk on "The Export Debenture Plan for Farm Relief," by Archie Murphy; an interpretation of "Liza Green and What Happened at the Telephone," by Al Warda; singing by five Deer Lake members.

County Agent Mellencamp gave a very interesting and instructive talk on farm topics. Five candidates were initiated in the fifth degree.

The next meeting will be May 10th at 2:00 o'clock with Deer Lake.

Charlevoix county has some live and wide-awake Grange organizations. A glance at their Pomona programs will reveal the list of time subjects brought up for discussion. The members get together, talk over their problems and then use each other's experience to overcome their own difficulties. These Grange meetings should be a fine place for some of our own citizenry to get out and get better acquainted with their rural brethren. Their spirit of neighborliness and co-operation might prove a good lesson.

Card of Thanks.

We wish to express our appreciation for the heartfelt sympathy and many kindnesses shown us during our recent bereavement. Mrs. Christine Thorsen, Emil Thorsen, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence LaLonde, and Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Heise.—Adv. 16t1pd.

CHARLEVOIX BOY SCOUTS AT RALLY

DISTRICT GATHERING AT BOYNE CITY LAST SATURDAY.

Local Troops Show Their Skill by Winning Big Share of Contests in Scout Work.

Charlevoix's Boy Scout patrols and individual members gained several honors at the District Boy Scout rally, held Saturday, April 12, at Boyne City.

The rally was attended by Scouts from Gaylord, Petoskey, Boyne City and Charlevoix. The day's program opened with a grand march of Scout troops, led by the Boyne City school band and Scout color bearers.

The afternoon program consisted of contests between the several towns represented in Scout activities. Charlevoix Scouts won a third and fourth place in the mile pacing contest. Marvin Dixon of Charlevoix, won the fire building contest; Charlevoix placed second in the First Aid contest; John Rose won the semaphore signaling competition, and Robert Ashdon took first place in the knot-tying contest.

Following are the several contests and results:

One Mile Pacing Contest.

2nd place, Gaylord troop.

Fire Building Contest.

Knot-tying contest was won by Robert Ashdon of Charlevoix; second place, Max Fitzpatrick, Boyne City.

The day's program was closed by a supper given at the school by the domestic science department. The supper-meeting was in charge of K. Waggoner, Boyne City Scout Master, who planned and made possible arrangements for the day's activities. Arnold Kock led the singing and Scouts were welcomed by Adolph Smith, Walter Gospihl, district Y. M. C. A. secretary, was the toastmaster. Entertainment was in charge of Wilson McDonald of the Petoskey Chamber of Commerce, and Ray Barnes of that city, gave an address on "The Product of Scouting."

The program was closed by all standing and rejoining the Scout oath.

Charlevoix's Boy Scouts, twenty-eight in number, are under the guidance, so to speak, of the local Pythian lodge. The Knights of Pythias formed an advisory committee among their membership and turned their hall over to the Scouts for their meeting each Monday night. J. Nelson Nordrum is the Charlevoix Scout Master and Roy Ranger is assistant Scout Master.

Charlevoix's troop is a live, wide-awake organization and those directing their activities have every reason to be proud of them.

"KONJOLA KEPT ME AT WORK ALL DAY EVERY DAY"

Rheumatism Caused This Man Terrible Agony—New Medicine Brings Speedy Relief.

MR. JAMES EATON.

Don't get the idea that there is no relief from rheumatism, no matter what has failed. Put the test to Konjola, the new and different medicine of 32 ingredients, 22 of them the juices of roots and herbs. Read, for instance, the words of Mr. James Eaton, 141 Walker street, Grand Rapids.

"Konjola put an end to rheumatism that for years caused me terrible agony, and that defied every other medicine I tried. Many a day I was unable to leave my bed, my joints were so stiff and sore. But three bottles of Konjola put all my pain to rest; corrected my kidneys and let me go to work all day every day. I endorse Konjola with all my heart and soul."

Thus Konjola works, quickly and thoroughly, going to the very source of the ill of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, and of rheumatism, neuritis and nervousness.

Clare gave a gasp of amazement.

"I did not dream the water sped as swiftly as that," she exclaimed.

"But see! It is as I said! The plate is going—it has disappeared into the tunnel—and once was it pulled or upset. Back where the water is breaking and roaring it would have been destroyed!"

"Wait!" said Derwent. He called the short log which they had used for a seat to the edge of the cliff, and with Paul's help lifted it on end and flung it over. "There goes a man," he laughed. "Now see what happens!"

"They stood close to the shore edge of the table rock and saw the log as it struck the water. There was an eddy splash, and for a few yards the wood drifted away as smoothly as the plate had gone. A smile of triumph curved Clare's lips, then swiftly a frightened look gathered in its place. A hand had reached up, a terrible, unseen hand that had gripped the log like a living thing and dragged it down until no chip or shadow of it rode the light surface under them."

"Hold your eyes near the rock," commanded Derwent.

Breathlessly they watched. Half a minute later, as it seemed up by the monster who had swallowed it, the log reappeared near the huge fang which split the stream struck against it, and eluded half its length out of the water, then sank back and disappeared again, this time to be seen no more.

"Gone," said Derwent. "And if you stood at the other end of the gorge five or six miles from here, you would never see that log come through. It is ground to pieces, goes out of existence in whatever there is between the walls of the chasm, which no man has ever explored, and none ever will. Are you satisfied?"

Clare was staring, wide-eyed.

"I believe it—now," she said.

Lucy-Belle had turned a little white.

"Still—I would jump in," she maintained, looking at Derwent.

Again Paul looked at Clara. The calm and playful beauty of her face seemed accentuated by what they had seen.

"And the wonder of it is there are so many who believe that Nature and God are not One," she said, only for him. "Is it possible that in the blindness of our egoism we shall always fail to understand the significance of such things as that? It is a written word, in the hand of God, just as the Peribonka, with its gentleness and sunshine, is another and different message for us. That is what I believe."

Paul nodded. "So do I," he said, and felt the desire of all the world to take Clara's hand against his breast and hold it there.

Clare fastened itself upon him, and a little later, inspired by the sweetness of her manner toward him, he whispered to his wife: "Clare, you are wonderful! God knows I hope some day to make you happy!"

"You will," she answered, and the gentle mystery in her voice and eyes stirred him with a deep emotion.

Until the play grew tiresome they brought sticks and chunks of wood from the edge of the hidden limits of the stream. The result was always the same, except that chips and grass and very light pieces of wood raced swiftly and safely away, like the pasteboard plate, as if they were too insignificant to attract attention from below. But with the heavier objects there was a variation so small in what happened that the watchers on the rock were amazed and fascinated, and started a little game of guessing how many seconds would pass before Lucy-Belle's huge snake spat up an object and then swallowed it again.

To end their sport Paul and Derwent staggered from the edge of the timber with a forty-foot log, which had lain so long in the drying sun and wind that they could bear its weight on their shoulders, and before this was tossed over the five made their guesses, the lower to entertain the other four at dinner the next day.

"I've a notion to ride this log through the gorge!" exclaimed Lucy-Belle. "I want to know what is under and between those walls which you say no one has ever explored, Colla. What do you suppose can be there?"

"An inferno of devils, I imagine," replied her husband.

"Possibly not. Fairies might live there," suggested Clara.

"A black and sunless place where lovely water maidens without eyes frolic in the darkness," added Paul.

"Or a kingdom of Micomicon, where dreams are made and sent out into the world," said Clara.

Derwent was preparing his end of the log for a final heave. "I insist it is a place of devils and death. Still, like Lucy-Belle, I'd like to see what's there. After all, it's fifty million years of—mystery! Are you ready, Paul?"

"Ready!"

The log pitched down, and as it went the end of it swung like a living thing and struck Paul. Even before the blow—in the lightning dash of time when eyes behind could see it sweeping upon him—a sudden scream filled his consciousness, and as the timber caught him he saw it was Clara whose cry had tried to warn him. Then he was over. With photographic clearness his eyes beheld his fate. The water seemed to reach up and catch him on his oily breast, and for a brief instant after this there was a sensation not unpleasant about its hold. For some unaccountable reason he felt no sense of fear or terror even when forces that were irresistible but gentle pulled him down. He knew it was death, the death they had played with and lightly talked about, yet its presence closing about him did not rob his mind of its vision and judgment, nor frighten him into senseless wrestling with it. He would come up again, alive, near the jagged tooth of rock after that would be his end, and in such an hour as this seconds became eternities of life. His wife, Clara, Lucy-Belle, and Derwent were still nearer to him than the final stroke of death; he would see them, especially Clara and Clara, when he looked back in those few moments of grace which the monster of the unknown would give him. These two, and the supreme faith which had wrought a comradeship between him and all the forces of Nature, gave him, instinctively and without effort, the courage not to be afraid.

The undercurrent's draughts and reflexes carried him with a quiet and deliberate leisureliness, which gave him no physical discomfort except that of holding his breath. Yet they were so powerful, so utterly sure in their grip, that when he made an experimental effort to reach the surface it was as if he were struggling against a wooden wall. To save the air in his lungs he restrained himself from further exertion, and when, at last, he came up near the rock, and felt fresh air in his face, he had suffered no greater inconvenience than if he had taken a long dive. His first thought was of the log, his second of the granite snag. Against this, after a moment, to feel himself being slowly lifted, and throwing out his hands he was thrilled by the firmness, shiny touch of a rope-like substance which had gathered thickly about it just under the surface of the water. River weeds and flag leaf wrapped themselves in a tough belt about the rock, and so truly had they attached themselves to it that he knew they would, for a time at least, hold up his weight from the sinking undertow which was already beginning to drag at his limbs.

He looked toward the cliff and raised one hand to wave at the four who stood there. With the distance, him was lifted. A woman's body lay on the cliff, but no responsive echo of horror escaped his own lips, no sound, but an articulate gasp as the figure struck the water and disappeared. An appalling and devastating weakness seized upon him, a deadly sickness of shock, a thing that loosened the grip of his fingers from the clinging belt of weeds and made him flung impotent against the dragging force of the undertow. For an instant his brain reeled in darkness. He began to go down, easily and slowly, as if the cruel and murderous hands below were fearful of arousing the inertness to which he had momentarily succumbed. Then water struck into his face and startled him. Heart and brain leaped in response to its warning, and he thrust up wildly and caught the weeds again. They hung closely to the rock, allowing him to drag his body up until his shoulders were out of water once more. The board Derwent shunt, as if from a mile away, but he paid no attention to the cry, nor did he look toward the cliff. The thought in his mind was that Clara would be with him in another moment or two. She would come to the surface near the rock, and he must be ready to seize and hold her with him until the weeds gave way—or a miracle happened.

Five or six feet from him, where the water was like a pool of oil that had no motion, a little disturbance suddenly flicked its surface—a change of light, a drifting off of something intangible and shadowy, a nebulous blotch which changed under his eyes to substance, a blinding mass of hair. The sun was shining, the water was almost black, but there was no glint of gold in what he saw. The hole was dark. Clara's face became a part of it in a moment. It seemed to him that the monsters who lived about the rock held her up for him, with a smile on her lips and in her eyes, her face toward him and her arms reaching out. He was half in a daze, and might have fancied some of the things he saw. But Clara was there. She, not his wife, had come to join him in death. The quiet, terrible drama of it held him from calling her name as he waited for her to come within his reach. But the undertow brought her to nearer. For a second, two of them, three or four, it held her away from him, and each of these seconds was a lifetime in passing. Then he saw the distance between them widening, and as it widened the things below began to drag Clara down. She made no struggle, did not cry out to him, but only raised her hands so that he might see they were waiting for him, and waiting him, as she went to her kingdom of Micomicon, her land of dreams.

He swung himself out, thrusting against the rock, and when the ogres of the water pit dragged at their cleaves Clara was in his arms. His brain was keenly alive again, and he knew that terms of awe could have pulled him fully against the undercurrents, which, one after another, were transporting them, irresistibly and yet without great haste through watery space. Thought of physical salvation scarcely filtered in a ray of hope through his mind, and his senses were underlaid by the suffocating presence of death. In Clara were his strength and courage. He looked his arms about her closely. He could feel her clinging to him with the same desire to remain inseparable when the end came. Strange, a kingdom of Micomicon—a land of Almschar—a place of fancies—a world of dreams—"They were going to it all. Between the walls where no man had ever looked. Death! A magnificent adventure, with Clara in his arms! A roaring filled his ears. They were traveling swiftly now. His senses grew less distinct, like colors merging one into another in a sunset sky. Queer, why it should end like this, after years of life—he and Clara—together—as it must have been in fabled from the beginning. A glorious consciousness of fate, an immortal symphony of fulfillment—to pass on like this with Clara, no matter how many hundred centuries had gone before! And some one—his wife—had said—that seconds meant more than years—when—like this—

The roaring was an enormity of sound. Its walling was like the wind in the cave of Aeolus, its thunder like Stentor's blasts rumbling through the empty bowels of the earth. They numbed and unsheltered, yet left him with a shred of living, thinking cells which told him they were bearing through the call of the gorge, and which, at the same time, held his arms enfolded as hands of steel about Clara's body.

Although close to the edge of an abyss of utter darkness, consciousness did not quite leave him. Vaguely he experienced the thrill of being transported out of a hell of tumultuous sound into a soft and gently drifting sea which was without noise or violence. For an interval he fancied his arms were wings and that he was trying to fly, making rather a bad mess of it because one side of him refused to co-ordinate with the other. This was the arm, only one arm now, which held Clara. With the other, after a little, he found himself chewing and slugging into something. A man may live a hundred years, but when he is ready to die and looks back over the path he has traveled, it seems very short, and the hundred years no more than a few hours. Paul had reflected upon the illusory and baseless fabric of time, its inadequacy and the hollowness of its human measurement. "One who is large has but a feeling 'vision of life,'" Clara had said to him once. "To live long and terribly, one must be unhappy—in prison." It was odd why he should be thinking of this as he continued to chew and die. But that had fastened itself upon him like a leech, and if each second of his these few seconds he would have lived a thousand years. During this cycle of his existence he slowly and tellingly progressed, until, with air filling his lungs again, and the smothering folds of near-insensibility breaking away from him, he knew that he was away from him, that his fingers were clutching at soft sand, and that the burden which he had dragged with him was Clara.

There was scarcely a breath between this knowledge and the full and poignant possession of every faculty with which his brain was capable of being inspired. But darkness, mystery, the defeat of death, and the feet of his own physical salvation were submerged all at once in an agonized appeal to the limp, dead form which he clasped in his arms. The spirits of the subtle darkness about him listened to his voice calling Clara's name as he struggled to bring life back into her body. They had worked over a little girl who had been taken from the water, and now memory came to him vividly of the first gentle beating of the heart again, the slow regaining of the soul into the tender body, until the child lived and breathed no more. But Clara's soft breast gave no response. Her lips were cold and lifeless, and, at last, believing her surely dead, he held her face close to him, and kissed her mouth and eyes, as the father of the little girl had kissed his child when she was returning to him. When the first whisper of breath came from Clara's lips he was holding her like this, staring into the darkness. Her heart, beating faintly, responded to the call of life close against his own. Her lips grew warm. Her eyes opened. Paul kissed her again in the darkness that shut them in and found that she was alive.

He did not cry out or speak, but brushed her thick, wet hair back and pressed his face close to hers, and waited. In her first consciousness Clara's arms crept about his neck. Her lips breathed his name. Words were futile for a little while. Truly in silence could they claim each other, a silence of voices, where other sound was maddening and troubling about them. Both knew what it meant as the seconds counted themselves off. They had come through the mouth of the gorge, and were caught in a subterranean hole of the earth. Chance. A miracle. God. That they might have each other at last, with the barrier between them torn away. This was Clara's thought, and her arms drew closer about Paul. He belonged to her now, for there was no other world than this in all of gloom with death for its walls, an abyssal grave, where love, for a space, would build for them "the great world's altar stairs that slope through darkness up to God."

Why we waited 6 months to announce this new oil to the public...

HUNDREDS of cars, of practically every make and model, were used in road tests under the toughest conditions possible, to prove the superior value of New Iso-Vis as a motor lubricant. These rigid tests were successful even beyond our expectations. The 4 points at the right give the details.

SAVE THE EXPENSE and bother of carbon removal. Again, thorough tests and experiments have proved that New Iso-Vis has less tendency toward carbon residue than other oils.

Last October, after a year of research, a new type motor oil was perfected. Announcement of it was delayed 6 months to give it the most thorough tests possible in actual use.

We can now definitely make the following statements:

1. New Iso-Vis means less wear on every moving part of the automobile engine.
2. It does not "thin out" with use.
3. It gives effective lubrication over a wider range of temperatures—both high and low.
4. It means a radical reduction of carbon deposits—far less than in most premium-priced oils.

With New Iso-Vis you get a type of lubrication that has not been possible before, regardless of the kind of oil you have used.

This improved New Iso-Vis Motor Oil is now on sale at all Standard Oil dealers and service stations.

INTER-CLASS BALL TOURNAY THIS WEEK

Play Starts Thursday Night—Track Practice Starts Next Week.

Heading the list of sports attractions at Charlevoix high school this week is the annual boys' inter-class basketball tournament. To the winner goes a leg on a trophy presented by the Courier last year.

According to present plans, captains of the four class teams will meet Wednesday afternoon for the draw. The tournament opens Thursday night with two games and closes Friday evening with an equal number including championship and consolation games.

Practice for track will get under way next week. A call for candidates will be issued Monday, and a meeting that afternoon will be held to get organized. Charlevoix has no scholastic track material and should make a strong bid for honors at the Tip of Michigan track meet to be held at East Jordan in May.

The Green goes to Charles, north of St. Ignace, where a job of dredging will occupy about ten days before she starts hauling gravel to that point.

The Str. James B. Sanford is making tri-weekly runs to Beaver Island and all fish tugs are now operating out of the harbor.

Funeral for Edward Greenway at Fowlerville Last Friday.

Funeral services were held Friday last at Fowlerville for Edward Greenway, age 83, father of Mrs. Arthur L. Fitch, this city, who died a week ago Sunday at Long Beach, California.

Mr. Greenway was well known to local residents, having visited here on many occasions. Mrs. Fitch was with her father at the time of his death, having been called to Long Beach several weeks ago.

Other Charlevoix residents who attended the funeral Friday were A. L. Fitch and daughter, Margaret, Mrs. A. M. Bellinger, W. C. Bellinger and two daughters, and James Bellinger.

MANY OUT FOR MEETING FRIDAY EVENING

Two New Members Signed Up With Merchant Minute Men's Assn.

A large and interested crowd was out to the meeting of the Merchant Minute Men's association at the Charlevoix Hardware company store last Friday evening.

Henderson of Shreveport, La., anti-chain store speaker, was on the air with a message to Charlevoix citizens. However, he was not heard to give any direct reference to Charlevoix as expected and, like the baby before visitors, the radio acted up so badly before the evening was very old that it was quite hard to hear Henderson's remarks.

Two new members were signed up for the association Friday evening, making a total of 18, and the organization is well satisfied with results of their efforts so far.

MUCH-FOUGHT WIN- DOW PEEPER TAKEN

Released Under $500 Bond to Appear May 24 for Sentence.

At a hearing held Monday afternoon before Justice Robert Withers and Prosecuting Attorney Rollie L. Lewis, Ernest Olney pleaded guilty to a disorderly charge. His case was continued to May 24th, when he will appear for sentence, and he was released under bond of $500 to keep the peace.

Olney was arrested Saturday by Chief of Police W. J. Weikel, and was held in jail until his hearing Monday afternoon. He had been under suspicion for window-peeping and last Friday evening was seen in the act and reported to officers by George Smith, Jr., Ted Bergman and Bill Novak, local youths, whose complaint brought about his arrest.

CHEBOYGAN OUT OF DEBATE RACE

Two teams of high school debaters, one from Detroit Northwestern and the other from the little town of Clawson, are looking ahead to a meeting April 25 at Ann Arbor, where one will be crowned the new state champion. The goal will end the fornic race which started last fall with hundreds of teams.

Northwestern last Friday night was given a unanimous decision over the Cheboygan team, last year's title winners, while Clawson won from Paw Paw by a two to one vote, at Paw Paw.

NEW STORE FRONT IS DECIDED IMPROVEMENT

Included in the general line of improvements under way in the city, is a new store front recently completed at the Slezak shoe store on Bridge street. Deeper and more convenient display windows resulted from the improvement, which has added much to the appearance of the building.

Roof Fire Sunday Morning

The city fire department was called out Sunday forenoon to extinguish a small roof fire at the Clarence Bartlett residence on Mason street. Sparks from the chimney are thought to have started the blaze.

AT THE MOVIES.

Colbert and Huston Play Leading Roles.

Claudette Colbert, slender, brown-eyed beauty of stellar fame in a number of Broadway productions, and Walter Huston, one of the outstanding stars of the legitimate stage in the past five years of Broadway theatrical history, are re-united in leading roles in the Paramount all-talking film success, "The Lady Lies," which comes to the Palace Theatre for Saturday and Sunday, April 19th and 20th.

They first appeared in leading roles together in the tremendously popular stage play by George Abbott, "The Barker," which had a long run on Broadway. Huston played the part of Nifty Miller, the tough carnival ballyhoo man and Miss Colbert played Lou, the equally hard-boiled side-show performer.

"The Lady Lies" was written as a stage play by John Meehan, who served as the director of dialog in the all-talking version. He has had years of experience as a stage director, notably with George M. Cohan.

"Twin Beds" is Splitting Sides at the Palace Theatre.

Margaret Mayo and Salisbury Field's famous stage farce, "Twin Beds," is seen with both words and music in the new First National-Viaphone picture, adapted from the stage play, at the Palace Theatre on April 23 and 24.

With Jack Mulhall starred, and Patsy Ruth Miller in the leading feminine role, this all-comedy picture with songs and music, as well as dialogue is crowding the house.

Alfred Santell directed "Twin Beds," and the all-comedy cast, in addition to the star and the leading lady, includes Eddie Gribbon, Knute Erickson, Armand Kaliz, Joelynn Lee, Gertrude Astor, Edythe Chapman, Ben Hendricks, Jr., and Alice Lake.

"Are Sin, Disease, and Death Real?" was the subject of the lesson-sermon in all Christian Science churches on Sunday, April 13.

Among the citations which comprised the lesson-sermon was the following from the Bible: "Every valley shall be exalted, and every mountain and hill shall be made low; and the crooked shall be made straight, and the rough places plain"; (Isa. 40:4).

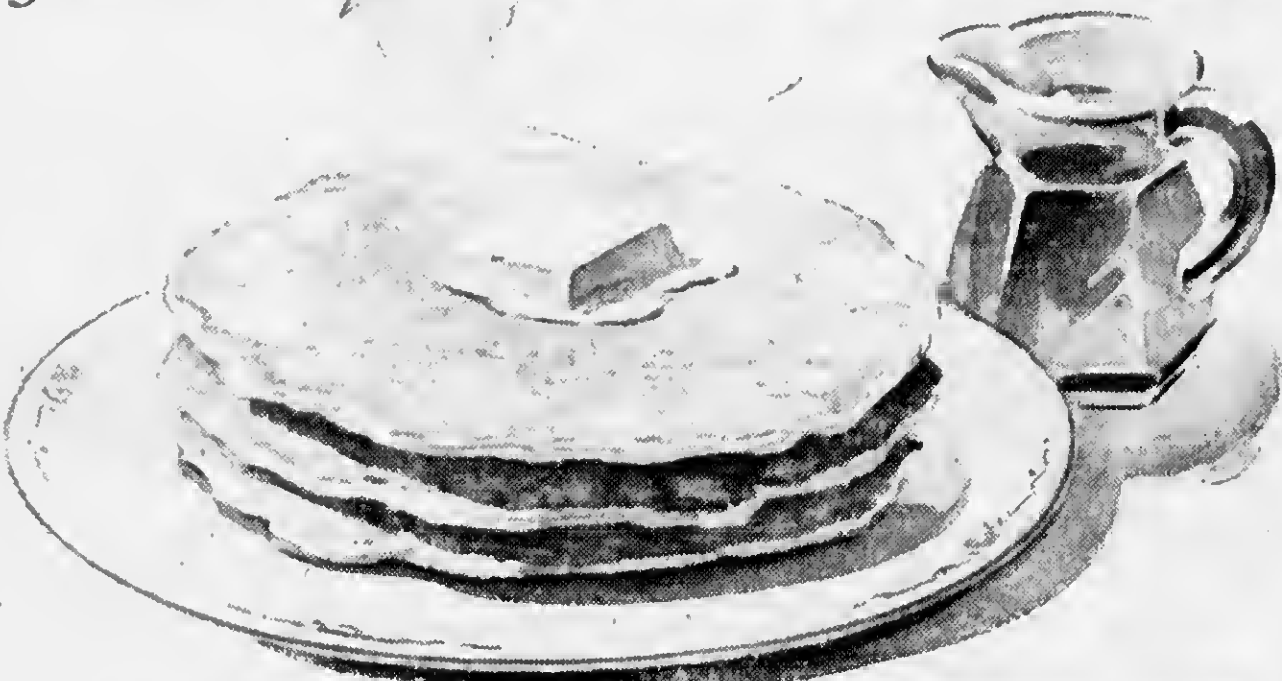

The lesson-sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Christ came to destroy the belief of sin. The God-principle is omnipresent and omnipotent. God is everywhere, and nothing apart from Him is present or has power" (p. 473).

What's a stack of hotcakes got to do with a GARDEN?

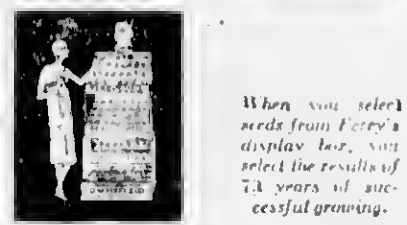

HOTCAKES just off the griddle are at their tenderest. Then's the time to eat them—when they're hot. And vegetables just from a garden are at their tenderest. Then is the time to eat them, too—when the radishes are solid, crisp. When the tomatoes sparkle as you peel them, and you can slice them smooth and thin.

Have a kitchen garden and enjoy all your vegetables at their climax-time, when they are most tender and sweet. Plant FERRY'S purebred Seeds. These have abundant life inside. They are what their name says—purebred. Generations of the seeds that finally became these seeds produced vegetables and flowers approaching perfection.

FERRY'S Seeds are at the "store around the corner." A few packets will show what your own yard can grow—but you will want more than a few packets when you look over FERRY'S Seed Annual. With this, your garden can produce from early-radi-h time till frost, when crisp, white celery can last clear on till spring again! For the Annual, write to D. M. FERRY & Co., Detroit, Michigan.

Hard Times?

Don't you know some people who are always complaining of "hard times?" Yet do you ever hear them talking about hard work and hard cash—in the form of a steadily growing Savings Account?

For there is no mixing them; hard times cannot exist side-by-side with hard work and a definite program of regular deposits in a Savings Account. If you have an account and are steadily adding to it, you know this is true. But if you haven't an account, wouldn't it be well to come in and make your initial deposit now?

A bank cannot perform its full duty to the community unless it is in a position to loan money safely, where that money will do its full share in the development of the community. The length of time required to roast a leg of lamb depends chiefly on the size of the leg and the temperature of the oven. Most people prefer lamb from medium to well done, and if a roast meat thermometer is inserted in the meat uniform results will be obtained at every cooking. The thermometer should register 175 degrees F. for medium and 182 degrees F. for well-done meat. Place the leg of lamb skin side down and cut-flesh side up on a rack in an open roasting pan. Do not add water and do not cover. Sear for 30 minutes in a hot oven to develop flavor, and then reduce the oven temperature rapidly to 300 degrees F. and continue the cooking at this temperature to the required degrees of doneness.

"I know—how glad I expected you," said Paul.

CHAPTER IX

After a time they were standing in the darkness.

More distinctly the hollow, rumbling sound about them began to impinge itself upon their ears as Paul supported Carla against his breast. They listened, as if for a voice, his lips pressing against her hair, where they had so long wanted to rest. What they heard was unlike anything out in the world of sun and sky. The roaring and whirling were gone, and in their place was a platoon-like cadence that moved and stirred about them, but which seemed to come mostly from a vast dome over their heads. It was like something trying to escape, thrashing until it seemed to be in the air with little claps at the denials of their ears when it was nearest, then leaving them to tremble and hum like a huge humming-bird, through the sound of gloom. There were no break in the solemn sadness of it. It was clarity of sound a throaty cadence. In a little while it could drive a living thing mad.

"I am not afraid," Carla said. "Are you?"

Her voice was no different than if the sun had been shining, and there was something in it for him which had never been there before. A kind of exultation came with it, a gladness which trembled in the darkness, and which sent shame and triumph sweeping over him in a submerging emotion.

"Afraid? Good G—d, no!"

She drew herself out of his arms and stood beside him, with her hand in his. Their voices had broken down a tenseness about them, and life drew closer, more sure. He wanted to see her, and fumbled in his sudden pocket for his metal box of matches.

"I'm going to strike a light, Carla. I want to look at you!"

A flare of yellow flame made a hole in the darkness. Paul lit and out their eyes glowered each other. Carla was like an angel. Love, transforming death into a happy incident, was an uncovered glory in her eyes at last, clearly revealed for him to see.

He knew that only the positiveness of their fate could make her look at him like this, with Claire living and waiting in another world outside. Claire seemed infinitely removed from him, a century away, a glow of memory—like stars dust, yet he thought of her as the match went out. His wife would go on living. He and Carla were about to die. He had seen understanding and courage in the shining depths of Carla's eyes when the time came had blundered their faces. She had let him know, without words, that death bonds were stricken from her, because there was no longer an earth for either of them. For a few hours they were to be in a world all their own. Then their couch of everlasting sleep together. He felt a strange reaction from the spark-tion of horror and fear which had come upon him. To feel sure that Carla knew, and that she had given herself to him because of her knowledge that she was not afraid, but was happy in the freedom which an unpromising termination of life made possible for them, filled him with an emotion which took from their brief future its stark and ugly grimness and gave to it an almost joyous aspect.

As if she had been a partner in the few seconds of his thoughts, Carla spoke softly, giving him her hand again in the night which shut them in.

"I want to hear you say it, Paul! I have dreamed, and have fancied your voice telling me the story. For that I have many times asked God to forgive me. But now it is right and just. I want to hear you say, 'you love me.'"

"I do," said Paul. "I know—now—that I have loved you from the beginning of time, before I came to this life a thousand or a million years. I have worshipped the soul that is you. Sometime it may have been near you. I know it if you listened to me."

"I have always believed in you," said Carla. "You're the love I thought was hopelessly gone from my life here. But to be with you is my right. Can there be such a thing as death for us now?"

"I am sure there cannot," he said.

"You would like to live?"

"Why not you?"

"You are so brave, so brave, so brave!"

"I am not brave of me. No force would ever lead me to the darkness in the end of the world. At the other end of a second matter is ground to sleep as the water comes out through the pores. We are a unit between the two."

He cradled and softly spoke the truth to her. She made no reply in words, for he could feel her response in the silence. He felt her lips and the touch of her body. He did not fight, and he had not dreamed from her touch that he was a man. She did not know it. The truth was upon him, and he was a man of flesh and blood.

There was a shiver in him, one he should have known without intuition and words. For Carla knew that only a woman's love could lead him to this. A girl, she would be lost to him, and after what he might do in the way other men had soiled such positions, only here, in a beginning and an end all their own, could she belong to him.

Again she was in his heart, listening to his thoughts.

"It is strange, but I want to sing in this darkness," she said. "I did not know that blindness could be so beautiful."

"No!" he answered.

MURRAY SCHOOL.

Mrs. Fred Yahr visited school Monday.

The little folks have the room well decorated with spring flowers.

The eighth grade have finished their history work books and are now reviewing.

Mrs. Mawby visited school Thursday night while we were working on our note books.

Ruby and Opal Gregory and Grace and Eleanor Baker of the Burgess school, visited school Friday.

This is a question to be solved: Why does Mary Ellen Johnson have her washing on telephone wires?

Thursday night the seventh and eighth grades had supper at the school house and then worked their note books until 9:00 o'clock.

The great excitement of the week is horse shoe. Louis Mawby, Ralph Burnett and Fritz Deschermeier are the champions of the boys. Arvilla Yahr, Margaret Yahr, Dorothy Ferguson and Miss McCalmon are the girls champions. You should hear the boys yell when the girls win most of the games.

AGRICULTURAL NOTES

By B. C. Mellencamp

Boys' and Girls' Clubs Are Planning Achievement Days.

The polishing touches are being made and everything put in readiness for the Achievement Days that will be held in Charlevoix county on April 21, 22 and 23, by the twenty Boys' and Girls' Clubs, who have been carrying on club projects this past winter.

This is the big event of the year for some two hundred members of Handicraft and Clothing Clubs, who will display the articles and garments they have made. The exhibits will be judged by A. G. Kettunen, state club leader, and Miss Sylvia Wikson, assistant club leader, who will select the local champions from each club.

Attractive program in all cases will add color to the exhibits, and forcibly bring out the varied benefits that are received by the club workers. Parents and friends are cordially invited to attend the Achievement Days and to inspect the splendid work being done by this fine group of rural boys and girls.

Cherry Fruit Fly Control to Be Discussed.

E. C. Mandenberg, chief of nursery and orchard inspections, state Department of Agriculture, will discuss the problems of controlling the cherry fruit fly at a series of two meetings to be held on Thursday, April 24.

The first will be held in Boyne City in the public library at 10 o'clock last time, Thursday forenoon, and the second in East Jordan in the public library at 2:00 o'clock, Thursday afternoon. All cherry raisers are not only invited, but strongly urged to attend as this is a vital problem and the old adage, "a stitch in time saves nine" is just about the situation of Charlevoix county at the present time.

This year it is estimated that at least 8,000 more cherry trees will be set out by local farmers. What production and what success you will derive from your trees will depend upon an accurate knowledge of diseases and insect pests that must be controlled. This is your opportunity to learn the true situation and the remedies. Charlevoix county has the reputation of being remarkably free from the cherry fruit fly. Let us keep it. Only a well informed group of fruit men can do it. Remember, Boyne City at 10 o'clock, Thursday, April 24, and East Jordan at 2:00 o'clock in the afternoon.

Potato Meetings Scheduled.

Without a doubt potatoes and potato production factors receive more attention, both pro and con, than any other crop now being produced. No other crop has had more ups and downs, and a more varied career.

Furthermore, no major crop requires as broad a knowledge of as many factors as do potatoes.

For the purpose of discussing fully and completely the many problems confronting both the certified seed and table stock growers, a series of three meetings have been arranged for Charlevoix county potato growers on Friday, April 25, with J. J. Bird, newly appointed potato specialist, from M. S. C., as the main speaker. The following is the schedule:

Friday forenoon at 10 o'clock last time, East Jordan Public Library (basement).

Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock last time, Charlevoix Court House (Court room).

Friday evening at 8 o'clock last time, Boyne City Library (basement).

Any of the many factors, such as seed selection, seed treatment, fertilization, spraying, cultivation, harvesting, storing and planting, may mean the difference of success or failure. Are you securing profitable yields, or are you falling down because one or more of the above mentioned factors are neglected?

Before your decision is made on a definite potato program, attend your nearest meeting and enter into the discussion. Get all the facts. Attach the proper consideration to each. Learn what the others are doing. By all means, whether raising certified seed or table stock, be present. Your time will be well spent.

UNDINE SCHOOL.

Fine weather for playing ball.

For language the second and third grade are making health booklets.

Esther Klooster won the "geography down" last week and again this week.

The eighth graders are enjoying studying townships and city government.

The second and third grade decorated the blackboard with rabbits and Easter eggs.

We are glad to have Mary Tepakayah back in school again, after being out all winter.

We are sorry to learn that Mrs. Ralph Klooster's mother is very sick. Mrs. Klooster is helping take care of her.

ERNESTINE NICKERSON MEDAL WINNER

Won W. C. T. U. Oratorical Contest Friday Afternoon.

Ernestine Nickerson won the silver medal in the oratorical contest held last Friday under the auspices of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union at the community club room, using the recitation, "The Two Glasses," by Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

Florence Palmer's rendering of Wilbur D. Nesbitt's "Your Flag and My Flag," entitled her to the privilege of pinning the medal on the winner.

The other contestants were Charles Scott, June Davey, Helen Ikens, William Hanson, Emily Kerchak, Cecil Belle Shaw, Dorothy Miller, Gertrude Guild, Helena Isaacson and Charles Mitchell.

Mrs. Hart, Otterbein and Dick were the judges and Mrs. Ogden, medical contest director, had charge of the program. All of the contestants did their parts so well that the judges must have found it difficult to decide between them.

While only one could win the prize, all had the satisfaction of helping in a good cause, and if present plans carry, the others will have the opportunity of contesting again, using the same recitations in their respective Sunday schools May 18th. On that date the Union offers to sponsor medals.

M-66 EXTENSION TO CHARLEVOIX ADOPTED

Approved by Highway Dept. Advisory Board—Now Up to State.

A recent Associated Press dispatch out of Lansing carries the information that the advisory board of the state highway department has approved the extension of M-66 from East Jordan to Charlevoix, a distance of 16.5 miles, and has presented the recommendation, along with others, to the state administrative board for approval.

This news brings satisfaction to many. The Charlevoix Association of Commerce, East Jordan interests, the county road commission and others have been plugging hard for the M-66 extension, and see in its recommendation by the advisory board of the state highway department, an almost positive reward for their efforts.

M-66 is an extension from Mio, and is marked from US-131 north to Manistota to East Jordan. It will give Charlevoix county a trunk line artery from US-131 to US-31.

CHARLEVOIX TWP. VOTED ON FUNDS

Will Raise 3 1/4 Mills for Fire, Road and General Purposes.

At their annual business meeting following regular election last week, residents of Charlevoix township voted several funds for the year's work.

Included among them was one mill for sinking fund, one mill for fire protection and one and one-half mills for highway purposes. The latter issue was hard-fought, calling for a count of noses to decide. The ayes won out by the small margin of one vote.

The mill tax will be taken from an aggregate assessment of something over $309,000.00.

TRAVERSE IS TOLD TO BUILD SEWER

Stream Pollution Body Takes Negative Vote as a Direct Slap.

An order requiring the city of Traverse City to appear on April 24 to show cause why it should not be compelled to bond itself to construct a sewage disposal plant was issued Saturday by the Michigan state stream control commission. The order is directed to officials of the city.

The order was issued immediately following receipt of official report that the city had voted down a proposal to bond itself for a project which calls for expenditure of $300,000 to eliminate its pollution of Grand Traverse bay. The state administrative board previously had agreed to pay $50,000 of the initial cost and a portion of the maintenance, the city agreeing to handle sewage from the Traverse City state hospital.

State authorities have followed the election at Traverse City closely because the city is one of the few which has reported no progress with its pollution problem. The defeat of the bond issue amounts to a virtual defiance of the powers of the commission which was created by the 1929 legislature and empowered to take action against communities and corporations which are polluting Michigan streams.

CAMERA TO WINNER IN ESSAY CONTEST

Local Junior High Students Write on Health Protection.

Aided by material contained in two pamphlets distributed to them this week, students in the seventh and eighth grades are beginning work on the health essay contest "Protecting Health in Youth" to be held from April 17 to April 30.

In addition to the two pamphlets, copies of which were provided by the Michigan Tuberculosis Association for each of the 100 children in the contest, three supplementary booklets have been given teachers for their pupils to refer to in writing essays. Other materials for use in the contest have also been furnished by the association, which is co-operating with the school in arranging for the contest as one of its Christmas seal activities.

Unusual interest is expected to be attached to the poster and figure exhibit that will be displayed from April 18 to April 25 in the window of the Fessenden Drug Store, as an added feature of the contest. In writing their essays, students will be referred for information to this exhibit. It pictures graphically the "peak years" for tuberculosis deaths, and illustrates the fact that health measures taken in youth will prevent them.

The store will give the writer of the winning essay a prize consisting of a camera, which will be shown in its window with the exhibit.

SOPHMORE FIVE WON CLASS MEET

VICTORY GAVE THEM BASKETBALL TITLE SECOND YEAR.

Organized for Track Season Monday Afternoon—Candidates Had First Work-Out Tuesday.

The Charlevoix high school sophomore class basketball team, through their victories over the freshman and senior quintets last week, annexed the inter-class championship for the year 1930.

In Thursday night's game they defeated the freshmen by a count of 21 to 9, and in the finals Friday evening, took the measure of the upper classmen by an overwhelming 19 to 2 count. In 1929, their freshman year, practically the same personnel of the present sophomore class team, won the inter-class competition. By virtue of their victories for two successive years, the team now has won two legs on the Courier trophy, posted for the winners of class play. It must be won three years in succession, and another victory by the sophomores will give them permanent possession of the cup.

The winning team was McNabb and Kirby, forwards; Arvilla, center; Geneit, Beattie and Dick, guards. In the absence of Coach Kipke, who was unable to be out because of an infection, Stewart Coleman conducted the tournament.

In the other Thursday contest, the seniors eliminated the juniors by a 5 to 4 count, and Friday's game between the freshmen and juniors went to the former by a 14 to 12 score. The teams were composed of non-letter men.

Charlevoix high school organized for the track season at a meeting called Monday afternoon. Assistant Coach Coleman was in charge and a fair representation of material was out.

A glance at the list of prospective thin-clads reveals that Charlevoix has plenty of material in the dashes, but is short in other branches. In the present line-up are David Livingston, Levi Gibbley and Dick Warner in the 100 yard division; George Bergman, 220 and broad jump; Oscar Stroud, half mile; Bill Clark, 100 and 220; Wesley Manley, mile; Pat Moran, dashes, hurdles and shot put; Stan Cartier, 100 and broad jump.

Although weather the early part of the week has been far from favorable for practice, the men were put through their initial work-out Tuesday afternoon. It is possible they will get into competition the first time at a meet in Petoskey Saturday, but efforts are being pointed toward the Tip of Michigan track meet of class C schools, to be held May 10th, at East Jordan.

EAST JORDAN SENDS MOTHER TO FRANCE

Mrs. Nellie Sweet One of 14,000 to Make U. S. Pilgrimage.

Mrs. Nellie Sweet of East Jordan, from whom the world war took a son, will have her passport soon for her trip to France this summer under the auspices of the United States government.

She will be this county's lone representative on the voyage of the Gold Star Mothers. This week she made application for her passport with County Clerk Penton E. Bulow, after accepting the government's invitation to join the pilgrimage.

Mrs. Alonzo Powers of this city, had intended to make the voyage on June 4, but through misunderstanding while in Florida, failed to accept the government's invitation in time to apply for passport. She, together with Mr. Powers, will make the trip later in the summer, joining the next contingent of Gold Star Mothers.

PLANT TWENTY CANS OF BROOK TROUT FRY

Consignment Divided Between Orr and Horton Creek.

Twenty cans of brook trout fry from Constock Park hatchery, the first consignment received following requests made by the fish and game committee of the Charlevoix Association of Commerce, of which Clarence F. Wood is the chairman, were planted Friday in Orr and Horton creeks.

Contrary to the general rule, conditions for planting of fry are very good this year. Ordinarily streams are in the flood stage and to put fry into them results in an enormous waste. However, waters are now down to normal and the results from planting should be exceptionally good.

Many other shipments of fry will be sent in from now on and will be distributed throughout the county.

POPULATION DECREASE IS BIG

FOUR PRECINCTS SHOW LOSS OF NEARLY THOUSAND.

Preliminary Reports From Census Takers Completed in Two Boyne Wards, Hayes and Eveline.

Preliminary announcements from Fred N. Potter of Alpena, supervisor of census for the district of which Charlevoix county is a part, show that the population has taken a decided slump.

While present figures are preliminary and subject to correction, they show a decrease sufficient to indicate that there are far less people in Charlevoix county now than there were ten years ago.

A glance at reports now available, show that Boyne City has hit the skids heavily. The first ward decreased from 594 to 253 since 1920, and the second ward from 978 to 582, or a total of 737 in the two precincts. Thirteen farms were enumerated in the report.

Hayes and Eveline townships have also lost considerably. The former dropped from 708 to 599 since 1920, and the latter from 594 to 465. The total is 238 for two precincts, and 972 for the county so far. Farms enumerated in Eveline township numbered 117 and in Hayes 69.

Undoubtedly the above figures will prove a fair percentage of population decrease for the entire county. It is hard to imagine it any other way. Boyne City and East Jordan have both lost heavily since 1920, when lumbering operations were still being carried on extensively. Closing of other industrial plants in those cities has also hurt. Eastern townships will be likewise effected.

Rural townships in the western portion of the county should not show a heavy decrease, although Hayes township took a drop. It would be a fair guess to say that Charlevoix population figures will not stack up to those ten years ago, and before the count is completed we will find that there is more than enough room for all of us.

POWELL-DURANCE WEDDING SUNDAY

Ceremony Performed at M.E. Church in Frankfort, Michigan.

At the close of the morning Easter service in the First Methodist church at Frankfort last Sunday, Rev. E. H. Smart, the pastor, officiated at the wedding of Mrs. Elizabeth Powell and Jone Durance, well known Charlevoix couple.

The ceremony was performed in the presence of a number of friends and relatives, among the latter being the groom's daughter, Mrs. Ruth Jones of Frankfort, and her family. Mrs. E. H. Smart played the wedding march. The church was prettily decorated with Easter flowers and plants.

Following the wedding dinner at the Jones home, the bride couple left on a short honeymoon. They will soon return to Charlevoix, where the congratulations of a large following of friends awaits them.

NEW MICHIGAN BOOKS READY

THOUSANDS TO BE SENT TO PROSPECTIVE TOURISTS.

Fishermen and Golfers Given More Attention Than Before—State Associations Cooperate.

"Follow the road from your door to Michigan and explore the numerous pleasures she holds for you. Her broad highways will lead you from one interesting city to another to refreshing country studded with pleasures untold and provided with accommodations unequalled—Once in Michigan you will set the limit of your own enjoyment."

With such a preface, the new "All-Michigan" booklet, the product of the cooperation of four tourist and resort associations and the state itself, bids tourists to come to Michigan.

The booklet, containing 36 pages filled with attractive views of beauty spots—represents the first unified effort to invite visitors to Michigan. In it regional bounds are disregarded and the invitation of "All-Michigan" is presented.

Two pages are devoted to an interesting story of Indian history together with the physical characteristics of the state. The next two-page "spread" extols the varied scenes which will greet the eyes of tourists after they leave the southern boundary and the next two pages are devoted to the glory of standing timber.

Continuing through the booklet, the fisherman is told of the sport in store in the state's lakes and streams and should it chance that Mrs. Tourist is not an angler she is told of the accommodations of hundreds of parks and camp sites.

Golf courses and beaches are given the next two pages, and the point is stressed that once the tourist passes into the northern part of the state he need not put aside thought of a "hole-in-one."

"Don't forget to put your bag and clubs in your car when you visit Michigan," the booklet advises, "you will have as good a chance to use them anywhere within her boundaries as you will your fishing tackle and camera."

Boating—with canoe, rowboat or motorboat—comes next to the attention of the reader, together with an inviting picture of Michigan waterways. Beauty spots preserved for the pleasure seeker; broad sweeping highways which lead to them and to all vantage points in the state are described with both words and picture. Two pages tell of the industrial sights Michigan contains; two more are devoted to beautiful hotels and winter sports; two more to hunting and the volume brought to a close with a tribute to Michigan cities which have made the state's prosperity possible.

Thousands of copies of the booklet will be distributed out-state as one of the major items in this year's state-advertising program in which the legislature authorized official participation.

PETOSKEY CLUB PLAN TO BUY A GLIDER

William Maus heads the newly formed Petoskey glider club. A beginner's glider will be purchased and the club will use the Emmet county airport for practice flight. Membership will be restricted to 20.

DEATH CLOSED ACTIVE CAREER

JOHN McCANN, WELL KNOWN LAKE CAPTAIN IS DEAD.

Was Shipbuilder From Youth and Known as Fearless Sailor—Held Fish Tonnage Record.

Beaver Island and the entire Northern Michigan region lost by the death of Capt. John McCann, prosperous Beaver Island fisherman and well known ship builder and lake captain, who died Friday morning at his home in St. James. Capt. McCann suffered a severe stroke of paralysis a week ago Sunday following an extended period of ill health and the affliction proved fatal.

Deceased was born on Mackinac Island in 1869. He went with his parents to Beaver Island at the age of 14 years, and when 16 started the trade of boat building. He later took a position as head assistant to Frank E. Kirby at the Wyandotte Shipbuilding Co., Detroit, as draftsman. He had the St. Margaret McCann built in partnership with his father at Grand Haven in 1894, and since that time had followed the commercial fishing industry at Beaver Island and Charlevoix.

Capt. McCann designed and built his present boat, the tug Venus, in 1924. It is known as one of the finest fishing boats in lake Michigan waters, and figured in many romances of winter navigation while carrying mail and serving as passenger carrier or agent in acts of emergency after navigation on the lakes had closed.

Capt. McCann was married January 7, 1892, at Chicago, to Miss Grace Martin, who together with two daughters and six sons, survive, viz: Catherine and Roland of St. James; Harold of Charlevoix; Ulysses J. of Moline, Ill.; and Emmet and James of Kenosha, Wis.; Dr. C. J. McCann of Bay City; Mrs. Vern Runberg of Minneapolis, Minn. All of the children were with their father at the time of his death. A brother, M. J. McCann, resides at St. James.

Funeral services were held Monday forenoon at Holy Cross church, St. James, with interment in Holy Cross cemetery. The funeral car of Glenn S. See, of this city, was taken to the island Friday, setting a precedent in this respect. Many from Charlevoix and other points attended the services, showing the esteem in which Capt. McCann was held.

For several winters the McCann family had made their home in Charlevoix and thus had made a wide acquaintance of close friends. Capt. McCann had the record of taking the largest tonnage of fish in a season according to figures at the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries here, and was known as a staunch supporter of conservation measures. His death is a keen loss.

ACHIEVEMENT DAY PROGRAM MAY 1ST

WOMEN'S CLUBS MEET BOYNE CITY SAINTS CHURCH.

Many New Features Have Been Arranged on Program—Will Hear Well Known Speakers.

(By B. C. Mellenkamp.)

Thursday, May 1st, is the big event of the year for all the ladies of Charlevoix county who have been participating in the extension program that has been carried on this last winter by some 150 club members.

Great interest has been manifested in the project, "Home Management," under which was the subject discussed during the series of four lessons, under the leadership of Miss Edna V. Smith, specialist from Michigan State college.

Many new features are incorporated in this year's Achievement Day that are worthy of mention. In the first place, instead of having a pot-luck dinner, which in itself means considerable effort and inconvenience, a special lunch will be given by the ladies of the Latter Day Saints church, in the church basement, and will only cost 35 cents. This is welcome news for the ladies. For the first time there will be no exhibits, which again necessitates considerable time and expense in arranging, but instead, each of the twelve groups will put a little stunt on after the lunch. This alone will be well worth your presence.

The program proper will be held in the Latter Day Saints church beginning at 11 o'clock fast time. Mrs. A. G. Kightlinger, county chairman, will preside. Mrs. James MacNeal, Boyne City, will give the address of welcome, followed by the roll call of each group, and introduction of guests of honor and visitors. Next you will be highly interested in the report of Miss Edna V. Smith, the leader in charge, who will discuss the results and accomplishments of the project as well as describing the new project to be carried on.

Lunch promptly at 12 o'clock, followed by stunts from each group.

The afternoon program starts at 1:30 o'clock, first time, with a little playlet put on by the leader of the Peninsula group, under the direction of Mrs. George Staley and Mrs. Ray Loomis. Next feature will be music by the Boyne City Glee Club, who make a special hit wherever they appear.

Then follows the feature address of the day by Professor Gannon of Michigan State college, who has been a familiar character on the college campus for many years, and who is considered the best friend of the student. He will talk on the subject, "As Others See Us," and you can most assured that you will hear a most wonderful address, one full of rich thoughts and sentiments that only Prof. Gannon can extend.

Next appear the Breckelon brothers of Petoskey, who are the most clever singers and comedians of this section. They just bubble over with pep and enthusiasm, and are real crowd pleasers.

A most cordial invitation is extended to the entire public to attend the program and lunch at noon, Thursday, May 1st, will be a day never to be forgotten, so plan right now to attend this big event to be held in the Latter Day Saints church in Boyne City. Invite your friends and neighbors.

FOUND NETTED BROOK TROUT ON LAKE SHORE

Sportmen May Ask for Power Boat to Drag Lake Regularly.

An 18-inch brook trout, found dead on the shore of Lake Charlevoix near Parmelee's warehouse with deep net marks plainly visible upon it, has aroused Charlevoix sportmen. It is possible that the fish may have floated in from Lake Michigan where many trout find their way into small mesh nets when entering streams from the lake, but the general opinion is that the netting is being done in Lake Charlevoix.

It has been proposed that Charlevoix sportmen petition the conservation department for a small power boat to be used by the local warden to drag the lake, and action will probably be taken on the matter at once.

CHAPTER X

During the night following Paul's accident and Carla's leap, men were active below the gorge. Derwent lost no time in rushing back to the Mists-shed, and the presence of a hundred men below the chasm before midnight was the result. Every device of engineering science and unlimited resource which might be employed came with them. The big pool at the foot of the gorge was a glare of illumination, and men went down the river with their flaming torches, about along its banks and in canoes between them, questing for a shred of something which a few hours before might have been a part of Paul or Carla.

Luce-Belle, shocked into sickness, was taken to her home. But Claire remained. Men who saw her in the weird glow of the light will never be able to forget the image of her face as it was photographed upon their memories. Her blue eyes were so wide open and staring, so filled with an unyielding, unflinching flame that at times Derwent thought of her as a spirit-goddess instead of a woman. Could Paul have seen her he would have known that at last she had conquered her fear and repugnance of the wilderness. She had come with the first men before a trail was cut. Her dress and shoes were torn, her soft skin bruised and bleeding. Where the water crashed and thundered loudest out from between the chasm walls she stood unafraid, until Derwent twice drew her back from the nearness and danger of it. She resented his appeal to leave the search to others, and Derwent made it only once. A white face, watching for his death—that was what men would remember. Eyes flamingly blue, hungrily searching the black stream as it came from the mountain. A fragile form that seemed fleshless, as steel, a woman, and yet more than woman—an unforgettable spirit, a vision that was like fragile music, always to be remembered.

In the Fire Glow Sat Carla, Combing Her Long, Silky Hair With Her Fingers.

She did not give up with the first hours of evening, but continued to watch through the night. She did not move from the foot of the gorge and the pool, as if she were sure that whatever came to her would be found there. Derwent was frequently with her, and tried to talk, but her lips framed few words. Not until day came again did something give way in her, and hopelessness take its place. "Then he took her home to Lucy-Belle. 'I waited too long,' she said to him, and afterward, back with the searching men, he wondered what she had meant.

These searchers, could they have looked through the rock, would have seen a fire. It was the second night for Paul and Carla in a place where night and day were the same. Paul had found drifts of wood along the edge of the sand, mixed with pitchy pine, and a little spot in their world was illumined by light.

In the fire glow sat Carla, combing her long, silky hair with her fingers. Paul watched her as she smoothed and braided the tresses, employing as great care as though she were in her bedroom at home. "This was the third time she had given it such attention in their thirty-six hours of entombment. At other times he had held a light for her at the edge of the water while she bathed her face and hands, and once she had said to him: "It is wonderful water, almost as soft as that which comes with rain." She spoke as if they might have been camping on one of the streams they loved, with the sky above and flowers about them. It was her utter acceptance of their fate as a thing of happiness which transformed what would have been a hell for him into a heaven. She had sat in the soft sand at his feet, a few moments before, with her head pillowed against his knees, and there she had unbraided her hair for him to caress, as she watched and pointed out for him the unusual and beautiful pictures that loomed themselves in the changing coils and crumpling embers of the fire.

Now she was a little distance from him, and no sense of dread or fear oppressed him as he followed the rhythmic movements of her slim white fingers braiding her hair again.

If it were madness which possessed him it was a beautiful madness, a sense of joyous living where there should have been despair. At first the fighting part of him had instinctively struggled against it, but now he accepted it fully. Until, seeing Carla as she was, death seemed vague and far away and the glory of life very near. They had made no effort to hide from themselves the coming of the end, and Carla thought of it as a beautiful thing, a little journey, which they were making gladly together. Never had Paul believed so surely in a God. He had found himself fond of telling her how he loved her hair more than any other physical thing about her, and she had said: "I am going to spread it out so you may put your face to it when we lie down to sleep." This was the way she spoke of what was to come—as sleep. To drift off like this, his arms about her, seemed to Paul the fruition of a great privilege and joy, and not a triumph of fleshly dissipation. He had told her little stories about his mother, and of the time they had spent sun-bathed hours in the Indian burial place at Brantford, where the proudness of her forest ancestors were buried.

"I could not understand her then, when she told me how gladly she would give her life, were it not for me, to live for a single year the glorious freedom of Molly Brant," said Paul. "But I do—now. In that one year she knew she would find some thing which would more than make up for all the other years she might live, just as every hour here with you is more to me than ten thousand back there."

As he said these things, and believed and felt them, there was in him a will to live which would not utterly extinguish itself. It was scarcely more than a spark, a smoldering ember that was bound to die, for his eyes, his brain, and every faculty of reason which he possessed told him there was no hope of finding a way beyond the walls which shut them in. A few minutes before, when Carla had sat at his knees, with his fingers feeling the warmth and sweetness of her hair, this spark had leaped into flame.

It still remained as Carla yielded at last to his demand, and gave herself to the bed he had made for her, with his coat for her pillow.

"It seems almost a sin to sleep," she said, and if slumber were near, or even the necessity for it, he could find no shadow of it in her face. She might have risen from her bed an hour ago, so freshly clear and lovely were her eyes, so deep their lustrous content and happiness when she looked at him. Yet, after a little, her lashes drooped as if to veil the love behind them, and lay in velvet darkness against the whiteness of her cheeks. For a while Paul sat close and watched her, and with each breath the flame in him grew stronger, the demand that something happen.

It's wise to choose a SIX!

It is wise to choose a six-cylinder motor—the only way to get six-cylinder smoothness. Six-cylinder smoothness takes out vibration and roughness. This saves motor, chassis, body, passengers, and the driver.

The Chevrolet is a six. Yet it sells at a price that anyone can afford to pay. And it lasts longer, because of fine materials, oversize parts, and a big, smooth, 50-horsepower six-cylinder engine that always "takes it easy."

With all its six-cylinder smoothness and power the New Chevrolet Six saves gasoline and oil, through modern efficiency—overhead valves—high compression power—improved carburetor—long-wearing pistons—crankcase ventilation—air cleaner. Thus Chevrolet brings truly modern transportation within reach of all who can afford any car. Chevrolet economy also means sincerity in manufacture. To illustrate:

Chevrolet valves are adjustable—to save replacing. Chevrolet molded brake lining greatly reduces brake upkeep. The rear axle inspection plate on the Chevrolet means accessibility. The whole car is full of such evidence that true economy comes from advancement and refinement.

There are four extra-long, chrome-vanadium springs controlled by hydraulic shock absorbers. They through force of God or man, to break down the walls of death which environed her.

Alone, with Carla's unconscious form leaning faith and inspiration to his thought, he fixed his attention, as a dozen times before, on the smoke which rose from the burning wood.

Where did it go?

Hours ago he had asked himself this question, and until he had discovered a thin fog of smoke settling over the water, and drifting away with the rush of it, his blood had run swiftly with a thrill of hope. And now, in spite of the fact that he knew where it went, the question remained, as if a voice inside his head had been trained to ask it, parrot-like, and could not be made to stop.

He and Carla had collected a pile of pitchwood. As they had found each stick they had reclaimed it as a treasure discovered, until the thrill of a game had become part of their endeavor. He chose a stick heavily weighted with pitch and lighted the end of it in the fire. Then he walked off into the gloom where he and Carla had gone many times before. It was like following the inside of a great rock drum which was flat on one side—that where the water thundered and raced through the mountain.

When his torch burned short he returned for another. Carla had not moved in her sleep, and he buried himself in blackness again, following the rock so closely that his body touched it, trying at every step to pierce with his vision a little farther into the stygian pit over his head. It was into this pit that the smoke went, mounting in drifting spirals, like smoke in an Indian tope. Up there, he thought, it was taken by a slowly dragging current of air made by the suction of the stream, and descended to exit from the mountain with it. There was only one break in the circular wall of gruesome black and water-worn rock, against which, in ages past, a subterranean flood had washed and roared. This was where a small section of it had given way from overhead and had piled up in mass of broken stone which he had climbed, with Carla watching from below. Here the smoke from his torch did not go upward but settled about his head and disappeared toward the vent in the mountain while it's crisp...

A WAFFLE has only one perfect moment—when it has just been baked. And vegetables have only their few perfect moments... when they have just been picked. Afterwards they are good, yes; but never quite so sparkling, so crisp or sweet or tender, as when fresh from their growing.

Have scarlet tomatoes dangling in a garden of your own. And lima beans—that you needn't pick till the minute you need them. Have all the kinds of vegetables you like—have them the best vegetables—and have them fresh, by planting FERRY'S purebred Seeds. Just as fine dairy herds are bred for the blue ribbon class, so are FERRY'S Seeds bred for superior size, abundance, color, flavor. Having a good garden is easy with these. Find FERRY'S Seeds at the "store around the corner."

To know how and when to plant vegetables and flowers, consult FERRY'S Seed Annual. It even tells new ways to cook vegetables. Write for this—to D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit, Mich.

A bank cannot perform its full duty to the community unless it is in a position to loan money safely, where that money will do its full share in the development of the community. Of course, larger deposits, mean more loans and consequently greater profits for us, but if we can assist the community to prosper, why should we not prosper too, and our desire for larger deposits may be said to be equally divided between our ambition to make greater profits for our stockholders and our ambition to be of far greater usefulness to the section that supports us.

AUTOMOBILE NEWS

Genuine Art Theme Displaces Old Radiator Cap Ornaments.

Modern automotive art has relegated to the scrap-heap the time-worn figures of Mercury, the various goddesses of the race and chase, the eagles, swallows, geese and other birds in flight which formerly were considered an adornment for the radiator cap. Replacing the miscellaneous and often discordant single figures is a dignified, studied art treatment based on a central design or motif and followed out in appointments throughout the car. All details harmonize one with the other. There are no jarring notes.

A striking example of this new tendency of art in present-day motor cars is offered in the new Dodge Brothers Eight-in-line.

The motif in this car was borrowed from the field of architecture. It is based on the long straight lines and shadows which give the sinewy, slender appearance of beauty and strength to the modern skyscraper.

Appearing in the front bumper tie-piece, the master design of line and shadow decorates the tops of the headlamps, the center of the radiator shell, the cowl hump, the radiator cap, the sun visor and is even carried out in the laminated belt-moulding around the body of the car.

Beside, the same design is used in the instrument panel, door handles, remote controls, switch plate and assist cord escutcheons, dome and corner lights. The pattern, of course, is varied to suit the size and shape of different appointments, but basically it's the same in long line and shaded effect predominating. Not a haphazard, ill-advised attempt at meaningless ornamentation, it is a complete, co-ordinated art theme adhering to the key design with orderly continuity in every detail.

Art Moderne as applied in the motif for the new Dodge Eight is as new as today's newspaper and as old as a vase of the Ming dynasty. It is a rediscovery of the value of eliminating the non-essential.

New Low-Priced Graham Cars Enthusiastically Received.

One clear-cut indication of the increasingly healthy state of the automobile market is seen in the enthusiastic reception which is being accorded the recently announced low-priced Graham six models throughout the country, says F. R. Valpey, Graham general sales manager.

Telegrams from distributors and dealers who have the new models on display report a degree of public interest that has seldom been matched in their experience and sales in quantities which are sufficient to establish firmly the standing of the new Grammys in the very forefront of their price class.

Three primary factors are responsible for this remarkable manifestation of interest in the new Graham six models, says Mr. Valpey, in analyzing the situation.

"First, the new town and universal sedans meet fully the insistent public demand for higher standards of value, quality, and performance in the less than $1,000 division. Second, the public has learned to look to the three Graham brothers as the logical source for this increase in value, quality and performance; and third, in these new models, the quality features which have established the Graham reputation are for the first time available on cars listing for less than $1,000.

W. C. T. U. NOTES

The most striking and impressive incident of the wet and dry hearings before the house judiciary committee was undoubtedly the introduction of a letter written by former Chief Justice Wm. Howard Taft in November, 1928, to Dr. Irving Fisher.

Presented at the time when the whole country was mourning Judge Taft's death and extolling his great mind and many virtues, it should have great weight and give encouragement to the dries. Following is the letter dated November 21, 1928: "My dear Irving:—

"Thank you for sending me your new book. I shall read it with a great deal of pleasure.

"In the late campaign I found myself in a very awkward situation. I could not issue any publication during it, because of my being on the bench, and yet the New York World published my anti-prohibition letters written to Lincoln (a dry of New Haven) before the adoption of the amendment, and then nobody seemed to take the trouble to publish my speech at Yale given after the amendment was adopted.

"But the result is glorious and points the only way we have to work out the problem presented. The solution requires a great deal of time and patience. The habits of an important section of a congested part of the country cannot be changed over night or in years. The reform and the adaptation of society to that at which the amendment aims must be gradual. The temptation of corruption will drag it out.

"While looking ahead at the amendment I despair of any success. I really think that it is possible, if we keep at it, to achieve a satisfactory result. The persistence with which the people maintain in Congress a two-thirds majority in both houses gives me much hope, and I am inclined to think that this will wear down the moderate wets to a consciousness that the only solution is pressure in favor of enforcement.

"I see that wets claim that the election was not a prohibition victory. Well, one cannot argue with that view, and can only let those who believe it continue to believe it. As ever yours,

William H. Taft."

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SOCIETY

Sunday services 10:45 a. m. Subject, "Probation After Death." Wednesday evening at 7:45, first Wednesday of month only.

Reading room Tuesday and Saturday, 3:00 to 5:00 p. m. The public is cordially invited to all services.

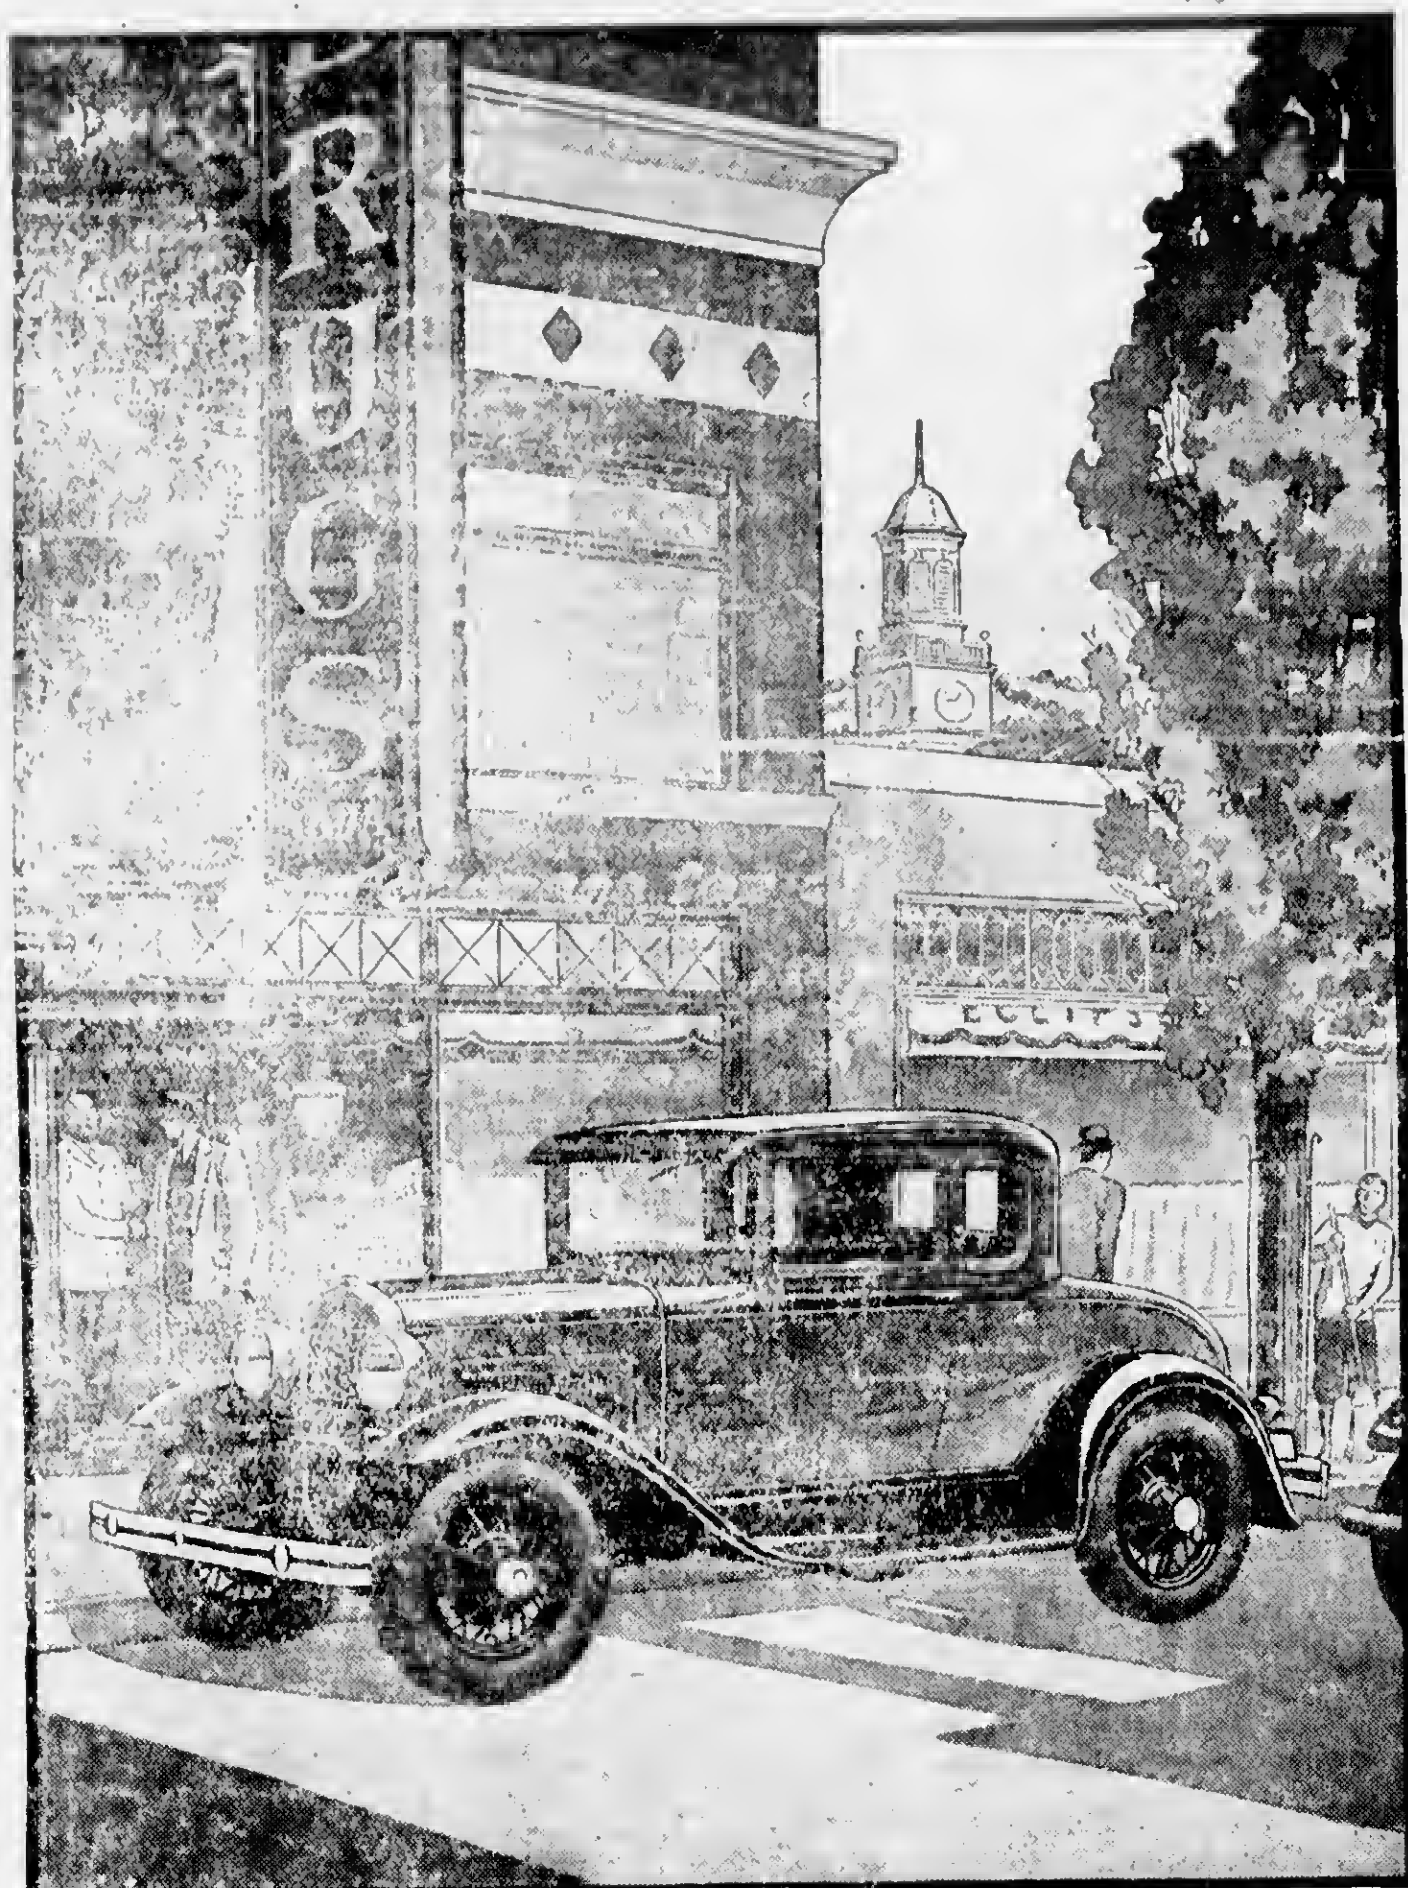

"Doctrine of Atonement" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Christian Science churches on Sunday, April 20.

Among the citation comprising the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him (James 1:5).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Faith if it be mere belief, is as a pendulum swinging between nothing and something, having no fixity. Faith, advanced to spiritual understanding, is the evidence gained from Spirit, which rebukes sin of every kind and establishes the claims of God" (p. 23).

In selecting a trouser pattern for a small boy, see that the back seam line is longer than the front, gradually slanting from the top to the crotch. A center front line should drop straight down and then curve out to the crotch as does an armseye line that leads to an underarm seam.

Beauty of line and mechanical excellence than this beauty of line and color is its alert and sprightly performance.

Craftsmanship has been put into mass production. Today, more than ever, the new Ford is "a value far above the price."

YOUTH LOST LIFE IN LAKE TRAGEDY

PAT MALLOY, AGE 21, DROWNED
LAST THURSDAY NIGHT.

Fell Into Lake From Tug Charles M.
Hytel Eight Miles Off Charlevoix Near Big Reef.

Pat Malloy, age 21 years, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Malloy of Marquette, former residents of Beaver Island, was drowned at about 8:30 last Thursday evening when he fell overboard off the steam tug Charles M. Hytel near Big Reef, eight miles off Charlevoix in Lake Michigan.

The tug was captained by Clyde Malloy, brother of Pat, and was enroute from South Haven following the winter fishing season, to White Fish Point in Lake Superior. It was the intention to put into Charlevoix harbor for the night, and, with darkness close at hand, Pat clung upon the pilot house to light the forward lights. To hold himself as the boat pitched heavily in the high seas, Malloy clung to the lamp support atop the pilot house, but as the tug gave an unusually heavy lurch, the support broke loose, throwing the unfortunate man into the water.

The tragedy was witnessed by the brother, wheeling in the pilot house and by another member of the crew. Because of the heavy seas it was necessary to turn the tug around in a wide circle. For several minutes those on the boat could hear the shouts of the struggling man, but owing to darkness, they could not locate him. A buoy was dropped after rescue attempts had failed, but when the boat returned to the scene Friday morning, it could not be found.

Grief stricken over the tragedy, Clyde Malloy brought the boat back to port Friday morning to meet his father, Hugh Malloy, and another brother, James, who had motored through from Marquette after receiving word of the mishap.

A Mr. Brown, owner of the tug, came Friday and Saturday took his boat to Lake Superior, where he had already gone to arrange accommodations for his crew during the summer fishing season. The father, Hugh Malloy, and two sons, Clyde and James, motored the same day to Marquette, where Mrs. Malloy was said to be prostrate with grief over the loss of her son. It is understood that the Malloys will return to Charlevoix waters within a short time with a boat of their own to make search for the body.

Besides his parents and two brothers mentioned, Pat Malloy is survived by two younger brothers at home. He was a cousin of Mrs. Alton Smith of this city and has a host of relatives on Beaver Island.

FINAL LECTURE NUM- BER TUESDAY EVENING

Dr. Bennett of Redpath Bureau Will Appear at Gymnasium.

Dr. Bennett, well known lecturer of the Red Path Lyceum Bureau, will appear at the local gymnasium next Tuesday evening, May 6th, in the final number of the lecture course series sponsored by the Charlevoix Parent-Teacher association.

Dr. Bennett comes to Charlevoix highly recommended as a speaker of ability, and townspeople are the losers if they miss this final number.

GET THE SPIRIT— DOLL UP YOUR HOME AND GROUNDS

The urge to clean up around city homes and city property seems to be growing upon the public and every day one notices worth while improvements over the entire city. Yards are being raked, shrubbery and trees being trimmed, old buildings torn down, repaired, and the paint brush is being worked over-time.

All should join the effort to make Charlevoix a better and sweeter place to live in, and join the "dolling-up" movement. Do not live selfishly within yourself, with no thoughts of progress, civic betterment or ambition. Environment shapes a lot of our destinies. If you feel and act like your property looks, go about town and spread the gloom you contribute through your lack of public spirit. It all helps to offset all that our booster clubs can do for the public good.

Get the spirit and doll up the home and surroundings and just observe how contagious it is, and how much roister the world begins to look there after.

SHAKESPEARE CLUB HELD ANNUAL MEET

New Officers Take Over Work; Plan for Federation Gathering.

The Shakespeare Study club held their annual business meeting at the home of Mrs. E. L. Dawson on State street Monday afternoon.

The first part of the year, as usual, was given to the study of Shakespearean work. Other meetings included a review of orchestration, a conservation meeting, and the last half to the Mediterranean Cruise. As a fitting close, a request letter from Raymond Faulkner, who is visiting and studying in Italy, was heard. Views to illustrate were available and the feature made an unusually fine ending of the year's work.

Committees were assigned Monday afternoon and plans fully discussed relative to the annual northwestern district convention of the Michigan State Federation of Women's clubs to be held here May 28 and 29. More details concerning the convention will be available later.

At the close of the session the new officers took over the work for the coming club year. The officers are: Mrs. Lisle Shanahan, pres.; Mrs. Marguerite Swinton, vice-president; Mrs. O. P. North, sec.-treas.

EIGHT PRECINCTS SHOW BIG SLUMP

POPULATION DECREASE IN CO.
NEAR TWO THOUSAND MARK.

Boyer City Tops List So Far With Drop of 1,229 in Three Wards
Reported by Supervisor.

Reports from Fred N. Potter of Alpena, supervisor of census from this district, giving figures on four additional precincts in Charlevoix county, show that the population has decreased to an alarming extent in the past 10 years.

The preliminary count for the third ward of the city of Boyer City shows that population has decreased from 1,497 in 1920 to 1,005 for the present census, a drop of 492. In the same period, Wilson township has slipped from 601 to 468, a decrease of 133. Eight farms were enumerated in Boyer City third ward and 112 in Wilson township.

South Arm township, excluding the city of East Jordan, showed a population of 602 for the present census, compared with 744 in 1920. The decrease is 142. Hudson township's population in 1920 was 209 as compared with 111 for 1930, a drop of 98. In the former, 116 farms were listed and in the latter 24.

Preliminary reports have been made for eight precincts in Charlevoix county up to the present time, showing in all a total decrease in population of 1,837. Precincts reported are the first, second and third wards of Boyer City, Eveline, Hayes, Hudson and Wilson townships. In Boyer City alone, the decrease has hit the high mark of 1,229, with still another ward to be heard from. It is not at all presumptuous to predict a similar trend from East Jordan and other eastern townships.

Charlevoixans are wondering what the results will be within this city. It is probable, however, that the decrease will be light, if any at all. It seems to be the general belief that this city has held its own over the past ten years following a slump in industries prior to 1929.

A later census report received yesterday from Fred N. Potter of Alpena, gives figures on the three wards of the city of East Jordan, showing a total decrease since 1920 of 914. The population as of the present census is 1,514, compared with 2,428 ten years ago. With the figures, 11 wards in the county reported so far show a total decrease of 2,751.

lar Speaker, Coming—All-day Session Planned.

The shout and laughter of older boys of Northern Michigan will ring merrily in the streets of Charlevoix on Saturday, May 3, the occasion which will draw them from every village and city of Northern Michigan being the annual Older Boys' conference, being staged for the first time under the auspices of the District Y. M. C. A. council.

While the session is only a one-day affair, it is exciting a lot more interest and enthusiasm than was first anticipated. One of the reasons is the coming of A. J. "Dad" Elliott, noted Chicago leader, who is secretary of the national council of the organization. Dad was a famous Northwestern football star in his college days and remains just as much a youth's hero as in the days of his gridiron achievements.

Then, too, there is E. A. Byrum, Michigan state Y. M. C. A. leader, and Ray Johns, another from the same field. Walter Gossill, regional director, and Walter MacMillan, Petoskey youth's leader, under whose supervision the conferences were started some years ago. The boys will represent the ages of 15 to 20 years.

The program opens with registration at the Methodist church with the first general session there at 10 a. m. Dad Elliott will be the main speaker, but group singing and discussion will have their place on the program. After dinner at the church the afternoon meeting will be at the high school. The banquet will be at the church at 6:30, with Dad Elliott speaking again in the evening.

At this meeting mention will also be made of the annual state high school camp conference at Hayo-Went-Ha camp August 22 to 31. Officers for this August state conference are: Merton Carter, Petoskey, president; Norvett Gadke, Manistee, vice-president; M. Kessler, Grayling, secretary-treasurer.

Members of the Charlevoix Air club are serving on the various local committees in charge of the conference Saturday. They have charge of entertainment features and are putting forth every possible effort to make the stay of visiting delegates a pleasant one.

An urgent request is made by local committees to business men of the city and to those interested in the Y. M. C. A. movement, to attend as many of the sessions as possible, and especially the evening banquet and program at the Methodist church. Cooperation will spell success in the long run for the project if everyone puts their shoulder behind the wheel.

CHURCH OF GOD.

Sunday school at 10:00 and preaching service at 11:00 Sunday morning. The revival is now in progress with Rev. A. Q. Birdwell of Michigan City, Ind., as evangelist. He uses several hand-painted charts. It helps in explaining the Revelation and prophecies, making very simple and strong the truths of the Bible. Everyone is invited to come and hear him. Services every evening at 7:30.

SPECIAL SESSION OF COURT TUESDAY

SEVERAL CRIMINAL CASES DIS-POSED OF DURING DAY.

Mackinaw City Bootlegger Must Pay
Fine and Costs or Go to Jackson Prison.

Criminal cases accumulated since the last court term were cleaned up at a special session held before Judge Parm C. Gilbert of Traverse City on Tuesday.

James Plaunt of Mackinaw City, who was arrested April 12th by state police at Boyne City for violation of the liquor law, pleaded guilty when arraigned. He was later sentenced to pay a fine of $300 and costs in a like amount within one week, and in default must serve from six months to one year at Jackson prison. The court's recommendation was eight months. In case Plaunt makes arrangements to pay fine and costs, he must furnish a cash peace bond in the amount of $500.

Clarence Lucas, also known as Clarence Chamberlain, who was brought from Pocatello, Idaho, last week by Sheriff Dave Vaughan and Deputy Charles Marshall on a warrant charging him with breaking and entering, was placed on probation in the custody of Clifford Peters. According to information gathered through an investigation conducted by local officers, Lucas had a good record prior to his association with Charles Webber, who was sentenced recently in court here to serve from 15 to 30 years on a statutory charge. He readily admitted breaking into four cottages with Webber, two on the Belvedere, one on Michigan avenue and another near The Inn, but officers and friends who interceded in his behalf, believe he would have gone straight had it not been for the influence of Webber, who is known as a "bad egg." If, by keeping Lucas out of prison, officers can save him from becoming a criminal, they have accomplished more than punishment would.

Guy John, Alvin John and Isaac Denemy, apprehended Saturday night when they broke into Slezak's shoe store, pleaded not guilty to a charge of breaking and entering with intent to commit a felony, when arraigned. Prior to appearing court, they had signed a written confession of guilt. Guy John, a first offender, was bound over to circuit court under $2,000. Bond for the other two was placed at the same figure, but Prosecuting Attorney Rollie L. Lewis stated Tuesday that they would be returned to Ionia state reformatory for breaking parole. The youths were formerly sentenced to serve from 1 to 15 years for stealing automobiles, and had served 13 months of the term before paroled.

Tuesday's court session cleaned up practically all out-standing criminal cases and is typical of the conduct of court under the present officers. The process eliminates jury expense and saves the taxpayers a lot of money. The officers should be commended.

ADDRESSED FARMERS' MEETING LAST SATURDAY

County Agent Mellencamp of Boyne City, accompanied by J. J. Bird, specialist from Michigan State college, East Lansing, addressed a gathering at the local court house Saturday afternoon on topics pertaining to the successful growing of certified and table stock potatoes.

LIFE-LONG RESIDENT DIED LAST WEDNESDAY

Funeral of Charles Ulrich Held Here
Friday Morning.

Charlevoix lost a life-long resident last Wednesday morning by the death of Charles Ulrich, age 46 years, which occurred in Wyandotte at the home of his sister, Mrs. Floyd Bettles, where he had been spending the winter.

Deceased was born at Charlevoix in 1884. He spent his entire life time here, with the exception of occasional winters in late years. He attended the local schools and later worked with various business places. He had a wide acquaintance with Charlevoix's many summer visitors as well as a large following of friends among local residents.

Mr. Ulrich is survived by one sister, Mrs. Floyd Bettles. His parents and four others of their children passed away before him.

The body was brought to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Heise of Antrim street on Thursday and funeral services were conducted Friday forenoon from the Methodist church, with Rev. J. E. Lockyer officiating. Burial was at Brookside.

Mr. Ulrich will be greatly missed by Charlevoix residents.

PROCLAMATION FOR ARBOR DAY

GREEN ISSUES ANNUAL RE-QUEST TO PLANT TREES.

Sets Period of May 4 to 10 As Michigan Forest Week — May 9 Is Arbor Day.

Governor Green has issued the following Arbor Day proclamation:

"Michigan leads all states in the matter of reforestation. In 1930 the state will plant more trees in the state forests than ever before. In 26 years 71,457 acres have been planted to white, Norway and jack pine and before the close of the year this activity will have embraced 110,000 acres.

"This as a striking illustration of the manner in which the reforestation project has been growing made possible by greatly improved forest fire control. It is being proved that the state is capable of growing again the pine forests that were of so much value in laying Michigan's financial foundation.

"Annually Arbor Day has served as a means of stimulating interest in tree planting. This program should be carried on with the view of not only restocking our cut-over areas, but also to furnish sanctuaries for bird life, the preservation of which must come in a large measure through instilling in the minds of school children love of nature and knowledge of her benefactions. Over a period of many years appropriate methods of observing the day have taught the children and their elders this real need for expansion of all forestry projects whether it be the planting of a single tree by the roadside or in the development of extensive areas. It is highly desirable that this work shall continue.

"The period of May 4 to 10 has been designated as Michigan forest week. Accordingly, Friday, May 9, is hereby designated as Arbor Day and fitting state-wide observation is urged of the day and week."

ANNOUNCE MASS MEETING MAY 7

MERCHANT MINUTE MEN BRING IN OUTSIDE SPEAKER.

W. H. Caslow, Grand Rapids, Will Address Business Interest and Meeting Open to the Public.

The citizenry and business interests of Charlevoix are invited to a mass meeting sponsored by the local Merchant Minute Men's organization at the school gymnasium the evening of Wednesday, May 7th, at 8 o'clock standard time.

W. H. Caslow, the "Main Street Crusader" of station W-A-S-II, Grand Rapids, is listed as the speaker. Mr. Caslow presents facts as they exist and the public is bound to get some good, sound advice from his talk. The meeting is free and everyone is urged to come. The school band will furnish music during the evening.

A dinner-meeting for business and professional men is being arranged for 6 o'clock Wednesday evening prior to the mass meeting; place to be announced later. Mr. Caslow has a special message for this gathering and all are urged to attend.

The efforts of this organization of business interests, known as the Merchant Minute Men, are very commendable. They are fighting to make Charlevoix a better city. They are trying to cement business interests into a closer relationship and at the same time convey to the public the necessity and need of home buying.

From an outsider's viewpoint, it can readily be seen that they have a tough job on their hands. So far, the organization has failed to get 100 per cent backing among the merchants. Those who would want to reap the benefits resulting from the efforts of the workers are not behind the cause. Frankly speaking, Charlevoix merchants as a whole, not just a few, "Must practice what they preach" before they can ever expect to swing public sentiment in favor of the cause of home buying. They can never get the whole-hearted support of the entire city as long as they do the very things they are asking others not to do.

The Courier does not make these statements to "throw a wrench" in the work, so to speak. We are wholeheartedly in favor of the Merchant Minute Men and will bend every effort to help their cause. But why try to dodge the truth? The sooner every business interest gets behind the movement, the quicker results will be had. It cannot be accomplished by halves.

RELIEF FROM CURSE OF CONSTIPATION

A Battle Creek physician says, "Constipation is responsible for more misery than any other cause."

But immediate relief has been found. A tablet called Rexall Orderlies has been discovered. This tablet attracts water from the system into the lazy, dry, evacuating bowel called the colon. The water loosens the dry food waste and causes a gentle, thorough, natural movement without forming a habit or ever increasing the dose.

Stop suffering from constipation. Chew a Rexall Orderlie at night. Next day bright. Get 24 for 25c today at the Central Drug Store, the Rexall store.

The Murray school, with their teacher, Miss McCalmon, attended the program at the Bay Shore school Tuesday morning and enjoyed it very much.

INSIDE INFORMATION.

Natural material for bird homes are not so abundant as formerly, and substitutes will be welcomed by the feathered tenants. Many birds will make use of rags, ravelings and twine if these are cut into small pieces. Excelsior, straw, hay, cotton, hair (such as is used in plastering), and feathers are welcome. An ordinary wire broiler is excellent for holding the nest-making materials. Robins, phoebes and swallows are eager to get thoroughly wet clay for nest building.

In Case of Tornado.

If a tornado is threatening, the best thing to do is to move as rapidly as possible at right angles to the direction in which the storm appears to be moving, says the Weather Bureau of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. In an automobile it is easy to run away from the storm, as its velocity of travel usually is only 25 to 30 miles per hour. Often the approach of the storm may be noticed at some distance. Refuge to the north of the tornado's track is usually safer than at the same distance to the south. If quick escape is impossible get into a tornado cellar, or into the cellar of a frame house. The safest spot in the cellar is usually close to the wall on the side from which the storm is approaching. This is most frequently the southwest corner. If there is no protection below ground level, pick out some depressed location and lie flat, face down, holding to anything handy. Tornadoes are most likely to occur in May and June, say the Weather Bureau.

CHAPTER XI

Paul knew he must keep moving, or rouse Carla from her sleep. The unkindness and desolation of loneliness were turning him into a coward. Not a coward who was afraid of death, but one who felt increasing horror in passively waiting for it. He went to the debris of rock again. He had no reason for this, no thought, except that it offered him the one chance to do something physical besides fumbling his way over unstable and stiff sand. The desire for a work to do was in him as well as his brain, and he began to climb the broken mounds, as he had done once before. He had gone about thirty or forty feet above the floor of their dungeon then, but this time he found footholds which carried him a little farther, until, from the point he reached, he could look over the bulge in the rock which had previously concealed their fire, and could clearly see Carla in the glow of it.

He had the desire to call to her, to feel her glorious life a part of their existence again. Sleeping, she seemed gone from him. The swing his torch, making a writhing of life in the blackness, and his lips almost cried her name. Then he recognized the weakness of his net and began to pull himself a little more up the broken wall.

If Carla had awakened and turned her eyes toward him, she would have seen a strange and weird thing. The burning piece of pitchwood was a spout of yellow flame, illuminating at times the ghostly figure that bore it, and then floating alone in a limbo of midnight emptiness as if borne by shades that in color and spirit were a part of the gloom. She might have thought, rousing herself from slumber, that hands which were no longer Paul's were bearing it toward the roof of their world. Steadily up into this pit of Acheron it went, and there it disappeared, as if smitten by a mighty breath that extinguished it in a second. For a time utter darkness lay where the light had been. Then the torch reappeared as suddenly as a solid wings had engulfed it, and in another moment it was plunging down through space. In a few minutes Paul came where it had fallen, sputtering in the sand, and picked it up again. More than ever his face was like that of a ghost. His cheek was marked by a bleeding wound. His shirt was in shreds on his breast. His eyes blazed in a way that would have startled Carla.

He went to the edge of the water and bathed his face and hands. Then he returned to the fire and knelt beside Carla. He raised her head gently in his arms, and she did not awaken. He held it against his breast and kissed her hair.

"Carla!" he whispered. Her lips moved, her lashes trembled, and opened slowly to unveil her eyes. "You have slept a long time," he said. "At least—it seemed long—and I took a torch and climbed the pile of rocks again. I went higher than before—so high that I came to a ledge, and followed it—and then I came to a great crack in the wall, and there, at the end of it—I saw—light."

"Light?" she breathed.

"Yes, light. From the sun. I have found a way out."

There was silence then. Almost without effort, it seemed to Paul, Carla crept out of his arms. He knew that something was going with her—forever. Her face was whiter than his own. What he had dreaded to see lay in her eyes—a thing fighting back and crushing the glory which had lived in them for a little while. The understanding of what his discovery meant came quickly to her, and he saw a fabric of assembled dreams going to pieces, like one of the odd jumble pictures on a screen. When its hundred disintegrated parts came together again, they formed Claire's face, waiting for him at the end of the trail of light sent to guide them back to an earthly destiny still unfulfilled, and which, for a time, had passed centuries away from them.

Carla rose to her feet and gazed past him into darkness, and so strangely did her eyes dwell on empty space that Paul could only look at her and wait for her to speak.

"A way out," she said, after a little, as though to some one she was seeing beyond their circle of light. "God coming to us like this, taking us back to freedom and—life. And this little world—ours—gone?"

Paul knew the thing he wanted to say would come in a moment, the thing he had made up his mind to say to her when he came down from the rocks. It was a fury of emotion, rolling up slowly through his twilight of staidness into a storm of speech—a passion of desire breaking loose, a bitterness against life as it had been given him to live, a determination to turn it his own way at last.

Before she could move his arms were about her.

"I have lived a hell in this place," he cried. "Not because I was afraid to die, but because in dying I knew I would lose you. Only in life can I have you, and I want life because of that. You say it is God showing us a way out! It is just as true that God gave you to me here. That world up there means nothing to me—except with you in it. It, too, has been a hell for me. Now I'm going to make it a heaven. I won't let man-made law and convention stand in the way of what is right and intended to be. You are mine, and I shall have you and keep you, one way or the other. We'll face the world together, and tell it so—or we'll go out there and never let it know we live. It is for you to say which it shall be."

Steadily her hands had pressed against him, and with that pressure came such a change in her face that the fierceness of Paul's arms relaxed, and he saw an idol crumpled and broken in her eyes. To the level of that ruin he had sunk his own ideal of Carla. He let her move away from him, and stood with a grim, set face before her.

"I'm sorry," he said. "I know you are thinking that I am vile and unclean."

"Not that," she spoke quickly. "I would rather think I am the one who is unclean."

That was all she said, and he made no effort to answer her. Words became futile, even impossible, as she looked at him. What he might have said, his pleading, the arguments he had built for himself, and for her, crumbled under the tragedy which had come like a sickness into her white, beautiful face—a tragedy that was filled with appeal, with pain, and for a moment or two with an utter loneliness, as if she had lost something which could never come back to her. He had seen the same look in her eyes the night her mother died. Then it had filled him with a great pity. Now its tenderness, its yearning for a thing gone, shook him to the foundation of his soul. He saw Carla as he had always known she would be when it came to her love for a man. Only a love that had no fear of ugliness upon it would she take to her breast and hold there. The memory of love, its burned-out ash, a love that was crippled and blind but clean, she would cherish with the sacred faithfulness of an altar flame. But not such a love as he had offered her—a theft, though it could be made a legal theft, from another woman. Even as he felt this crushing sense of his loss of her, another emotion, a freeing of his spirit, a rejoicing with his grief, entered into him. Carla, as she stood before him, he could worship through all eternity. The Carla he had asked for, yielding to him, would have descended out of heaven to the level of his own debasement. Clearly as she had seen his passion and felt the crush of his arms, Carla now saw this change in him, and slowly, believing joyously, a miracle wrought itself in her face, and all that Paul had seen broken down built itself up again.

Softness came into her mouth, and she smiled at him.

"Shall we go, Paul?"

He bowed his head, then picked up the coat which had been her pillow and shook the sand from it.

"Yes. The cliff in the rock faces west, and I think the sun was setting when I found it. If we can get out before dark and make a racket, some one may be near enough to hear us."

He lighted a torch, and they walked across the sand together. At the pile of rocks he took her hand, helping and guiding her, until they came to the beginning of the ledge from where he had come down in her sleeping form beside the fire. He told her about it as they paused for a moment's rest.

Carla looked at the fire in the pit of gloom below them. It was dying out. The yellow pool of light was narrowing and growing dimmer.

A sob came in her throat. "We won't need—ever—to forget," she said.

"No, never."

"Especially—the little fire."

"And you—sleeping beside it," added Paul.

They continued upward. The fire was shut out. The ledge widened and turned, so they were going through a tunnel in the rock, where water had once made its way to underground depths. They had gone only a short distance when Paul stopped and smothered his torch in the sand until its flame was extinguished. After that they saw a pale reflection of light ahead of them. When they reached it they could look up through a long, narrow fissure that sloped steeply, with rays at the top of it. It was a two or three hundred-yard climb, littered with broken rock, which had choked the ascent in places. A mass close to them had freshly fallen.

"I spoiled my shirt on that," said Paul. "I loosened the stuff and came down with it. I hope there isn't another place like it farther up."

Paul was breathing deeply from his exertions, and Carla was fighting for breath. He could see where the sharp edges of the stones had rubbed the hands which she was holding at her breast. Her skirt was torn, and through a rent in her sleeve the whiteness of her arm revealed itself. Her face was streaked with rock dust, and hollows which he had not noticed clearly before were in her cheeks and under her eyes. Over them was a broader light of day. He could have flung a stone up to the level of the earth, and beyond that was a sky of vivid blue, still touched by the glow of a declining sun. It was this light, descending in a pool upon them, which made him see another Carla. The mellow illumination of the pitch pine, the velvety softening of shadows, the pale unreality of first daylight had concealed things from him. Now they

...EAT IT NOW

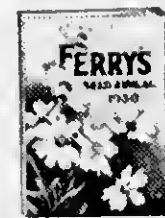

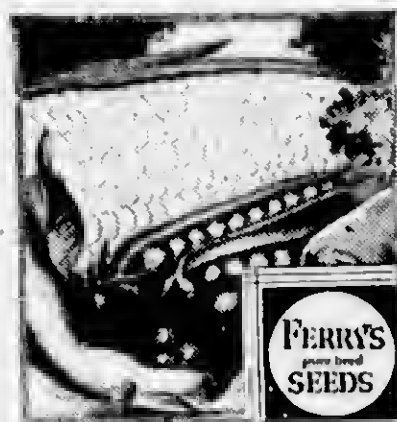

THE TIME to eat a popover is when it has just popped over. When it has reached its climax, and is puffed and crisp. Listen to it crackle when you break it apart for butter.

And the time to eat vegetables is when they've just been picked. They will never be so fresh again. The peas will never be so firm, knuckled tight in their pods... nor the corn so glistening and sweet under its silk. Shell the peas, husk the corn, hustle them into the pot. Have all your vegetables at their climax moment—with a garden of your own.

Ferry's purebred Seeds are eager to burst into growing; and are fresh at the "store around the corner." They are purebred—all their name says they are. Their parent-plants and grandparents before them produced vegetables and flowers that approached perfection. What their parents were, these seeds will become. Use Ferry's Seed Annual to help you in selecting; and to know of much paper, and new ways to cook vegetables. For the Annual, write to D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit, Michigan.

P. S.—A GARDENER HAS NO SECOND CHANCE. PLANT THE BEST.

Ferry's Golden Wax Beans shown in this Annual are so good you will want them for every dinner. How can they help bring bread, yellow and tender? They are purebred.

GRAHAM

After Three Years of Preparation Now Gives an Impressive Object Lesson in Greater Value-Giving

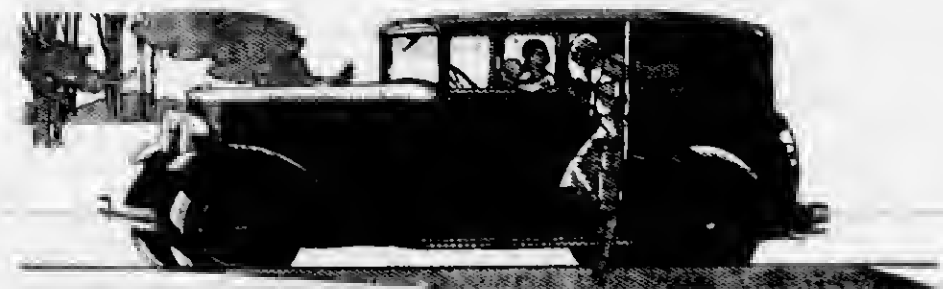

THERE could be no better time than this to give practical proof that by strict adherence to quality standards in massed manufacturing, motor cars can rise above commonplace quality and still be held down in price.

The way has been well paved for this exhibition of greater value-giving which the Graham brothers are now able to present, by nearly three years spent in perfecting their plant processes and by the manufacturing volume awarded by more than 160,000 owners.

Those valuable years, were preceded by more than 20 years in which they have tried earnestly to hold fast to the conviction that quality is the best policy in quantity production as in everything else.

In those progressive years the Grams have learned much of incalculable value. They owe all they have to their public and they pass on now, at a moment when they believe it will be most appreciated, the fruits of their experience, in a line of cars so obviously superior in value that they advertise themselves—at prices so strikingly attractive that they represent impressive object lessons in greater value-giving.

EVERY GRAHAM CAR IS COMPLETELY EQUIPPED WITH SHATTER-PROOF SAFETY PLATE GLASS

The Graham Standard Six Town Sedan—This beautiful car has 115-inch wheelbase, full five-passenger capacity, four wide doors, sturdy Graham-built body, with increased width and many exclusive features to insure long life. Because of a fear that their motives might possibly be mistaken, many of the veterans of the world war hesitate to make their wishes regarding the cashing of the adjusted service certificates known. Most of the boys, especially those who are well and able to care for themselves, feel that if the government will take care of those who are not able to help themselves, that sufficient burden will be placed on the government.

But, considering the economic conditions all over the country, many of the boys could use the money which will be paid them not later than 1945 at the present time.

The payment of these certificates at the present might be a good thing for the country as a whole because probably 75 per cent of it would immediately be placed in circulation and would have a general tendency to aid business and conditions in general.

The idea is sound and possibly some of the solons might do worse than try and grant the wishes of the boys in this matter.

GLEE CLUB ENTERTAINMENT MAY 23RD

Will Present "The Bell of Barcelona" With Cast of 70.

The crowning event of the school year is to take place May 23 at the high school gymnasium. "The Belle of Barcelona," an operetta put on by the local high school glee clubs, is sponsored by Mrs. McKee.

The cast has been well chosen and is ably assisted by about 70 chorus voices. The plot will hold the interest throughout the evening, being interspersed by witty bits of humor and catchy songs.

Everyone should save May 23 for this important event, and come out and see what a year's training in music can do for our high school young people.

There will be a dance at Ironton Grange hall Friday evening, May 2nd. Good time for everybody. —Adv. 181.

"Probation After Death" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Christian Science churches on Sunday, April 27.

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Wherefore he saith, Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light" (Eph. 5:14).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "The dream of death must be mastered by Mind here or hereafter. Thought will awaken from its own material declaration, 'I am dead,' to catch this trumpet-word of Truth. There is no death, no inaction, no cessation, no overaction, no reaction." (p. 427).

MRS. JOHN WELLS CLAIMED BY DEATH

End Came After Illness of Seven Weeks at Daughter's Home.

Mrs. John Wells, a resident of Charlevoix and Norwood township for over 50 years, died at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon at the home of her daughter, Mrs. George Clarke of South Bridge street, where she had been confined by illness for the past seven weeks.

Hannah Evans was born in Ohio, February 27, 1849, and spent her girlhood days in her native state. On May 2nd, 1901, she was married to John Wells of Norwood township, and since that time had resided on their farm opposite the Hilton school house on U. S. 31.

Surviving besides the husband are three children by a former marriage, viz: Mrs. George Clarke of Charlevoix; two sons, Oland and Jess Tenney, both of Saginaw; an adopted son, Wilbur Wells of Grand Rapids; one sister, Mrs. Marian Bence of Saginaw; 14 grandchildren and 15 great-grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the Clarke home on South Bridge street, with Rev. W. H. Rauch of the Baptist church officiating. Interment will be at Brookside cemetery.

During her many years residence in Charlevoix and Norwood township, Mrs. Wells enjoyed the esteem of a large group of friends by whom she will be sadly missed.

OVER ONE MILLION TOURISTS EXPECTED

Mich. Preparing To Entertain Motorists' Parade Of Coming Season.

Michigan, with its fresh water seas, sand dunes, resorts and countless beauty spots, this year will be host to more motoring pilgrims than ever before.

It is estimated that upwards of 1,000,000 out-of-state motoring vacationists, riding in approximately 300,000 automobiles, will roll into and through the Wolverine State during the coming spring and summer touring season.

This vast army of gasoline nomads is expected to expend with state merchants and resorts approximately $7,500,000.

These estimates, representing an increase of about ten per cent over the touring volume and expenditures of last year, are based on detailed data gathered during the winter from Michigan hotels, tourist camps, gasoline filling stations, garages, resorts, and other places of summer diversion, and on a careful analysis of the 1930 touring outlook.

That motordom's Big Parade down the open road in Michigan this year will be the largest ever now appears certain.

Celebrating the completion and occupancy of its new printing and publishing plant, the Emmet County Graphic of Harbor Springs appeared last week with a special edition of 28 pages and carrying a volume of news and advertising reflecting much credit on the aggressiveness of the publisher and his staff.

Elmer J. Hanna, editor and publisher of the paper, came to Harbor Springs in 1919 following his discharge from army service and purchased the Harbor Springs Republican, the name later being changed to the Emmet County Graphic after the Levering local was absorbed. Since the suspension of the Pellston Journal and Petoskey Independent, the Graphic has been the county's only weekly newspaper.

Keep Faith With Those Who Trust You!

What is the thing that makes a merchant sell you goods without the cash in his hand—the doctor comes in response to your urgent call without a word of pay—the tradesman does your work without immediate payment?

It is Faith--Faith in your desire to pay for goods bought or services rendered—Faith in your ability to pay when you promise.

Without Faith, the world would still be in the darkness of centuries ago. Without it, the commerce of today would be cut to one-thousandth of its present volume.

Your merchants and professional men trust you according to your past record on paying bills promptly. That trust will be continued so long as you continue to respect the confidence that is placed in you.

If you owe someone, do your best to pay on time. If some unforeseen circumstance arise to prevent prompt payment of a bill, be frank with your merchant or professional man. You'll find him human, sympathetic and willing to be a real friend to you.

Above all, never ignore bill or statements sent you. Pay them or have understandings about them. Your credit reputation is too important to be negligent of your obligations.

Keep Faith with those who trust you!

THE WILLING TAXPAYER

Many fears are being shed, and loud lamentations heard, over the plight of the real estate owner who is being forced to hear an ever increasing tax burden. The man who owns real estate says, and perhaps justly so in some ways, that discrimination is being shown against owners of real estate in favor of those having others forms of property.

But the most deuce of all taxpayers is the automobile owner. He puts up his money cheerfully and there are no delinquents. He pays according to weight and horsepower for the privilege of owning a car, and then pays an additional tax for every mile that he uses it.

The weight and horsepower tax is paid without the value of the car being taken into consideration. A car may depreciate from season to season until it is scarcely more than a pile of junk, yet that makes no difference in the eyes of the tax collector.

Owners of automobiles during 1930 will pay into the state treasury $16,000,000 more than the state will realize from a tax on real estate. Of course the real estate owner is entitled to sympathy, and as much relief as possible from the burden of taxation, but he is far from being alone in his troubles.

START AT HOME

Candidates for state offices are beginning to appear, and with their appearance we hear the same old ban-combo about reducing taxes. We first heard it when the state refused coonskins and demanded cash for clear tax titles.

If we expect to secure any measure of tax reduction we must cease regarding it as entirely a state issue and attach to townships, county and local elections the importance we should.

It is at home where a government presides, it is there that the problem of taxation. That is because nearly 80 per cent of our taxes are paid, raised and expended for local and county purposes. The best way for the public to get its share of relief is to vote wisely in the local elections and to vote for the men and women who will reduce the tax burden.

It is in this type of government that the citizen has some influence. If he wishes to help to squander public money he may do so. If he wishes to save he may help to support an economical efficient government at home.

Don't let the candidate for state office cause you to overlook local governmental affairs—that is where the greater part of your tax dollar is spent.

WEEDS ON THE GRAVE

Nothing is much more convincing of the transient nature of respect and reverence than a weed-grown rural cemetery where the graves have been permitted to revert pretty much to nature and the headstones lean away. It is not a pretty sight, either physically or as an indication of human physiology. Some of us could learn a great deal from the Chinese in our respect for those who have gone before us, extreme as the Chinese viewpoint may be.

Nearly thirty years ago the state of Michigan acted in the hope of reducing the number of neglected and ill-mannered graves in the state, at least for the future. It empowered county treasurers to receive sums of money paid into their hands for the perpetual care of cemetery lots. The treasurers in turn pay the income annually to various local cemetery associations for proper tending of the graves. Of course in a city like Grand Rapids, owning its cemeteries, the perpetual care fund is handled directly by the treasurer. But rural and village residents, who might not land their money with so much confidence to a private association, can be assured of perpetuity by turning it over to the county. Nothing that happens to them individually will then prevent the tending of the graves; and the cost to the family or estate may range as low as $100 or less a lot.

To date Kent county's accumulated fund under the state law is only about $2,000, while Ionia county has $14,000 so invested in the appearance of its cemeteries. Rural and small town residents could well make a wider use of this county service, assuring perpetual care of thousands of graves and indicating to future passersby that the love and affection shown at the funeral were not passing or artificial sentiments.—Grand Rapids Press.

TIME IS REQUIRED

The trouble with most people and most business enterprises is that they wish to grow too fast.

This growing process is one that requires time. That is true in nature. In the human body there must be a sound development of bone, tissue, blood and brain—or else there is deformity. When a tree grows it must expand its branches, trunk and roots in some relative proportions or the winds and the storms beat down in a night the growth of many years.

So it is with human enterprises of all kinds. Those who aspire to become great students, learned men and women, cannot achieve their ideals in this respect in a few years at school or college. The process demands time. Those who would become hardy and strong physically must exercise, eat and sleep properly for years. Those who build fortunes in the world of business first lay a foundation of ability, experience and industry and build soundly upon a good start.

Some people of unusual ability make rapid progress. Some business enterprises, especially in new fields, grow with great rapidity. But the most successful individuals and companies are those with a background of struggle, hardships and constant growth. Build upon a good foundation. Do not be in too much of a hurry. Grand Rapids (Minneapolis) Herald-Review.

PATIENT IS GETTING BETTER

The invalid after a severe sickness is beginning to feel better. He's had a little solid food and has been sitting up in bed. One day the doctor tells him he can get up on the morrow. He looks forward eagerly to taking up life where he left it. But tomorrow comes and he finds that his legs are wobbly, his head isn't clear. Discouraged, he crawls back into bed for awhile. He's much better but he doesn't know it.

Business has been going through somewhat that experience. Encouraging bedside friends had told it how well it looked, but when it tried to stir about it was not quite so strong as it thought. And that, perhaps, is what the business psychologists had in mind when they talked of the "secondary depression" of late February.

Now Dr. Hoover, who has been in consultation, says the patient is improving and makes his diagnosis definite: "The worst effects of the crash upon employment will have been passed during the next 60 days."

Sixty days from March 7, when the statement was given, is May 6. From Nati'l Business.

COMMISSION IS LAGGARD

The Federal Radio Commission seems to have paid no more attention to the request of the state authorities for a short wave length for the use of state police and other law enforcement bodies than they would to the average application of some company who wished a wave length for ordinary advertising purposes. For this reason Governor Green has lost patience and indicates that he may take steps which would practically put him in defiance of the law. This is not quite as it should be, no matter how urgent he may consider the need of the wave length. The application is primarily made for the purpose of aiding in upholding the law and it does not seem quite proper to violate for be in defiance of another law in order to get it passed. However we are certain that the commission which seems, to say the least, to be very apathetic in the matter of granting the application, could facilitate matter by realizing the urgent need of the permit and granting it with no further loss of time, and thus put themselves on record as being for law enforcement and relieving the Governor from further need of acting in the matter.

SPRING FEVER

Spring fever is not difficult to diagnose. One doesn't have to be a physician in order to do so. The convalescence followed by the disease in different individuals is involved and often baffling. There is the man who shows all the earmarks of sleeping sickness—he is greatly to be pitied. Just imagine sleeping through the excitement, the invigoration of springtime. Then there is the lover who concentrates all his attention, all his thoughts even, upon his adored. He is often envied, but after all, think what he misses—the first robin, the fragrance, the sunrises and sunsets. He is not to be pitied too much, however, for will he not, come next spring, be able to enjoy the manifold

GARDENS ENHANCE BEAUTIES OF CITY

CHARLEVOIX FAMOUS FOR APPEARANCE OF ITS HOMES.

There is Still Room for More Beautiful Gardens—"Plant This Spring and Save a Year."

If you have been dreaming of the wonderful things you would do in the spring with trees and shrubs and vines and flowers, it is high time to get busy. If you haven't prepared a definite plan of procedure, don't wait another minute. The folks who can help you in making a plan or selecting plants to use, are going to be pulling through a swamp of rush activity pretty soon, for it's a short season and there is a lot to be done. The earlier you get started, the earlier your plant orders are hooked, and you get delivery just so much earlier in the season, before growth is started enough to involve a setback for the season's development.

Failure to plant this spring means the loss of a whole year's time. You must plant in the spring if you want to take advantage of the growing season of 1930. Then, too, if you plant this spring you can enjoy the improvements all summer.

It's Not Too Late to Plan Properly.

If you haven't planted anything on your grounds up to this time, give a little time to reasoning out a scheme of planting which is restful, quiet and identified throughout. Don't fill up your front lawn, unless you dislike having people see your house. A neat border or hedge along the front property line is all right. The main idea is to keep low plants like shrubs out of the center, and use trees to frame the house. Big trees like elms or maples are used to soften the sharp lines of the architecture and also to give shade from the hot summer sun. Simplicity is the keynote of beauty.

But as a person must have character and individuality to be interesting, just so must the home grounds be distinctly characteristic of the owner. This does not mean that your place should be freakish and attract attention by placing gaudy flower beds along the front of the house, but it should have some decided expression or tone. For instance, one would not expect a little old New England lady to have the same kind of place that a business man would design. In developing your own place do not try to copy other places, but give yourself leeway and use on your property the plants you desire.

A garden must be distinguished by its gaiety of tone. This may be produced in summer, by having a variety of low flowers, and by means of brilliant flowering shrubs. This does not mean that we should violate the rules of planting by placing geraniums in the middle of the lawn, or colorful beds along the base of the house. In winter the same tone can be suggested by placing evergreens or by using shrubs with cheery berries and bright twigs. The character of the whole place should be light, open, airy and at all crowded or overhaded.

The expression of the garden may be, if required, modest, unassuming, and simple. It need not be wanting in beauty or refinement.

Your home grounds should never present poverty, scantiness or stringiness. There is no need of a place expressing poverty; no matter how small a place or how limited the means, the place can be executed to represent cleanliness, neatness and care. There is nothing more beautiful than the little garden made by some old lady upon a small patch just at the door. It represents care and desire for things beautiful, and to some it would represent more than the large well-kept estates of our millionaires. Scantiness and stinginess in a place can be easily remedied, for if there are not enough plants available to plant the place fully, the plants on hand can be used in sufficiently thick masses, which will look much better than a few plants promiscuously scattered here and there.

beauties the same as the rest of disillusioned humanity?

The hardest of all to understand is the crouch, the depressed person, to whom spring is no more than a helping of potatoes. He is most to be pitied, for while the other ailments are undoubtedly the results of spring, he is imperious, enmeshed in a cast iron mold through which no breath of spring can hope to waft. All wives, sisters, mothers of such cases should put them under the care of physicians. What they need is a general overhauling—something needs to be fixed up, then perhaps there will be hope for them next spring.

And there's an idea—isn't spring the time for a physical checking up for all of us? Perhaps winter, advises the Michigan Tuberculosis Association, has given us a rough handling—many colds, much catarrh, the flu, and who knows what follows in their wake. A visit to the doctor may give new meaning to the springtime months.

DO NOT BELIEVE IT

Do not believe all that you hear in the next few months.

This applies to both candidates and voters.

There is hardly one man in a hundred who will tell the seeker for office that he will not vote for him. In many cases silence gives consent and the candidate construes nothing and as something favorable. Then disappointment comes.

And the voter too must not believe all that is told to him by candidates or their supporters. During the next few months somebody will discover the fact that most of our public officials are criminals of one kind or another. They will tell the voters about high crimes and misdemeanors. These people would not swear out a warrant, place the case in the hands of officers of the law or appear before the grand jury with their information. They would rather keep it for political purposes.

And so both candidates and voters should be skeptical this year. The candidate must not let on his indifference in what's told him. The voter should.

BETTER GO SLOW

They are at it again—we mean the fellows who persist in buying the was-bags to take their money away from them again. A few days ago the Michigan Securities Commission warned people to scan closely every security offered for sale or trade. A lot of worthless stock was being put on the market through questionable methods. It is said that many spec-kers, having once bitten, try it again in hopes of recovering their losses. They very rarely win.

Stocks have been quite active during the recent days and weeks. You begin to hear tales of the winners—never about the losers. There is nothing in our present condition to warrant stock speculation. Keep away from it. Stocks of legitimate corporations are bound to advance slowly—in proportion with the increase in national prosperity—but not fast enough to interest the speculator. He is on the outlook for "wild cats" that promise large and quick returns. That's why he invariably loses. If you have money to invest in securities, consult your banker.

If trouble with the back, dizziness, or any other symptom of eyestrain, consult Dr. Leahy, the Optometrist, when he comes Monday, April 28. One day only.—Adv. 1612

Our own advice, let the banks pay you interest; they can afford it.

Christian Science Sanatorium in California

SAN FRANCISCO. Under articles of incorporation already filed with the Secretary of State of California, permanent trustees took over on April 24 the ownership of the property and buildings which are to accommodate the Christian Science Benevolent Association for Pacific Coast. The Association, which will open its doors to guests about the middle of May, was established in accordance with Section 8 of Article I of the National of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass. adherents.

The Benevolent Association for Pacific Coast is the third large charitable institution established by The Mother Church, totaling an investment of over $1,200,000. The Christian Science Benevolent Association, located in Chestnut Hill, Mass., was chartered in 1916, and The Christian Science Pleasant View Home, located in Concord, N. H., in 1925. While all three of these corporations are independent from a legal point of view, they are all under the control and supervision of The Christian Science Board of Directors.

The California property, known as Arden Wood, is a thirty-acre tract located on the edge of San Francisco, its present location being between the Golden Gate and the Ocean. The Sanatorium is situated at the foot of the hill which forms the principal topographical feature of the property. No public roads or ways cross it, but paths will be arranged extending from the Sanatorium through the woods, making a feature of a small ravine which runs along the east boundary.

The Sanatorium, designed by Henry H. Guttersen, Architect, is of steel and reinforced concrete dome—a modernized Beaton-style, with high central pavilion, tall classic French windows, and a central tower, red tile roof. It is a modern and comfortable building for 120 patients and 100 attendants.

Within the last few weeks a substantial piece of property, including the principal tract, is now held by the city of San Francisco for school purposes, has been purchased to secure a quiet and secluded location for the Sanatorium.

The Board of Directors of the San Francisco mission will be in a substantial position to build the Christian Science Sanatorium in California.

The three Trustees of the new corporation are Mrs. Gertrude M. Glass, George D. Greenwood, and Marvin R. H. Hines. Wilson D. Clark has been appointed Manager-Treasurer. All of these officers have been actively interested in Christian Science work for many years.

Prosperity On Tap

Wouldn't it be a comfortable feeling to have a financial reserve always "on tap" — something to support you in an emergency — something to guarantee that the even line of your financial progress should not be interrupted, something, too, ever ready to help advance your financial position when an opportunity comes along?

Why not create such a reserve by regularly setting aside a portion of your earnings in a Savings Account here, where 4% compound interest will help build up a tidy fund? In fact, why not come in and open your account now — and have prosperity always "on tap?"

FISHERMEN DIE AT ROSCOMMON

Two Detroiters Upset Canoe On Mark Lake Rescued Too Late.

The story of two men who worked and played together for many years, and then went to death together, was told when the bodies of Frank W. Kerr and Claude W. Lewis were brought to their homes in Detroit from Mark lake, in Roscommon county.

For many seasons Kerr, 48, wholesale druggist, and Lewis, 47, a retailer, had fished together. Monday they motored to the Kerr estate on Mark lake, and last Wednesday, despite the cold, went out on the lake in a canoe.

Several hours later Daniel Sharp, 20, a caretaker, saw the canoe, apparently empty, floating far out in the lake. With a pair of field glasses he made out Kerr and Lewis hanging onto the boat, which had capsized. He rowed to the canoe. Lewis was unconscious, and Kerr was holding him up. Kerr lost consciousness just after the rescue, and both men were dead from exposure when Sharp got them to the Kerr cottage.

ROUND UP GANG OF COTTAGE MARAUDERS

Sargeant Aldrich of the State police patrol at Cheboygan reports that a gang of car thieves, who stole the Leon Miller car at Petoskey last week has been broken up and a large number of stolen cars recovered. The gang numbered five members, three men and two girls, one a Saginaw high school class member. They maintained quite an establishment at Saginaw where they repaired their own cars and stored plunder taken from summer cottages. Robbery of several cottages near Cheboygan put the state police on their trail and they were apprehended through work started by the Cheboygan police patrol.

Try apple and rhubarb pie for a change—using 1 large apple, 3 cups sliced rhubarb, 2 tablespoons butter, 1/2 to 3/4 cup sugar, and 1 teaspoon salt as the filling for a pre-baked pastry shell. Prepare and cut the apples in thin slices and cover the crust with them, sprinkle with part of the sugar and salt; spread the rhubarb over the apple, add the remaining sugar, and dot with butter. Lay strips of pastry criss-cross over the fruit and bake in a moderate oven until the fruit is tender.

We Want More Deposits

A bank cannot perform its full duty to the community unless it is in a position to loan money safely, where that money will do its full share in the development of the community. Of course, larger deposits, mean more loans and consequently greater profits for us, but if we can assist the community to prosper, why should we not prosper too, and our desire for larger deposits may be said to be equally divided between our ambition to make greater profits for our stockholders and our ambition to be of far greater usefulness to the section that supports us.

AT THE MOVIES.

A notable cast has been selected to present Sherlock Holmes, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's famous fiction detective, to the motion picture public in the all-talking feature, "The Return of Sherlock Holmes," at the Palace theatre, May 1-2.

Clive Brook has the role of Sherlock Holmes, master man-hunter of all time. H. Reeves-Smith plays the part of Dr. Watson, his faithful confidant. Prof. Moriarty will be seen in the person of Harry T. Morey, well known for past villainy. Sergeant Gripper will be faithfully portrayed by Hubert Bruce. And then there are a host of other characters, well known to the readers of these popular stories.

Edward Everett Horton Star In Coronet Comedy.

Edward Everett Horton, well known for his work on the stage and in feature comedies, is the star of "The Eligible Mr. Bangs," the Educational-Coronet talking comedy, which comes to the Palace theatre May 1-2, as a special added attraction. Mr. Horton is surrounded by a cast of capable artists who won their first laurels in stage productions. This supporting cast includes Johnny Arthur, Florence Eldridge, and Mabel Forrest.

"Their Own Desire" Has Two New Song Hits.

Two new song hits are introduced in "Their Own Desire," Norma Shearer's all-talking picture which will play at the Palace theatre May 3-4.

They are "Blue Is the Night," written by Fred Fisher, and "She's Got the Boy Friend Blues," by Reggie Montgomery and George Ward. In her last picture, "The Last of Mrs. Cheyne," Miss Shearer surprised her fans by playing the piano in an after-dinner recital scene. In the new film, the star again plays the piano, using the "Blue Is the Night" number. "She's Got the Boy Friend Blues" is sung by a quartet.

Battleship As Locale for Lupino Lane Talking Film.

Lupino Lane makes his debut in talking comedies in "Ship Mates," first of a new series of all-dialogue comedies which Educational is releasing. It will be at the Palace theatre May 6-7 as a special added attraction on the program. The comedy star is seen as a dumb sailor who manages to evade most of the punishment meted out to him as a result of his goofy tactics.

Heard in First Starring Role.

Evelyn Brent, fiery actress who made such a personal triumph in "Why Bring That Up?" "Fast Company" and "Woman Trap," will be seen and heard in her first starring picture, "Darkened Rooms" at the Palace theatre May 6-7. "Darkened Rooms" is based on a popular novel, by Sir Philip Gibbs, which recently was published serially in the Cosmopolitan Magazine. It deals with the fortunes of a fakir who tries to mule big fees from rich clients by his mysterious office of calling forth messages from their dearly departed.

VICK CHEMICAL CO. WINS COURT DECREE

Fraudulent Use of Trade Name Was Cause of Action.

Judge Thompson, presiding in U. S. district court for the eastern district of Pennsylvania, has just handed down a decision in favor of Vick Chemical Co. in its suit against Frederick E. Strohmeier, in which emphasis is placed by the court upon protection of the buying public against fraudulent use of a trade name, Vicks VapoRub.

"The defendant will be enjoined," Judge Thompson's decision reads, "against use of the plaintiff's trade name, as he has been using it, to deceive and perpetrate a fraud upon the public and, by pirating its trademark, to injure and damage the reputation of the plaintiff has built up."

"A decree may be entered for an injunction accordingly and for damages sustained by the plaintiff and profits derived by the defendant from his acts of infringement and unfair competition."

This case grew out of the action of Strohmeier in the marketing of a cough drop which he claimed, on the package, was "Medicated with Vick's VapoRub."

IT MIGHT HAPPEN IN 1970!

Chester Rowell, the noted publicist and newspaper writer, in telling in the San Francisco Chronicle how very simple it is to get rid of the prohibition law gives this formula for the process:

"All it needs is votes enough. First, transform a Congress that is four to one dry into one that is two to one wet. That means winning all the wet districts and more than half of the dry ones. Then elect wet majorities in both houses of the legislature in three-fourths of the states. That means carrying all the states that were wet before National Prohibition, and more than half of those that were then dry. That is the sort of handicap the drys had to overcome, and it took them 80 years to do it. By working twice as fast the wets might do it in 40. That would bring it to 1970. All who want a beer ticket, redeemable on that date, please speak up!"—Union Signal.

Local Club Champions Announced.
It is next to impossible to express in writing all the splendid features connected with the "Local Achievement Days," that were held last week at some 12 rural schools, when A. G. Kettunen and Miss Sylvia Wixson, judged the displays and selected the champions.

Of particular mention was the interest and enthusiasm displayed by the club members and the quality of programs given. A large attendance of parents and friends were present at many of the schools, and were simply amazed at the articles and garments made by these boys and girls, many of whom were only ten, 11, and 12 years of age.

The most inspiring program was that held at Marion Center. Very close to 100 parents and friends were present to enjoy the program. It was indeed a great thrill to see these 16 young girls appearing with their new dresses on for the first time, each of whom having made a fine selection of material and having done remarkable sewing. Then to realize that a 12-year-old girl, Darleen Williams, president of the club, had the ability to take charge of the entire program, as a result of the training she had obtained from the club work.

Norwood school, Ironton school, Bay Shore school, Loeb school, Boyne Falls school, Walloon Lake school, Deer Lake school, and Curfew school, likewise held mighty fine programs, that made the local Achievement Days an occasion not to be easily forgotten. Great credit should be given the Walloon Lake club for finishing 100 per cent in view of the fact that their clubs were organized on February 13, the latest of any in the county, and yet completed all requirements most efficiently.

Following are the local champions:

AGRICULTURAL NOTES.

Small dairies or persons selling only cream may cool their milk or cream by setting a covered barrel, through which water may be pumped, in the ground between the pump and the stock tank. The pipe from the pump should be extended to the bottom of the barrel, and the outlet should be near the top of the cans.

A "tabloid" picture of the factors that affect the farmer's economic position from month to month appears in The Agricultural Situation, a 24-page pamphlet issued monthly by the U. S. Bureau of Agricultural Economics. It is sent free to co-operators of the Department of Agriculture and to public institutions; others may subscribe for it for 25 cents a year.

Wild currants and gooseberries are dangerous weeds to the owner of white pines and should be destroyed lest they infect the trees with the destructive blister-rust disease. Under eastern forest conditions any white-pine stand can be protected from blister rust by uprooting all currants and gooseberries within 900 feet of the trees. Blister rust can not go directly from one pine to another; from infected pines it spreads only to currant and gooseberry leaves and from them back to the pines.

One of the most recent developments in cooperative organization among farmers is the cooperative buying of gasoline, kerosene, and lubricating oils. Members of cooperative oil associations in Minnesota in 1927 according to a study made by the U. S. Bureau of Agricultural Economics, were saved an average of 1.69 cents on a gallon of gasoline or quart of oil. These associations are usually organized as community or county organizations. They sell at prevailing prices and prorate the savings to the members.

A manure pit is desirable for the temporary storage of manure if it is fitted with a tent trap or cone trap to catch flies that may breed before the pit is emptied. To retain the fertilizing value of manure, it should be protected from rain and the air excluded as much as possible. There is no need to cover a large part of the top of the pit with a trap, but merely to leave holes large enough to attract flies to the light. Cover the holes with ordinary conical fly traps with the legs cut off so the bottom of the trap will fit closely to the box. In large bins two or more holes covered with traps should be provided.

Western farmers who must combat injurious rodents—which in some localities destroy 25 per cent or more of the farm crops and range forage—can now do so cheaply and efficiently through bait-mixing stations established by the U. S. Biological Survey. The most effective bait for poisoning ground squirrels, prairie dogs, field mice, and some other rodents is made from good, clean, especially steam-rolled oats, says the Biological Survey. At a bait-mixing station in Idaho, in 1929, more than 400,000 pounds of oats were prepared for poisoning in Idaho and other states and at a saving of $23,560.

Buckwheat is a good green-manure crop. A heavy growth plowed under makes plant-food available, decays quickly, furnishes humus, and helps to loosen hard soils. Very poor land can be improved by sowing rye with the buckwheat, the rate of sowing being rather scant for the buckwheat and normal for the rye. The rye is covered and held in check by the more rapidly growing buckwheat until this crop is harvested, after which it develops and occupies the land over winter. In spring it is plowed under as green manure. This plan is repeated year after year until the land is sufficiently improved to grow other crops. Buckwheat does not add nitrogen to the soil, but it will often help to put the land in condition to grow legumes.

A Good Combination.
Soybeans and cowpeas sown together make a very good mixture for hay or pasture. The yield is usually greater than that of either crop alone and the curing of the cowpeas is easier because of the presence of the soybean plants. Varieties of the two crops that mature at about the same time should be planted. It is better to have more soybean plants than cowpeas so that the vining cowpeas will have support. From one to one and one-half bushels of soybeans and one-half to one bushel of cowpeas are sown to an acre if seeded in close drills; in 3-foot rows one-half of these amounts is enough. The crop should be cut for hay when the soybeans are one-half to full grown and the first pods of the cowpeas are mature.

"LESS CARBON DEPOSIT"

... a common enough claim... now supported by real evidence

ACTUAL AMOUNTS of carbon deposited by 4 different oils in 50 hour tests in the same motor. Carbon from New Iso-Vis Motor Oil at extreme right.

PROOF that New Iso-Vis will not thin out your crankcase can be seen at any Standard Oil service station. Ask to see this interesting Ball and Bottle Test.

NOTICE the comparison between the amount of carbon formed by three premium-priced motor oils and New Iso-Vis on the right.

In the high compression motor, this difference in carbon is particularly important. It not only means a difference in repair bills, but a noticeable difference in the way your car performs.

In addition, tests show this new oil resists dilution and will not thin out in the crankcase. Its "body" is as heavy the day you drain it off as the day you put it in. This means greater protection for your motor every mile you drive.

New Iso-Vis also has what engineers call a "wider viscosity range". It stands up under intense heat yet gives quick and effective lubrication at low temperatures.

You can get New Iso-Vis from any Standard Oil dealer or service station.

CLARA DOUGHERTY CALLED BY DEATH

Many Friends Grieved by Her Untimely Demise Wednesday.

Miss Clara Dougherty, age 21 years, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Dougherty of Marion township, died last Wednesday afternoon at the Charlevoix hospital following a brief illness. Her untimely death was a shock to a large following of close friends who held her in high esteem.

Miss Dougherty was born April 17, 1909, in Marion township and had resided her entire life in this vicinity. She attended the rural schools and graduated from Charlevoix school, class of 1927, and the following year from the county normal. At the time of her death she was teacher of the Nowland district school, where she was making a splendid record of accomplishment.

Surviving besides her parents are two sisters, Mrs. John Stephens of this city and Eleanor, a student in the local high school, also a brother, Robert, at home.

Funeral services were held Friday afternoon from the Methodist church, Rev. John E. Lockyer officiating. The large gathering present to pay their last respects to a departed friend, was an indication of the high esteem in which Miss Dougherty was held in the community.

SURPRISE PARTY A PLEASANT AFFAIR

Group Gathering at Durance Home Tuesday Evening.

Following a meeting of the Royal Neighbors Tuesday evening, a group of seven members of that organization executed a very pleasant surprise party on Mr. and Mrs. Jones Durance at their home on West Hurlbut avenue. Mr. and Mrs. Durance had taken the members to their homes, but they turned about and followed them. Following a regular old-fashioned "charivari," the revelers were given a treat and later enjoyed a social hour with Mr. and Mrs. Durance.

Rep. Frank P. Bohn Sends Word from Washington to This Effect.

A recent communication from Frank P. Bohn, representative from the 11th Michigan district at Washington, D. C., states that Charlevoix harbor was included in those projects contained in the rivers and harbors bill which passed the House Thursday, April 25th, of which preliminary examination and surveys are to be made.

Mr. Bohn, who represents the district of which Charlevoix is a part, has been very active in support of requests made for improvements not only at Charlevoix, but also at Petoskey, and other lake port towns in his district. He is to be commended for his efforts in behalf of chambers of commerce, cities and private interests.

It is understood that preliminary work on the improvements here will be started within a short time.

The first grade language class under the direction of Miss Baker and Mr. Sullivan, are greatly enjoying their small farmyard and garden in the sand table. Each child has some vegetable planted and they surely do make a nice looking sand table. Small evergreen branches are erected for trees and there are small farm buildings, too.

CREWS HERE FOR CHANNEL REPAIRS

EQUIPMENT ON HAND AND WORK WILL START SOON.

Col. A. P. Christophel to Have Supervision of Operations Here and at Petoskey.

Work of repairing and remodeling the Charlevoix piers along the channel between Round lake and Lake Michigan will be started within a few days.

First consignment of the vast amount of equipment and material necessary for the work arrived here early this week, the U. S. Government tug Cumberland bringing a fleet of scows from Kewauene, Wis. The second fleet arrived here Tuesday night and the Cumberland returned across the lake to Two Rivers, Wis., after still more equipment. It was said that two more trips would be necessary to bring in remaining supplies.

So far there are five scows and a tow tug on the scene. Two are derrick scows, two material scows, one with a concrete mixer and tool sheds, and the other a pile driver. When the equipment is all assembled here, it will be divided, part going to Petoskey for the breakwater repairs there.

Supervision of the Charlevoix and Petoskey jobs is under Col. A. P. Christophel of the U. S. Engineering Department from Milwaukee. He will make his headquarters at Charlevoix and direct both operations from this point. In charge of the Petoskey work is M. J. Perkins, who is now located there with his wife. Mr. Perkins is directing preliminary operations at Charlevoix until the arrival of Col. Christophel.

Mr. Perkins stated Wednesday morning that a government crew of about 40 men would be divided between the two jobs and that additional local labor would be employed as the work advances. The present piers at Charlevoix will probably be torn out, replaced with concrete, and built down to the new water level. Complete details of the job will be available upon the arrival of Col. Christophel in Charlevoix. It is expected the work will continue throughout the summer and will probably not be completed before the first of October.

It is not known whether work will be done on the piers in the channel between Round lake and Lake Charlevoix.

Charlevoix may feel fortunate that the necessary pier repairs are to be made at once, and those who have worked hard on the project may take satisfaction in the knowledge that their efforts have been rewarded. The city can well afford to lend every necessary cooperation to those in charge of the work here, for the operations will mean considerable business for the city.

MRS. PERCY MARSA DIED HERE MONDAY

Had Been Charlevoix Resident for Nearly Fifty Years.

Mrs. Percy Marsa, a resident of Charlevoix for nearly 50 years, died at 5 o'clock Monday morning at her home on the Petoskey road north of this city.

Elizabeth Adelaide Colby was born in Niagara county, New York, December 27, 1859. When a child she moved with her parents to St. Johns, Michigan. In 1883 she came to Charlevoix, and since that time had made her home here. On September 14, 1889, she was united in marriage to Percy Marsa of this city.

Surviving besides her husband are one daughter, Mrs. Walter Smith of Charlevoix; a son, Dr. Clarence Dee Marsa of Los Angeles, Calif.; two grandchildren, Jean Elaine Marsa of Los Angeles, and Clarence Charles McCalmont of Charlevoix.

Funeral services will be held Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the Baptist church, Rev. W. H. Rauch officiating. Interment at Brookside.

Mrs. Marsa was a faithful church worker. While in St. Johns she united with the Baptist church and after coming to Charlevoix continued her faithful and earnest activities. She will be missed by a large number of close friends.

A bright, sunny face makes fine weather in the world any day in the week.

NOW NEW-TYPE TIRE AT LOCAL DEALER'S

New Development Makes Air Play Roll in Riding Comfort.

Considerable interest has been aroused among local motorists over a new-type tire recently announced by a leading maker and now on sale at a local dealer's store.

Improved riding advantages are attributed to a new principle of construction. More air and less rubber provide a buoyant riding quality hitherto unknown. Other new features include a silent, non-skid, rim-width tread and scientifically reinforced side walls. Elimination of unnecessary weight has resulted in a lighter, yet far stronger tire. Friction is reduced to a minimum.

Road tests prove that there is also an increase in mileage, a marked improvement in steering, acceleration and braking as well as a noticeably lower consumption of gas and oil. This remarkable tire development may be had in all sizes at the store of the local Fisk dealer.

A. C. Hanson, owner of the Sunoco oil station, is the local Fisk dealer.

CLASS C TRACK MEET SATURDAY

TIP OF MICHIGAN CONFERENCE TEAMS GO TO EAST JORDAN.

Charlevoix Sending Strong Delegation to First Annual Event—Boys Have Strong Outfit.

The first annual track and field meet of the Tip of Michigan conference of class C schools will be held Saturday of this week at East Jordan.

Schools entering teams of thin clad are Charlevoix, Harbor Springs, Gaylord, East Jordan, Mancelona and Boyne City. The meet will mark the first concerted effort of Northern Michigan class C schools in athletic circles and will be followed by competition along other lines of sports such as golf, tennis, football, basketball, hockey, etc.

Figuring from pre-season performance, Boyne City is favored to cop Saturday's honors. They won the regional class C competition at Cadillac a year ago and last Saturday defeated Petoskey 68 to 48 in a dual meet at Petoskey. In another Saturday meet, Coach Ike Tillotson's Gaylord trackmen won a three-cornered field event from Alba and Mancelona. The latter two schools scored 36 points each, while Gaylord's total was 44. Both Gaylord and Mancelona will compete Saturday.

At Petoskey last Saturday, Boyne City showed themselves to be exceptionally strong in field events. VanHoesen, Walker, Tompkins, Fox and White are their big points winners, and these men can be figured on to make competition tough at East Jordan.

Coach Kipke will put a strong representation in the field for Charlevoix at East Jordan. He has a lot of material for the dashes and some pretty good distance men. Kipke's men have had no chance to show their stuff so far this season and most any result can be looked for. Bergman, Dave Livingston, Levi Gibelyou, Dick Warner, Oscar Stroud, Bill Clark, Wesley Manley, Pat Moran and Stan Cartier make up the local team.

The boys have put in two weeks of tremendous practice and are in good condition. They can be relied upon to come home with some of the honors from East Jordan Saturday.

SEARCH MADE FOR FISHERMAN'S BODY

Light Screen and Buoy Found Last Week Near Fisherman's Isle.

Hugh Malloy and son Clyde, of Marquette, have been in Charlevoix since the latter part of last week, making an extensive search for the body of their son and brother, Pat Malloy, who was lost from the tug Charles M. Hyttel two weeks ago.

The light screen, which directly caused Malloy's death when it broke as he was holding onto it when changing a light, was found two miles below Fisherman's Island last Saturday, also the buoy dropped from the tug to mark the spot where the unfortunate man fell overboard.

Aided by local fishermen and friends, a search has been conducted along the lake shore and also at Beaver Island, but so far no trace of the body has been found.

COUNTY ROADS IN REAL GOOD SHAPE

CREWS UNDER R. T. DAVIS BUSY WITH MAINTENANCE WORK.

Consignment of 10,000 Norway Pines Planted in U. S. 31 South of Charlevoix This Week.

Road work being done under the supervision of the Charlevoix county road commission has progressed rapidly within recent weeks since favorable weather conditions have made operations possible.

The county crews, working under the direction of R. T. Davis, county road superintendent, have the highways in excellent shape. Patching crews have mended rough spots on all of the main roads throughout the county and where they were pitted and rough several weeks ago, all are now smooth going. Graders have been kept busy on the gravel roads and the motorist now finds them as smooth and in some instances better than the hard surface stretches.

A new grader is stationed at Charlevoix this year. It is being worked on the county roads south of this city—out the Barnard road, towards Phelps on the Charlevoix-Ellsworth road—and, in fact, is being confined to this district. The equipment is of the latest type with air-controlled blade.

The county road commission received 10,000 Norway pines from the state highway department on Monday of this week, and planting was started Tuesday morning on U. S. 31 south of this city. Planting of trees along the trunk line highways throughout the state in this locality is but a part of a state-wide movement sponsored by the department.

The plan is designed towards road beautification and, as the trees grow larger, they will serve as snow fence in the winter. It is not at all hard to picture the beauty of Michigan's highways when they are all lined with trees from one end of the state to the other.

At their regular monthly meeting at the court house Monday, the county road commission awarded the contract for construction of grade and culverts on 6,565 feet of road in Pleasant Valley to R. C. Sommerville of East Jordan. Three other small jobs will be either let on contract or completed by the commission. The jobs are on the Barnard road, Clarion road and on the Thumb Lake road.

BOULDER PARK PREPARES FOR SEASON

SEVERAL NEW HOMES TO BE BUILT DURING SUMMER.

Work of Improving Grounds Is Under Way and Improvements on Streets, Etc., Will Be Made.

Activities in preparation for the summer season have been started at Boulder Park, Earl A. Young's beautiful subdivision on the lake shore drive.

Finishing touches are being put on the second row cottage owned by Mr. and Mrs. Robert McIntosh of Wilmette, Ill., which is the latest addition to the many attractive homes. The McIntosh family will occupy their cottage as soon as school closes.

Work will be started soon on a new Japanese cottage on the second row. This new home, a 5-room bungalow with garage, is to be located at the east end of the sub-division, facing the lake near the tourist park. The plans and design are very unusual and the places promises to be very unique.

Construction of Mr. Young's cottage on the first row corner lot next to the tourist park will be completed this summer. This cottage will be another unusual one. Stones used in the walls will all weigh two tons or more and are of many and varied shapes and color patterns. The basement on the cottage is partly completed at the present time. It is also understood that the interior of the Hallett cottage will be completed within a short time.

Among the cottagers who will be at Boulder Park this summer are Mr. and Mrs. Frank Partridge and family of Charlevoix; Robert Herman and family of Cleveland, Ohio; E. L. Morgan and family, Akron, Ohio; F. E. Williams and family, St. Louis, Mo.; Herman Panama and family, Chicago; Miss A. M. Schelling, Lansing, Mich.; Mr. and Mrs. William Lewis, Ypsilanti, Mich. A recent lot purchaser is Isadore Resler, Detroit, well known artist. It is understood he will build within a short time on his second row location at the west end of the sub-division.

Work of getting the grounds, streets, etc., ready is going ahead, and it is expected that a hook-up with the city water mains will be made before the summer season.

CENSUS TALLY SHOWS FURTHER FALLING OFF

Population of 18 Precincts 3,158 Less Than Ten Years Ago.

Census returns on seven additional precincts for Charlevoix county have been received from Fred N. Potter of Alpena, supervisor of census for this district. Figures continue to show a heavy decrease.

Out of 18 precincts reported to date, Charlevoix township, exclusive of the city of Charlevoix, is the only one to show an increase of population. Residents of that district in 1920 numbered 101, as compared with 148 for 1930. In other townships reported, Peaine decreased from 243 to 170; St. James (including Carden Island, Little Beaver Island and Hog Island) from 536 to 346; Marion from 694 to 540; Boyne Falls village from 241 to 197; Evangeline township (not including Boyne City) from 226 to 201.

Deducting the increase of 47 in Charlevoix township, the 18 precincts in the county upon which preliminary returns have been received, show a total decrease of 3,158.

CHEBOYGAN WON DISTRICT MEET

COMMERCIAL STUDENTS FIRST HERE LAST SATURDAY.

East Jordan Was Second, Charlevoix Third, Boyne City Fourth and Petoskey Fifth.

Cheboygan students carried home first place in the Northern Michigan district shorthand and type writing contests held last Saturday in the commercial room of Charlevoix high school. East Jordan won second place, Charlevoix was third, Boyne City won fourth and Petoskey placed fifth.

The contests, an annual affair in the district, were held under the supervision of Miss Agnes Anderson of Charlevoix, district chairman. The enrollment of contestants numbered about 60, with representatives competing from nearly every town and city in the district.

Cheboygan, East Jordan and Boyne City were entered in all events including novice type writing, amateur type writing, advanced type writing, team type writing, novice shorthand, amateur shorthand, advanced shorthand, transcribing from shorthand copy. Charlevoix was qualified in four events. The first five places in each event were awarded points and the school winning the largest number merited the championship of the district.

Students who won points for Charlevoix were: Audrey Staley, novice shorthand; Lola Fessenden and Hilda Ogden, novice type writing; Jane Siminow, amateur type writing; Jane Siminow, Eleanor Tumth and Angie Scott, team type writing. The students winning the first two places in any event are eligible for the state championship contests to be held in Kalamazoo on May 23rd. The Misses Audrey Staley and Hilda Ogden are eligible to compete from Charlevoix.

BOYS' CONFERENCE A GREAT SUCCESS

DELEGATES ATTENDED FROM OVER ENTIRE DISTRICT.

Sessions Interesting and Led by Prominent Workers—Plan Summer Program of Activities.

One hundred twenty-five young men between the ages of 15 and 20 years, gathering from practically every town and city in the upper Michigan "Y" district composed of Emmet, Charlevoix, Antrim, Cheboygan, Otsego, Crawford and Kalkaska counties, attended the Northern Michigan older boys' conference here Saturday. Others were also registered from Traverse City, Manistec and Rogers City.

The program opened with registration and the first general session in the First Methodist church at 10:00 a. m., and was followed by group singing and discussions. At noon, the delegates were served luncheon at the church by the Methodist Ladies' Aid.

The afternoon sessions at the school building were given over to group discussions on topics which had been chosen by the boys at previous meetings. Each group was under the supervision of a leader brought to the conference for that purpose. Great interest was shown as the boys talked over the various topics they were the most interested in.

Among the prominent speakers who addressed the various sessions were A. J. "Dad" Elliott of Chicago, secretary of the national Y. M. C. A. and internationally known in boys' work. "Dad" Elliott met the same enthusiastic response here that he has over the entire world. In his talks he stressed the importance of Hi-Y clubs, relationship between boys and girls, fair play in athletics, the choosing of a vocation or one's life work, and above all the very necessary religious attitude that should accompany every endeavor. Other speakers were A. E. Byrum, Detroit, state Y. M. C. A. secretary, and Ray Johns, Detroit, town and county secretary, who is in charge of county and area organizations in the district of which the Northern Michigan group is a part. Every speaker proved popular with the boys.

"Dad" Elliott gave his main address at the evening session following a most delightful banquet served at the church by the Methodist ladies.

During the afternoon, a meeting of the district executive committee, whose membership is composed of two men from each town in the district, was held in conjunction with the conference. This group has charge of the business administration of the Northern Michigan association, and following their sessions, all stayed for the banquet and evening meeting. A report of the district secretary, Walter Gossill, was heard. He outlined the splendid accomplishments made during the first quarter, such as organization of Hi-Y clubs in Charlevoix, Cheboygan, Gaylord and Boyne City; various leaders' conferences, cooperation in boys' and girls' scout work, organization of Camp Fire units and conducting the Northern Michigan conference held Saturday.

Much credit for the success of the conference is due the Methodist church organization, Supt. Otterbein and others of the public schools, members of the Charlevoix Air Club, who took a prominent part, and Walter Gossill, the district secretary. Plans are now being made for summer activities in the Northern Michigan district such as camps, camping trips, etc., for both boys and girls.

RELIEF FROM CURSE OF CONSTIPATION

A Battle Creek physician says, "Constipation is responsible for more misery than any other cause." But immediate relief has been found. A tablet called Rexall Orderlies has been discovered. This tablet attracts water from the system into the lazy, dry, evacuating bowel called the colon. The water loosens the dry food waste and causes a gentle, thorough natural movement without forming a habit or ever increasing the dose.

NEURITIS AMONG AILMENTS THAT KONJOLA ENDED

"I Would Like to Shout the Praises of This New Medicine," Says Grateful Lady.

MRS. ROBERT CRUISE.

"As long as I am able to talk I expect to continue praising Konjola, the medicine that banished my ailments and relieved my suffering," said Mrs. Robert Cruise, 701 Warren avenue, Saginaw. "My stomach was in a terrible condition. I could scarcely retain any food without severe, cramping pains. Food did not taste right, and I dreaded mealtime. I had awful dizzy spells, and when these passed away, my nerves were all upset. But worst of all those terrible knife-like pains of neuritis that stabbed my shoulders and arms. These kept me awake for hours at night and made life miserable during the day."

"A neighbor told me all about Konjola. I don't know why, but I put my faith in this medicine, and started the treatment. Within a week I noticed a slight change for the better, and after taking seven bottles of Konjola, all pains vanished and my health was restored. I would like to shout the praises of this new medicine."

Konjola, a medicine containing 22 medicinal roots and herbs, works with the sufferer's food, eliminating poisons and restoring normal activity to the important functional organs. From six to eight bottles are recommended as a fair treatment.

Konjola is sold in Charlevoix, Mich., at F. J. Essenden's drug store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

Chinatown is Local for "Welcome Dancer."

Harold Lloyd, who is recognized all over the world as a past master at putting thrills on the screen, outdoes himself in his first all-talking picture, "Welcome Dancer," which comes to the Palace theatre beginning on May 8 and 9.

Underground Chinatown in San Francisco provides the setting for the "dances" which are guaranteed to send chills racing through the blood of even the most anemic picture fan.

It's a different kind of thrill one gets in the first Lloyd all-talker, however. The circulatory system increases its speed every time Lloyd moves in the underground Chinatown scenes, and the heart responds frequently to the number of classic romance scenes between the bespectacled comedian and his new leading lady, Barbara Kent, in other portions of the picture.

Lloyd has a habit of making his gags appear plausible, and in "Welcome Dancer" he has his audience fighting with him through every foot of the smashing finish, so sincere is the action and setting.

Great Opportunity for Bow Talents in Latest.

A splendid vehicle is provided for Clara Bow, the "It" girl in the picture, "The Saturday Night Kid"—her third all-talking production, which comes to the Palace theatre for a two-day run beginning May 10.

The play deals with the lives of the lads and lassies who earn their livings in the big department stores of the metropolis. The "It" girl herself is "The Saturday Night Kid." It is a role that calls for a full range of the emotions. She rages, she pouts, she loves. She wears coy costumes and formal ones.

James Hall, who played opposite Miss Bow in "The Fleet's In," and Edna May Oliver, character actress of the New York stage, provide the leading support for the flaming-haired Brooklyn actress. Miss Oliver has appeared in a number of pictures made in the east and took part in 35 Broadway productions. She began her theatrical career in New York in "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch."

"The Saturday Night Kid" was written by John V. A. Weaver, poet author, and George Abbott, playwright and stage screen director. Weaver is probably best known for his volume of slang poetry, "In America."

"The Mighty" Features Many Popular Stars.

A very notable cast is featured in "The Mighty," the Paramount, all-talking thriller coming to the Palace theatre May 13-14.

George Bancroft, the big deep-chested star takes the role of gunman whom the war makes a peace time hero.

Esther Ralston is the girl who knows his past, yet believes in him. Warner Oland is the insidious gang leader who under-estimates Bancroft's prowess.

Raymond Hatton, gives the comedy relief as Bancroft's pal who can't see that titles mean anything.

Dorothy Revier is cast as the sweetheart of the past.

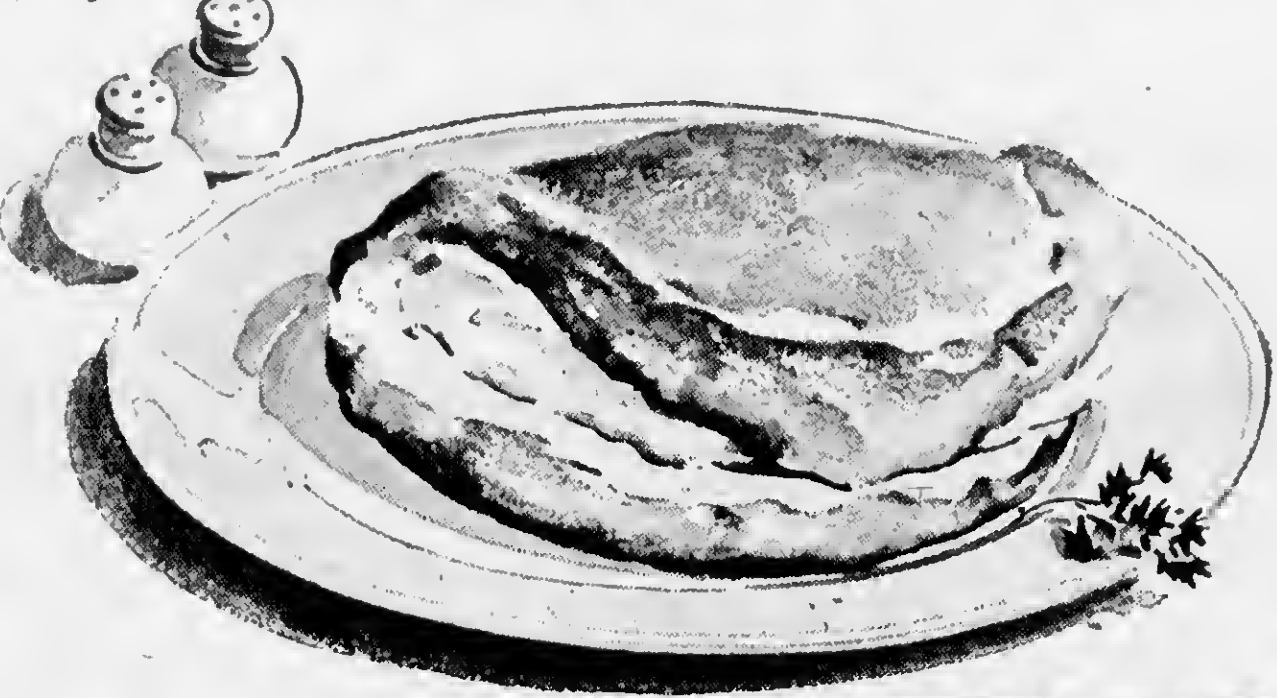

Morgan Farley plays the role of the chap who proves he "isn't yellow."

O. P. Heggie has the role of the father who forgives.

Also there are the major portion of the Los Angeles mounted police and a host of well known character actors and actresses.

Why does the omelet-recipe say SERVE AT ONCE?

The minute an omelet is hot from the pan, it is puffed up, tender... at its best... And the minute vegetables are fresh from the garden, all their flavor, all their juice are at their high point.

The way to have white wax beans while they are tender; and carrots when so crisp they cook creamy before they are creamed... the way to have all vegetables at their climatic time of freshness, is to pick them from a garden of your own. And the way to grow vegetables approaching perfection is to plant Ferry's purebred seeds.

These seeds are perfected the way breeders perfect cattle. A Ferry-bred tomato is no more like an ordinary tomato than Ferry's sweet corn is like horse corn. Find Ferry's purebred seeds at the "store around the corner." And write for Ferry's Seed Annual. This gives you 73 years' experience in gardens before you start—news of mulch paper—and even of better ways to cook vegetables. D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit, Michigan.

P. S.—THE GARDENER HAS NO SECOND CHANCE. PLANT THE BEST.

Want fresh lima beans with Sunday roasts? Eleven tender varieties are in this Annual. Only purebred seeds can produce their rich, buttery flavor.

Were revealed, betraying a change which could no longer keep itself behind the mask of her courage. Something in her mind died since they left the pithwood floor. The air of it was in her face, the ghost of it in her eyes, and she knew that he saw it and tried to smile at him bravely. He wanted to take her in his arms, and his lips almost cried out the desire. Carla saw this, too, and when the thing of iron in him triumphed over both voice and act, gratitude eased the anguish in her face.

"I'm glad you understand," she said, as if he had spoken, and knew what was in her mind. "I might run away. That would be easier for me. I could hide myself somewhere, and always love you. Nothing can kill those things—memories—and love. I would be satisfied to do that. I would be almost—happy. But I must do the other thing. I must go to Claire. It will be hard to do that."

Her admission of her love for him was made in a quiet and introspective way, as if his physical self had ceased to be a living part of it. It was this, and her reference to Claire, which strengthened his determination not to weaken her faith in him again.

He moved to the edge of piled-up debris and began to investigate it, cautioning her to stand back a little. The rubble loosened under his feet and slid down. There was quite a little rock slip before he had gone far, sending up a cloud of dust between them. Through this, when it had settled, Carla followed him. She heard him calling to her to go back, but in a moment was standing at his side. Almost above them, so steep was the ascent, the fissure narrowed to half a dozen feet in width and was choked with loose rock and sand. Paul looked at it with a somberly appraising eye and instinctively put himself between it and Carla. Another explosion of dynamite sent a scarcely perceptible tremor through the earth. Slight as it was, a tiny stream of sand and pebbles came trickling down from the suspended avalanche. He caught her hand and took her swiftly back to safety.

"A nearer shot would send that thing down on us," he said. "Wait here until I find out more about it."

"What are you going to do?" she asked.

"First, climb the edge of the wall and see what is beyond."

He did this and returned to her in a few minutes.

"Funny how little things put themselves in our way!" He tried to speak lightly. "The fissure is clear as a floor beyond that sing of debris, which is ready to topple. We could be out in five minutes if it were not for that. As it is, I've got to take a chance."

"And—the chance?"

"We must get over the loose stuff. Either that or go back—to the little fire."

"We must go on," she said.

"Yes, we've got to go on. We passed a stick back there five or six feet long. By bugzling close to the wall I think I can reach one of the keystones in the slide and loosen it. It won't be difficult, and the whole thing will come down like a house with the foundation pulled out from under it. I'm going to take you back a distance."

"And when the slide comes, where will you be?"

"Against the rock wall, as small as I can make myself."

"You mean," said Carla, with quick understanding in her eyes, "that you are going to take the stick and pry one of the rocks loose, but not from the edge of the wall, for no foothold is there. Your intention is to stand in front, and make an effort to get out of the way when the avalanche starts."

"I am sure I can do it."

"If it comes slowly, yes. But what if it should come the other way? Let us go together, Paul. It may be that we can get over it safely."

"Wait here until I get the stick."

"If we try to climb over it together we will not need the stick."

"But we cannot climb it. I know. I have seen a hundred of those things in the pit. They are like hair-trigger guns, even when they look solid. It is necessary to loosen a rock and then make a run for it. The stick will give me a few feet start."

"But it may be more firmly fixed than you think."

"My stick will prove it. Until then you must remain here."

She accompanied him to the downward exit of the small, room-like prison they had entered, and listened to his footsteps until the sound of them grew faint. Then she ascended to the crest of the rock slip again. A score of feet beyond lay the danger point. Between it and where she stood was the rough depression, out of which Paul would be compelled to race for his life should the loose rock avalanche. There was an overhanging of rock, high up, and she did not see how he could escape it. She turned to look back in the direction he had gone. It was like Paul to take the situation in this way, as if it were an unimportant incident rather than a tragic thing.

Light was fading swiftly, and evening shadows were falling between the deep, close walls of the crevasse. A radiance was in Carla's face, as if a voiceless spirit within her were sending a message to some one in the world above. She could hear Paul's footsteps returning, the iron nails in his boots striking on rock, and her lips moved, yearning to call his name. Then she ran down into the hollow and up its farther edge. After all, it might not be such a sword of Damocles over them. If it were not, then Paul could only scold. If it were—

She began to climb.

CHAPTER XII

Paul heard the crash. He was a little beyond the place where he had left Carla, and ran to it, calling her name. He leaped through the dust which was settling quickly and heavily, and saw the hollow choked to the brim with the debris of the avalanche. Carla was caught in the last grip of it, near the crest of the rock slip. The upper part of her body was out, and she was alive when Paul reached her. He tried to speak as he tore at the rocks. But his voice was gone. He saw Carla's eyes looking at him with the light fading out of them. She made no sound. Her eyes were closed when he had her in his arms at last. Yet she was not dead—he found himself saying the words over and over as he climbed with her out of the fissure.

It may be that the full story of Carla's fall and Paul would never have been known had it not been for the happening of this night. It seems reasonable that neither Claire nor Lucy-Belle nor the others would have told the more intimate of its details. A madman told the story. The madman came into the middle of the night. They did not know him at first, for brush and limbs and rocks had disfigured him in the darkness. His face was like that of a man who had been beaten with naked fists. His clothes were half gone. His feet were bleeding through the shredded leather of his boots. In his arms he carried a woman; a dead woman, they thought. Not until Derwent unwrapped the coat with which her head and shoulders were protected and saw her face could he clearly realize that the man was Paul.

They took Carla to the Mistassini. She was carried gently, but quickly, in a litter—with half a dozen men taking turns in bearing her.

Even then, in his exhaustion, Paul insisted on walking at her side until the last nerve in him broke. It was this which robbed him of a day and a night of conscious life.

When he came to himself again, after hours of tortuous sleep, Der-

Her Eyes Were Closed When He Had Her in His Arms at Last.

went told him that Carla was badly hurt but would live.

Claire, he said, had returned to her people in New York the second day after his supposed death. Lucy-Belle had gone with her. Word had been sent to her that he and Carla were alive, and Lucy-Belle had replied, saying that Claire was very ill. Then had come a telegram from Claire.

Derwent gave it to Paul.

"I am so happy," it said. "Come to me as quickly as you can. Only God knows how glad I am."

"It sometimes takes a thing like this to bring out the love in a woman's heart," said Derwent, remembering Paul's years of loneliness.

"Yes, it does," said Paul, and he saw Carla's face between him and the words which Claire had written.

He went to see Carla soon afterward. He had taken a great deal of pride in the clean, white hospital he had built for the company, and now he blessed it. Derwent told him what it had meant for Carla. They had X-rayed her and had made the extraordinary discovery that there was not a broken bone in her body. But something had happened to her back, and she was paralyzed from her waist down. Temporarily, he believed. Knowing what Paul would have done under the circumstances, he had sent to Quebec and Montreal for expert assistance, to consult with the company staff.

Carla was propped up against a mass of pillows in her snowy bed when Paul arrived. Everything was white about her, except the richness of her hair—the room, the bed, her lacy gown, her face. Like that, with two silky braids streamling over her shoulders, she might have been a child, one who had been a long time sick, with an exquisite, fragile beauty about her. He had not expected to find her so like a lily-petalled flower whose soul a breath might carry away.

He seated himself beside her, and she let her hand creep over the coverlet to him. It was helplessly weak. Her fingers were only a feathery pressure about his.

"Please don't scold me, Paul," she said faintly, trying to smile. "You see, I was right. If the rocks had buried you, I could never have got you out and brought you home. Could I?"

He did not answer, but held her hand so closely that a joyous little melody of content came for a moment in her throat. "I am glad. I was afraid you would be angry with me. Now I know I shall get well quickly!"

It seemed difficult for them to find things to say. Paul, fighting, with the grimly set lines of an Indian in his face, was holding back what he wanted to tell her. Carla knew. A little more and she would have cried, her own weakness letting down the thing which both were valiantly making an effort to hold between them. He told her about the specialists who were on their way, and that their own staff had no doubt but that she would very soon be on her feet again. He tried to talk without a strain in his voice, yet he could feel the falseness and pretense of his effort when he wanted to take her in his arms and kiss her pale, sweet face.

Carla knew this, too.

At last, when it was time for him to leave her, she said: "When are you going home?"

"I don't know," he replied.

"It must be soon," she urged. "I want it that way. You must start today—or tomorrow. Only that will make me well. Claire wants you. Please—read this—"

She gave him a crumpled yellow slip of paper. It was a telegram, crushed, as if she had been holding it a long time before he came. He smoothed it out and read the words which his wife had sent her. The message was almost identical with the one he had received, giving him the impression that Claire, in the stress of her emotion, had been able to find but a single thought for them both.

"I am so happy," it said. "Send Paul to me as quickly as you can. Only God knows how glad I am."

"She has faith in me," said Carla.

"She asks me to send you to her. What a privilege that is, Paul, for one woman to give another! No matter how hard I try I can never be as wonderful as Claire. The world does not hold many women like her. She loves you. She wants you. When will you go to her?"

"You said—tomorrow."

"Yes, tomorrow."

He rose, and stood looking down at her.

"I will go," he said. "But some time I will come for you, Carla. May be not now, not in this life, but sometime. May I continue to dream that?"

"It is not a dream," she said. "It is faith. I am giving you up for a little while, but is all. Sometime, in another life, these tests which God put upon us will return you to me."

When he looked back at her from the door she was smiling, her eyes filled with tears.

"Everlasting Punishment" was the subject of the lesson-sermon in all Christian Science churches on Sunday, May 4.

Among the citations which comprised the lesson-sermon was the following from the Bible: "The Lord redeemeth the soul of his servants; and none of them that trust in him shall be desolate" (Ps. 34:22).

The lesson-sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "The good man finally can overcome his fear of sin. This is his necessity—to destroy itself. Immortal man demonstrates the government of God, good, in which is no power to sin" (p. 405).

Ask any Standard Oil service station attendant to show you

The ball and bottle test

The Ball and Bottle Test

shows you the way oils differ in "body." The more "body" an oil has, the slower the little ball falls in the tube. Notice the difference between New Iso-Vis and any other oil drained from the crankcase.

THIS simple test shows clearly that New Iso-Vis does not thin out or "break down" in the crankcase no matter how many miles you drive.

To motorists accustomed to find oil thin and diluted after a few hundred miles of driving, New Iso-Vis brings a new conception of motor oil quality.

It is important to realize that 90 percent of the "thinning out" in your crankcase takes place during the first 200 miles after changing your oil. By overcoming this thinning out Iso-Vis assures you of lubrication not only when your oil is fresh but right up until the time you change.

New Iso-Vis actually is as heavy, after a long period of use, as it was the day you put it in the crankcase.

Remember, too—it reduces carbon deposit far below most premium priced oils and gives lubrication over a wider range of engine temperatures.

You can get New Iso-Vis from any Standard Oil dealer or service station. Fill your crankcase today and enjoy more economical and efficient motor lubrication than you've ever had before.

SAVE MONEY on carbon removal. New Iso-Vis reduces the carbon nuisance.

ANOTHER DISEASE.

A feature of the Wickersham speech last week in Washington which was not as generally reported as it deserved had to do with public education against the use of intoxicants.

Against cancer, tuberculosis and many diseases of life we have made progress in recent years through education in the personal habits and preventive measures. Against the diseases of many kinds, public, social and physical, which spring from the abuse of alcohol we have made little educational progress; trusting to the law instead.

There is no reason that a schooling against the habits which bring destruction of health—and continue to bring it, despite prohibition—cannot be conducted as vigorously as they were during the old teetotaler campaign. The presence of the law does not remove the importance of such anti-disease education, and Mr. Wickersham forcefully has called attention once more to a fact which The Press repeatedly has emphasized in the past ten years.

Telling youth, for example, that it must not break the law does not appear to be a successful method psychologically. Telling youth what changes alcohol can and does effect in the human body, life expectancy, and even the chances of the next generation as altered in the germ cell, might go a great deal farther.—Grand Rapids Press.

SPEEDING UP MAN.

Naturally man is not a very fast animal.

The Finlander Nurmi holds the record for speed. About five years ago he ran a mile at a speed which averaged about fourteen and one-half miles an hour.

A rabbit, if he is chased by the hounds, can run from 35 to 40 miles an hour.

A pigeon has traveled at an average speed of 70 miles an hour for over four hours. These teal that we waste so much ammunition on during the hunting season fly up to 125 miles an hour.

The swallow is a frail little bird that you can almost hide in your hand. Yet one of these birds, taken 148 miles from her home, was back in an hour and 8 minutes at an average speed of 134 miles an hour.

But man has mechanical brains. An automobile has been driven at a speed of 231 miles an hour. Airplanes have set up even better records.

The interesting thing is that there are scientists who assert that it will not be long before we may travel at a thousand miles an hour. The problem is that of overcoming resistance.

We hope that such a time is far in the future. Most of us travel too fast now.—Grand Rapids (Minn.) Herald-Review.

DANGER AT BUSY CROSSINGS.

It is impossible in the present stage of transportation development to do away with grade crossings, though posterity may look back at them as inefficient and cruel.

Even now, there is a popular feeling that in certain places grade crossings are inexcusable. They should not be permitted in populous localities where the railroads and highways involved both carry heavy traffic. Quite aside from the accidents which occur at such places, the constant friction and delay are bad.

It has been found that fatal accidents often happen even at supposedly well-guarded crossings, where the country is flat and visibility good. That is because the human factor is so hard to control. The busier the crossing, the greater need to eliminate it and put rails and highways on different levels.

TO CURB DRUNKEN DRIVERS.

A new law aimed against drunken drivers has been enacted by the legislature of the State of New York. The law provides that a person who has been twice convicted of driving while intoxicated and who in both cases has caused personal injuries, will have his license revoked and may never again have it restored.

It would seem that this is lenient punishment for such offenders. The very fact that any driver convicted twice for having injured a person or persons while intoxicated on the highways brands him or her a menace to society. However, it is true that the value of such a law as recently been added to the criminal statutes lies mainly in the spirit of its enforcement. If this law is applied drastically it will unquestionably remedy a very bad condition which has existed for a long time.

BUSINESS IMPROVING.

Government reports, while showing business still not to be good, indicate a stronger current of optimism than heretofore. Public works construction and the utilities program of expenditures are ahead of schedule and are considered as tiding business over the rough spots. Despite the low current condition of exports and the almost universal pessimism elsewhere concerning the immediate future, there is an abiding faith that this business will pick up before the end of the year. Europe is beginning to want a great many things; to want means to work and to work means to buy American goods.

THE THINKER LEADS MODERN PROGRESS

By JOHN G. LONSDALE
President American Bankers Association

THE greatest need of the world today is interpreters of our times—modern Daniels in agriculture, finance, politics, industry—who can see through the fog and haze that shroud our difficult problems and advise, instruct, and influence those who are either indifferent or limited in their perceptions.

Through the thinker and the interpreter, unknown situations are disclosed or puzzling conditions explained in logical light. The American people are so constituted that they can meet and combat any situation once it is known and understood. It is the unknown that comes like the thief in the night and brings disaster.

Some one has defined prosperity as something the business man craves for the politicians to take credit for. But America's present-day prosperity can be defined as a product resulting from the business man's ability to study and to interpret. Huge corporations maintain research staffs and special bureaus to interpret the times for them. Disaster looms in the offing for any industry that goes blithely on its way day after day without due regard to significant trends in trade and business.

Leaders of finance have discovered that they cannot remain passive in an age when all the rest of the world is in a transitional stage. The modern banker not only must know about the changing styles in other lines of business, but above all must be alert to the transformations which are taking place in his own. He must be a man of keener broader vision, because the order of the day is for larger units of service. Mergers and consolidations have taken place in great numbers. We now talk of billions where a few years ago we talked of millions.

We have only begun our changes. What disposition is to be made of the many problems that they bring will depend in large measure upon our leaders, upon the students and the interpreters who can read, accurately the signs of the times, so that we may have future actions and hopes upon their wisdom. The quickest way to go to the top is to go to the bottom of things, and let us hope that among them will be found many who will not only aspire to leadership but will be successful in reaching their goal.

Don't Pet Bees in Early Spring

Disturbing Hive on Warm Day May Expose Them to Danger Later.

Spring exuberance should not lend the beekeeper to disturb his hives too early in the season, with the mistaken idea that he is doing them a kindness. Any such disturbance may cause the insects to start their work too early, and expose them to danger when cold spells come later. It is pointed out by Virgil N. Argo, extension specialist in beekeeping at the Ohio State university.

Start Brood Rearing.
"Manipulations in the early spring are emergency measures only," says Argo. "If the bees have been properly prepared for winter, there should not be many things to do when brood rearing starts in the spring."

"But the beekeeper will do well to visit all hives that are not well packed and lift them a little from the bottom board to determine whether they are too light in stores. Should they weigh little he should feed the bees some thick sugar syrup at once—granulated sugar, two parts, and one part of water. The water should be hot when the sugar is stirred into it, and the syrup fed to the bees at night from a friction top ball which has had the lid punched full of very fine holes. The lid is squeezed into place and the ball inverted over the hole in the honey-board or inner cover of the hive."

Place on Sticks.
"It may be placed on two sticks, holding it in a clitch of an inch above the honey-board, enabling the bees to cluster freely over the whole surface of the lid. An empty super is now placed on top of the honey-board and the space inside that is not occupied by the ball is filled with some material so that the heat of the bees below the honey-board is not allowed to escape."

Fertility Depends Much on Management of Soil

Although virgin soil is supposed to be fertile, there are now areas that fail to yield good crops. The reasons are as various as the types of soil. Sometimes it is a sandy soil that fails to support the plants, and other times a deep black soil is a failure. Generally the losses that have been recently cleared average up the best of all the new clearings.

It is a waste of time to treat new breaking to a good dressing of stable manure. The one difficulty seems to be that new farms are short of manure. In fact that also applies to old-fashioned farms these days. There is a general shortage of stable manure in many districts, and there is great waste of the elements of fertility in places where manure is procurable.

Manure is valuable on account of the beneficial bacteria it contains, and the life it imparts to the soil. As far as the elements that go to make up plant food are concerned, they can be got perhaps more cheaply from chemical fertilizers.

Poultry Water Heater Useful During Winter

When poultry water fountains cannot be given frequent attention on near-zero days, the commercial fountains heated by a small lamp often prove a good investment. Hens will not eat much dry mash if they cannot wash it down with water and the mash needs to absorb quite a lot of moisture while in the crop. Only a small lamp is used in a safety compartment under the fountain, and some need filling but once a week.

It is not necessary to give the hens hot water in winter or even warm water. The water that they seem to relish the best is just pleasantly cool. These lamp-heated fountains do not make the water very warm, but just keep it from freezing. When poultry houses are insulated and ventilated, it is often possible to give the hens water just as it comes from the well without danger of having fella full of ice before the water is used.

Farm Notes

Don't use cold storage as a resting place for inferior fruit.

If manure is handled out and spread daily during the winter months it saves double work in the spring.

The current floods of seed catalogues are proof enough that hope springs eternal in the human breast.

A load of manure on the fields where it can do good is worth two on the manure pile where it only wastes away.

Plan to thin a acre of your young timber this winter. You will get wood for the fires, an appetite for buckwheat cakes and sausage, an improved woodlot, and a lot of satisfaction out of the job.

Irish potato growers are buying more certified seed each year. Certified seed is safe for it has been found to be fairly free from disease, does not contain varietal mixtures, and has shown high yielding ability. In some cases, uncertified seed is just as good as certified but more often it is not.

Prosperity On Tap

Wouldn't it be a comfortable feeling to have a financial reserve always "on tap" — something to support you in an emergency — something to guarantee that the even line of your financial progress should not be interrupted, something, too, ever ready to help advance your financial position when an opportunity comes along?

Why not create such a reserve by regularly setting aside a portion of your earnings in a Savings Account here, where 4% compound interest will help build up a tidy fund? In fact, why not come in and open your account now — and have prosperity always "on tap?"

CITY WORK MOVING ALONG WITH SPEED

Addition to Light Plant Progressing —Other Departments Busy.

Nice progress is being made by employees of the city electric light department on the several projects they now have under way.

The work of installing the boulevard lighting system on Antrim street is now practically completed. Conducts east to State street were completed last fall. Since the work has been resumed, posts have been set and the complete installation made between State and Bridge streets.

The addition to the steam power plant to house the new diesel power unit is coming along nicely. Piling for the engine bed has all been driven, 50 in all, and it is expected concrete will be poured Thursday. Building of the main structure will probably be started early next week.

Other departments are equally busy. Street crews have been busy several days in the clean-up program, taking rubbish away as it is gathered and placed along the curbing. Some nice improvements are being made at the city auto camp and from every quarter one sees preparations for the summer season.

County Achievement Day for Club Members.

All members of boys' and girls' clubs are most cordially invited and urged to attend the County Achievement day to be held in the Charlevoix gymnasium on May 10th beginning at 1:30 o'clock fast time. This will be the most interesting and instructive to all club members, and their parents and friends, and a splendid program will be offered.

Each of the local champions from all the different clubs in the county will have their winning exhibits on display, which means that you can see the work done by approximately 30 club members representing the handicraft and clothing clubs. Not only that, but these are the best from each club so it will be a worth while exhibit and no guess work.

Mrs. Ruth Schubert, Petoskey, will judge the exhibits of the clothing club and select the county champions. Mrs. Schubert, formerly Miss Featherly, will be remembered by all club members from her contacts made while acting as assistant state boys' and girls' club leader. A. R. Schubert, county agricultural agent of Emmet county, will judge the handicraft club exhibits.

The program will consist of songs, games, and stunts, with several short talks and musical numbers. Among the speakers will be Walter Goplin, district Y. M. C. A. director, who is vitally interested in the welfare of boys and girls. Space does not permit giving all the details, but there will be surprises in store for you. Remember Saturday, May 10th, at Charlevoix gymnasium, and come one and all, club members, parents, and friends. The entire public is urged to see this splendid type of work being done by our fine rural boys and girls.

Feeding and Management of Baby Chicks.

The feeding, early care, and management of baby chicks, many times presents a large number of problems to the owners. The first three or four weeks largely decides the success you will enjoy. In some cases diseases cause a great loss during this time. In others temperature and feeding conditions cause a heavy mortality.

For the purpose of assisting poultry owners a series of two meetings will be held on Tuesday, May 13th, as follows:

Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock fast time at Marion Center town hall (south of Charlevoix).

Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock fast time at Cherryville Hatchery owned by A. L. Wardle, one mile east of East Jordan.

L. R. Arnold, poultry extension specialist of the Michigan State college will be present at each meeting. He will discuss all poultry problems and more especially those connected with baby chicks. If you are experiencing difficulties attend the nearest meeting and no doubt Mr. Arnold can help you. Bring your neighbors and their friends, and not be afraid of the 13th.

AGRICULTURAL NOTES

Green Tubers Will Cut Market Prices.

Delayed planting of potatoes by Michigan growers results in the marketing of immature tubers which prejudice the buying public against Michigan stock, according to the farm crops department at Michigan State college.

Unripe potatoes are soggy and dark colored when cooked. Both the appearance and quality of the potatoes are poor and the housewife who once buys them is apt to purchase potatoes grown in some other section when she has to renew the supply for the household.

Immature potatoes are apt to have the skins broken in digging or in handling for shipment so the tubers appear rough and dirty as they are exposed for sale in the markets. This gives them an handicap to overcome before they get into the consumer's home.

Most of the Michigan market crop is produced from Russett Rural seed stock. This variety needs 120 to 130 days after planting to become fully ripe, and the planting date should be early enough to allow that length of growing season before the danger of frosts.

In average years, a planting date of from May 15 to May 31 will be satisfactory for the section north of Muskegon and Saginaw. Potatoes may be planted safely from five to ten days later south of the Muskegon-Saginaw line.

Raspberry Does Not Require Fertilizer.

The results of fertilizing raspberries in the spring are apt to be disappointing to the owner of the plantation, members of the horticultural department at Michigan State college say after compiling the data from tests made in commercial fields.

The specialists in horticulture advise the application of fertilizers in mid-September if any are to be used, and they state that it is doubtful if a profit can be obtained from the use of fertilizers for raspberries which are growing on heavy, fairly rich soils. Plants yielding at the rate of 150 crates per acre require no additional plant food according to the college experiments.

Nitrate fertilizers applied in September apparently increase the quantity of early berries produced but there is no appreciable gain in total yearly production. The early berries, of course, usually bring a premium in price and this added value may make the use of fertilizer profitable in some cases.

The foliage of the raspberry plants is noticeably benefited by the use of nitrogenous fertilizers and, if the yields are not checked by the use of unfertilized rows of plants, the plantation owner is apt to believe that the advantages of the additional plant food are greater than is really the case.

Tests made with phosphate showed no increase in yields obtained from the use of this plant food.

Mole Drains Fail in Michigan Test.

Mole drainage systems can only be successful on lands which have a heavy clay subsoil, and the benefits, even on such areas, are limited and of short duration, according to experiments conducted by the agricultural engineering department of Michigan State college.

Mole drainage is attractive in theory because such a system can be installed at a cost of two dollars per acre where the lines are spaced two rods apart but the college trials showed that the lines would remain open only a comparatively short time and that a heavy rain soon after the drains were made might fill them up immediately.

The mole drains are made by attaching a cylindrical piece of steel to the bottom of a plow coulter which is specially constructed to run in the subsoil below the usual plowing depth. The coulter cuts a narrow slit in the soil and the passage of the steel cylinder leaves a tunnel at the bottom of the slit.

This tunnel will not remain open except in clay subsoil, and, as water permeates such soils very slowly, each tunnel drains only a narrow area under ideal conditions. The college agricultural engineers advise the use of such a system only in combination with tile drains where the mole drains can be used as laterals.

COUNTY NORMAL NEWS.

The Normal class is back to work again with renewed interest after the pleasant trip to Mt. Pleasant. Everyone enjoyed the trip down as well as the program prepared especially for the Normal students.

Monday morning the first period of the day was devoted to a class discussion of the observations of each Normal student while at Mt. Pleasant. Different grades were visited by various students. During the class discussion everyone profited by the experiences of a few.

This week has been set aside as music week in the schools. Tuesday morning the Normal class observed this day by devoting a full period to the singing of familiar songs from the Golden Song book. A similar program is being planned for the training room.

April showers have done their duty at last. The Normal room is profusely decorated with both wild flowers and artificial ones.

Committees have already been appointed in anticipation of the exhibit to be held May 28th.

Thursday evening a beach party is being planned by Miss Sutton, Mrs. Andrus and Miss Dorothy Smith. Everyone is eagerly anticipating the event.

Monday the Normal students missed the presence of Mrs. Andrus who was absent on account of illness.

Training Room.

Mrs. Ochs supplied in Mrs. Dick's place in the training room last Thursday and Friday at the time the teachers attended the students to Mt. Pleasant.

Tuesday afternoon the first language class are to be escorted to the woods for a little walk by Miss Baker and Mr. Sullivan, the language teachers, and by Miss Biggs and Mrs. Dick.

Card of Thanks.

We wish to express our sincere thanks to relatives, friends and neighbors for their many acts of kindness shown during the sickness and subsequent death of our beloved mother, Mrs. John Wells. Especially do we feel grateful to those who sent flowers and assisted in various ways at the time of the funeral. Mr. and Mrs. John Wells and family.—Adv. 1911.

MR. TAFT'S VERDICT.

The late Chief Justice Taft has rendered an unexpected verdict—a verdict which was not demanded of him, and which is the more significant for that fact. That verdict, rendered after years of dissent, records his personal support of national prohibition, his conviction that the law can be enforced and his appeal to wets and dries alike for a patient working out of the problem.

Mr. Taft's candid reversal of judgment is a persuasive tribute to the wisdom and the results of the Eighteenth Amendment. Twelve years ago while the Eighteenth Amendment was in process of ratification Mr. Taft condemned prohibition as an unwise change in the structure of the Constitution, and asserted that the law itself would be unenforceable. What convinced this great judicial mind that prohibition was not only a wise solution, but a practical one? No person persuaded Mr. Taft to this view; no political pressure persuaded Mr. Taft to this view; no zealous emotionalism persuaded Mr. Taft to this view; yet on November 21, 1928, as revealed in a posthumous letter to Dr. Irving Fisher of Yale, Mr. Taft forthrightly reversed his previous judgment against prohibition, and declared himself in favor of its continuance, and confident of its success.

In winning the support of Mr. Taft prohibition has proved its appeal to an open-minded thinker in an exceedingly influential manner, for no less than the clearly demonstrated value of the law could have brought the late Chief Justice to such a fundamental change of conviction. Mr. Taft's letter is not, of course, giving a great deal of comfort to the wet press. The New York Evening Post, for example, just can't believe it's true, and the New York Herald Tribune says that the average New Yorker is convinced that Mr. Taft's letter must have been written on another planet, or at least written by someone cut off from the rest of society. That's all very interesting, but it is just barely possible that Mr. Taft might not be the one who was cut off from representative American society.

CONCERNING NEW STATIONS.

Attorney General Brucker believes the Federal Radio Commission is inclined to look with favor upon the request of the state to establish a state police radio station at East Lansing as a part of the campaign to fight organized crime in Michigan. That would be a very sensible viewpoint to take, one that should be granted to every state in the union making such a request. Quick apprehension and punishment of the criminal is the only remedy society has for protecting itself against these so-called crime waves. So far everything else has failed. When the criminal is inclined to bring disaster they are going to hesitate a long time before taking it up as a vocation.

But at the same time we have too many radio stations. The air is filled with squeals, grunts, and groans from stations that have no right to be on the ozone. In Michigan we have any number of these stations that should be eliminated. They are unable to furnish a worthwhile program, consume hours in advertising everything from needles to threshing machines, while spoiling the pleasure of thousands of listeners unable to tune in on their favorite station because of interference.

Eventually the Federal Commission will find that weeding out the worthless station is the only answer to this vexatious problem. Demand a program measuring up to a certain standard or make them quit. The public, not publicity speakers, should be the first to be considered.

TREAT THEM RIGHT.

The 1930 tourist season is not so many weeks away. Already cars bearing license plates from outside the state may be seen on the highways and by the end of the month the annual invasion of summer visitors will be well under way.

Michigan has everything to offer in the way of climate and scenery—it is the summer playground of the world. And now is a good time to begin preparing for their welcome. Tourist associations, aided by the state, are spending many thousands of dollars asking these people to spend their vacation days in Michigan. As hosts we should do everything possible for their comfort and pleasure while they are here.

Don't make a practice of overcharging the stranger, thinking he will not be coming your way again. The satisfied tourist returns another year bringing with him his neighbor and friends. The tourist business has grown to enormous proportions in this state, outranking in point of dollars and cents the great lumber industry of the past. We can make it grow by leaps and bounds each succeeding year if we but have the determination.

Watch for the gougers—drive them out of your community—refuse to let them give your hospitality a black eye. Summer vacations are made or spoiled by fair or unfair treatment—send them back home at the end of their trip happy in the spirit in which you greeted their coming and speeded their farewell.

BE SAFE AT HOME.

Home is not always a safe place. We refer, not to the violence of husband or wife, but the fact that many an accident occurs in the home and it is a good place to be careful.

The National Safety Council reports that there were 4,000,000 accidents in homes in 1929 and 24,000 of them were fatal. Most of the serious accidents were falls. They doubtless came when mother was dusting and father was hanging up a picture. Five hundred serious accidents were caused by falling in the bath tub. There were many other causes and if you would be safe at home the following things should be particularly recommended:

Do not start a fire with gasoline or coal oil.

Do not attempt gymnastic stunts in the home—such as standing on ladders, chairs and window sills—unless you have a firm foundation or are otherwise protected from falling.

Keep your medicine chests inaccessible to children and never take any medicine yourself from a bottle in the dark.

Do not start your automobile in a closed garage.

Do not point a gun at anyone, even though you are sure "it isn't loaded."

Use reasonable care and caution in performance of your daily chores or duties.

KEEP ON WITH SCHOOLS.

Along about this time of the school year the plans are being made for the year ahead.

If you are in doubt as to whether or not you are to continue with school next year, let us decide the questions for you right now. Keep going. Get all the schooling that you can.

Your success in years to come will not be based upon your education, but education will aid you to develop the talents and abilities which you have. Education will be recommendation to you that will be of wonderful assistance.

There is doubtless too much of a tendency to judge the benefits of education from a monetary standpoint. Education brings a broader outlook, a better vision of life and with these things come happiness in later years.

When the question of more education is raised this spring—decide to take all that you can get.—Grand Rapids (Minn.) Herald-Review.

NO BUTTER ON THE FARM.

The dairy division of the State Department of Agriculture has been making a survey in the agricultural counties in northern Michigan to determine what the farmer's bread is buttered with. The investigation when completed will cover the entire farming area of the State, it is said. But to date, the trade of 87 stores in rural areas of 16 counties has been checked, revealing that farmers were buying more butter substitutes than butter.

The fact that should impress these farm bloc statesmen in Congress who have been dragging on the necessity of boosting the tariff on all the raw materials that go into the manufacture of butter substitutes. It may help them to understand that the effect of their efforts can not be otherwise than to increase the cost of living for those least able to pay and those who assume that burden include a goodly number of farmers.—Detroit News.

BEANS, BEANS, BEANS.

In 1921 Michigan farmers planted 250,000 acres of beans. At that time and since there was a good market. Canners through advertising, induced more people to eat beans. This year, so far as it is possible to determine, Michigan farmers intend to plant 798,000 acres of beans. That is more than three times the 1921 acreage. What will be the result? What has been the result?

Not only does the Michigan bean compete with those grown in several other states, but beans are also grown in foreign countries, particularly Manchuria. American farmers, many of them, held their beans for a higher price last fall. The result was that foreign farmers paid the $1.75 per cwt. tariff and sold many carloads of beans to American canners. If congress puts on the proposed $3.00 per cwt. tariff there will still be foreign beans available

BOYNE SCHOOL BOARD RECALLED

Three Members Voted Out in Special Election Last Monday.

One of the most bitterly fought campaigns in the history of Boyne City, was brought to a close on Monday, April 28th, when three members of the school board, Anne Boylan, S. B. Neymark and Dwight B. Herick, were recalled from office.

This election was brought about by a petition, in which these members were accused of handling the school funds in a manner not according to law, which accusations have been broadened, both by the press and local handbills. These allegations were denied by these members, offering the records of the board for inspection.

SAVINGS PASSBOOKS SOUGHT BY CROOKS

Use Them to Steal Money by Forged Slips — Should Be Guarded as Carefully as Cash.

Continual vigilance in safeguarding savings pass books, as well as blank and cancelled checks, against theft by crooks, who use this material in forgery operations, is urged on bank customers by James E. Baum, Deputy Manager of the American Bankers Association, in charge of its Protective Department. This department is continually vigilant in promoting means, both among bankers and the general public, to thwart the operation of bank crooks. It annually investigates hundreds of crimes against banks and is responsible for the majority of arrests among this class of criminals.

"In a large majority of cases of forgeries on checks or savings withdrawal orders investigated by the American Bankers Association, stolen blank checks or savings pass books were the forgers' chief stock in trade," Mr. Baum says. "In many instances the temptation presented through the careless handling by depositors of cancelled or blank checks or pass books so that they fell into the hands of others was the immediate stimulus for the dishonest people to commit their first criminal offense."

Banks should educate their depositors to exert the same degree of care in handling these instruments and to avoid leaving them about unguarded as they exercise in respect to actual money because they represent money, he declares.

For dealing with the bank robbery situation, Mr. Baum recommends the use of electrical alarms actuated by any tampering with the wires or mechanism and also wider adoption of the plan of state police forces now employed in a few states, declaring that last year in seven eastern states where state police forces were maintained there were only 20 bank holdups as against 154 similar attacks perpetrated against banks in five states in the central and far west, where banks are denied the advantages of the speedy and coordinated action given by state-wide police forces.

"The records of the American Bankers Association Protective Department reveal that for many years the odds in favor of state police protection have been at least 8 to 1 when measured by the experience of banks in states where efficient police protection is missing in the rural districts," he says.

THE QUALITIES OF LEADERSHIP

By JOHN G. LONSDALE
President American Bankers Association

Leadership and success, in a general way, are synonymous. They are both founded upon simple codes of thought and action, upon the realization that the man who wins the laurels must be a doer, not a waiter, that application of energy, not time or luck, is what counts most. A rabbit's foot is a poor substitute for horse sense.

Both success and leadership, if they be of the highest quality, are the result of service to humanity. Service has been aptly described as "the supreme commitment of life." Analyze the lives and times of all great leaders of history and you will find that those whose names are enshrined in the hearts of their countrymen are those who sought to render a needed service to the populace.

Leadership, like success, need not, however, be international or national to achieve great results. There is room for each of us to be a leader in his community. In his work, in his church, and in various organizations.

One of the indispensable qualities of leadership is the ability to persist steadfastly in the face of discouragements. If George Washington had not possessed the quality of persistence, he and his soldiers would never have survived the hunger and privations which were theirs at Valley Forge.

We have too many young men and young women these days saying a job cannot be done. Too many spend their time explaining why a thing can't be done, instead of saying, with firm resolve, that it can be done, and then going out and doing it. Anything that ought to be done is capable of being done. And anything worth doing at all is worth doing well. The fellow who handles a little job in a big way is always on the road to greater fields.

BANKERS STUDY CHAIN BANKING

The Economic Policy Commission of the American Bankers Association has been specifically instructed by the general convention of the association to study and report on chain and group banking developments, and also on the proposal of the Comptroller of the Currency for an extension of branch banking in the national banking system, to permit those banks to conduct branches in the trade areas surrounding their locations.

SECTIONS WHERE SAVINGS DECREASED

A regional analysis of the drop in the nation's savings deposits in banks, as recently reported by the American Bankers Association's Savings Bank Division in its annual compilation for 1929 showing the first recession in national savings in the twenty years during which it has published this data, reveals that all sections except the New England and the Pacific States groups recorded losses.

The published figures showed that on June 29, 1929, the total savings deposits in banks and trust companies of continental United States stood at $28,217,658,000, which was $195,305,000 below the similar total for 1928, when there was an increase of $2,300,000,000.

The regional analysis by state groups discloses, however, that the six New England states as a group gained more than $88,000,000 in savings and 152,984 in savings depositors, while the seven Pacific states as a group gained over $79,000,000 in deposits and nearly 278,000 in number of depositors. The gains in these two sections, however, were smaller than the gains recorded there for 1928. The sections which showed losses are the Middle Atlantic States, Southern States, East Central States and the West Central States.

Study Soils' "Behavior"

The Massachusetts Institute of Technology, in co-operation with the bureau of public roads of the United States Department of Agriculture, is conducting scientific soil studies with the object of bringing about improvements in the design and construction of highways. Samples of soils from all parts of the country are now being collected. One of the most important objects of the research is to develop suitable factors on the "behavior" of soils. These studies, it is expected will provide engineers with definite means of identifying soils with each other and to adapt design and construction to certain characteristics.

PLEAD SUPPORT OF HOME BUYING

W. H. CASLOW ADDRESSED TWO GATHERINGS WEDNESDAY.

Charlevoix Merchant Minute Mens' Assn. Sponsored Gatherings in Move Towards Home Support.

Practically every business house in the city was represented at a banquet-meeting sponsored by the Charlevoix Merchant Minute Mens' association at the Charlevoix hotel last Wednesday evening. W. H. Caslow, lecturer of radio station W-A-S-H, Grand Rapids, spoke on the topic, "Main Street or Wall Street, Which?" Mr. Caslow has devoted the past six years to an exhaustive study of his subject, and in addition to broadcasting over two stations, has also lectured in various cities of the state.

His first lecture was given before Charlevoix business men and their wives at the Charlevoix hotel. The large crowd present enjoyed the excellent banquet, which was nicely prepared and well served. In his talk, Mr. Caslow was right to the point, emphasizing the necessity that merchants live up to the great principles laid down by the founders of the nation, and set themselves as an example for their patrons to follow.

The high school gymnasium was nearly crowded for the second lecture despite inclement weather. The gathering listened with deep interest to the speaker's general lecture which dealt with fundamentals in merchandising. The talk was primarily designed to bring about a better understanding between the general public and the merchants who serve them. Mr. Caslow's definition of business, "The exchange of what I have or do for what I want or need," suggested that every person in business is affected, no matter to what extent, is affected by whatever affects business.

"Business," the speaker said, "has but two divisions, which are: independent and syndicate. The independent business is everything in business that democracy is to our government, while the syndicate business is imperialism and takes in chain stores, mail order houses, etc. A new syndicate is organizing now an 80-million-dollar farm corporation among some of the central states," he stated as evidence that syndicate interests are entering other fields of endeavor.

Mr. Caslow cited examples in supporting his contention that there was no economy in buying from chain stores or from other syndicates, and told of thousands of men who were out of work due to "so-called economy methods used by Wall Street." Buying power was compared with military power and numerous historical and biblical instances were recited showing the great evils of this system.

"Do you know that there are three different sizes of Campbell's pork and beans on the market and that these three different sizes are especially made for syndicate buying? How many housewives here know the weight of one of these cans? None! I'm not surprised—you think you are getting such goods cheaper and saving money when in reality you are paying more money for less merchandise," stated the speaker in concluding his talk to the women.

Quoting the preamble of the Constitution of the United States, he brought out six points which he stated were not in the least heeded by the syndicate organization and which would mean the destruction of the workingman's liberty should such condition continue to exist. "I am not fighting for the independent merchant! No, I am fighting for democracy in business. I am fighting for your children and for my little girl in Grand Rapids, so that when they become men and women and have to get out in this world they will have as good or better chance to make a living and to start a business of their own than you or I have had. I hate communism and imperialism and that is just what this country is coming to if the syndicate menace is not wiped out."

The lecture was an excellent analysis of the history of business down to date, and ended with a powerful appeal for real co-operation between independent retail merchants and their customers.

Monday, May 26, is the date when Dr. Leahy, the Optometrist, will be at the Hotel Charlevoix. Last visit until September.—Adv. 20t2.

CHARLEVOIX HAS POPULATION GAIN

REPORT SHOWS INCREASE OF 29 SINCE 1920 CENSUS.

Charlevoix Township Increases 47 and Norwood Held Its Own—Other Precincts All Lose.

Preliminary reports on the census of Charlevoix county, given out through the courtesy of Fred N. Potter of Alpena, supervisor of census for this district, are now practically complete. Only one of the 25 precincts have not been reported at this time.

With but three exceptions, the city of Charlevoix and Charlevoix and Norwood townships, every precinct in the county has shown a heavy decline in population during the past ten years. Charlevoix's increase was light, only 29, but shows that the city is at least holding its own. The same is true with Charlevoix township, which shows an increase of 47. Norwood held its own.

Boyer City was the heaviest loser, showing a decline of 1,635 in four wards. Next in line is East Jordan, which dropped from 2,428 to 1,514, a total of 914. The decrease for the county, excluding Chandler township, is 3,870. Figured from the totals reported, the population in 1920 was 15,429, as compared with 11,859 for 1930.

Following are tabulated figures, showing the 1920 and 1930 population of each precinct:

M-66 EXTENSION WILL BE MARKED

DELEGATION GIVEN ASSURANCE AT LANSING MONDAY.

Extension from East Jordan to Charlevoix on New Highway Department Maps in July.

Efforts covering a period of several years bore fruit Monday when a group of representatives from Charlevoix county were assured by the Michigan highway department at Lansing, that the extension of M-66 from Mancelona through East Jordan to Charlevoix had been accepted and that the highway would be marked within a short time.

In the representation at Lansing was the personnel of the Charlevoix county road commission, including R. T. Davis, county road superintendent, and W. E. Byers of Charlevoix; Samuel Rogers of East Jordan; Frank Wangeman of Boyne City; also Herman Myers of Boyne Falls, and Frank F. Bird and William H. Wallace of this city.

The visiting delegation was told that orders would be given the highway department branch at Cadillac to mark the extension from East Jordan to Charlevoix at once. The highway is now designated from Mio to the south city limits of East Jordan. M-66 will appear marked to Charlevoix on the issue of state highway department maps to be distributed in July, although the department will not take over maintenance of the route until next year.

This new trunk line gives East Jordan and Charlevoix a direct connection and short-cut from U. S. 131 to U. S. 31, and will mean the diversion of much summer traffic down through the beautiful Jordan river valley and on to Charlevoix. During the past several years, much work has been done on the route. With the exception of a short stretch of one-way road through the Green river territory, the highway is wide. The entire route from Charlevoix to Mancelona is in excellent shape.

Building of the Ironton-East Jordan shore road was done in anticipation of the state routing M-66, and it is of considerable satisfaction to those interests who have worked hard on the project to be able to announce its acceptance at the present time.

INFORMATION BUREAU TO GIVE AID

IS AVAILABLE TO CITIZENS OF CHARLEVOIX AND VICINITY.

Listing of Cottages, Rooms, Boats, Etc., With Complete Data Furnished Is Sought at Once.

Those having cottages, rooms or other accommodations to rent in Charlevoix or vicinity for the resort season of 1930 are requested to list them with the corresponding secretary of the Charlevoix Association of Commerce at the information bureau on Bridge street, as soon as possible.

Full details are desirable. State number of rooms, whether furnished or unfurnished, number of beds in each bedroom and whether single, twin, double or three-quarter, rate per person and for two in one room per night and by the week or month, if it is desired to rent for the latter periods; whether or not laundry facilities, such as stationary tubs, water-heaters, etc., are available; the street number of the property, or its location with respect to intersecting streets, whether or not there is a telephone and the number thereof, and, in case of a farm, its location with respect to nearby lakes, streams, etc., and how to reach it from the highway. It is especially asked that rural residents, willing to board and room summer visitors during the season, list their places with the secretary. There is a considerable demand for this class of accommodation and such farms as will be available this season will be furnished with questionnaires to fill out, detailing what they have to offer. These questionnaires will be sent in to the information and Travel Bureau of the Detroit News and placed on file for the inspection of prospective patrons.

If you have a boat or a bicycle or a car to rent during the season, or an article of furniture, list this also at the information bureau, describing it in detail and stating rate or price.

Card catalogue records will be made of all this information for the benefit of those inquiring at the bureau during the summer for accommodations of various kinds.

DEER CLOSING STARTS CONTEST

Emmet Supervisors Ask That County Be Kept Closed Five Years.

The state conservation commission was faced by one of the bitterest problems it will have to deal with before next fall when it was confronted with a petition from the Emmet county board of supervisors asking that the county be closed to deer hunting for another five years. Public sentiment is split in the northern counties of the lower peninsula on the subject of closed deer seasons and the commission visions itself in the center of a hot controversy.

Action on the Emmet petition was deferred until a comprehensive survey of the situation in the entire northern part of the peninsula can be made so that the policy which is finally adopted will meet conditions generally rather than locally. The members were informed that the deer population is increasing in certain sections to the point where there is a question as to whether the areas will support them.

NURSERY WILL ADD ARBORETUM

IRONTON SHOW PLACE TO START REAL TREE MUSEUM.

Plant of George Hemingway is Wonders of North—Public Invited to Visit It.

Word comes from the Charlevoix County Nurseries of the plan to have an Arboretum—which may have national fame.

The Arboretum will feature evergreens of many varieties and it is the purpose of the plan to have every known variety of evergreen which will stand the severe winters of northern Michigan.

Edwin L. Nott, landscape architect of Chicago, has been engaged to prepare the plan for the planting.

George R. Hemingway, of Oak Park, Ill., who is the owner of the Charlevoix County Nurseries, advises that the development of the Arboretum will take many years. It will have an educational purpose and will be in reality a tree museum. The public who are interested will be at all times welcomed to view the specimens.

The nursery contains some 70 varieties of flowering shrubs, ornamental trees and evergreens.

It is beautifully located on Lake Charlevoix, just east of Ironton Ferry.

The nursery was established 17 years ago and is fulfilling a definite aim—namely, being real builders of beauty.

The Charlevoix County Nurseries have long been a show place of this Northern Michigan region and are visited annually by hundreds of local and out-of-state people. It not only serves the vicinity immediate to Charlevoix, but has become a factor in the beautification of Northern Michigan.

Mr. Hemingway's plan to add an Arboretum on his beautiful property on the Peninsula across from Ironton bids to bring still greater fame to Charlevoix county.

BOYNE CAPTURES BIG TRACK EVENT

CLASS C CHAMPS BEST ALL AROUND TEAM AT PETOSKEY.

Score Heavily in Field Events — Stroud Marked Up 3 Points for Charlevoix's Only Score.

(From Petoskey Evening News.)

Coming along in her usual crashing way in the field events, Boyne City high school's championship track and field team won the annual Petoskey Invitational spring meet last Saturday afternoon, scoring a total of 49 points. The competition was the hardest of any of the meets in years, but Coach Brotherton's thin cnds proved their worth by scoring in a large number of events. Their best effort was in the shot where they took three places for a total of nine points. Second honors went to East Jordan with 25 points, while Harbor Springs was third with 20. Ike Tillotson's Gaylord team counted 12½ points and Charlevoix had 3. Petoskey, entered for the competition, counted 33½ points, mainly in the track events. Petoskey won the half mile relay and took the first three places in the mile.

When the track events were finished the standings were as follows: Petoskey 26½, East Jordan 19, Boyne City 17½, Harbor Springs 7, Gaylord 4, Charlevoix 3. Boyne then took advantage of her strong entries in the field events to slowly forge ahead. She won the broad jump, javelin, three places in the shot, the pole vault and third in the discus.

While the time and distance scored was not record breaking in many events, there was some good time registered. The 120-yard low hurdles, a purely class C event, went to Van Hoosen of Boyne City, who clipped about a second and a half off the time of Cadillac record. He ran the event in 15.4 seconds.

The summary:

Discus—Bradley, Harbor Springs, 107 ft. 4½ in.; Cook, Gaylord; Walker, Boyne City; Porter, Petoskey.

High Jump — Fausch, Harbor Springs, 5 ft. 3½ in.; Van Hoosen, Boyne City; Wells, Petoskey, and Fox, Boyne City, tied for remaining places.

Shotput—Walker, Boyne City, 39 ft., 2 in.; Van Hoosen, Boyne City; Bradley, Harbor Springs; Fox, Boyne City.

Pole Vault — Tompkins, Boyne City, 9 ft. 4½ in.; Gray, Gaylord; and Wells, Petoskey, tied for 2nd and 3rd; Kitzman, East Jordan.

100-Yard Dash—Quinn, East Jordan, 10 4-5; Webert, Petoskey; Taylor, Harbor Springs; Tompkins, Boyne City.

Mile Run — Huffard, Petoskey, 5:09.4; Blanchard and Elkins, Petoskey; Gray, Gaylord.

He tried to readjust himself between the time of this last visit with Carla and his departure for home. His effort was an honest one, a struggle to fit himself to certain demands which he accepted as necessary and inevitable. He was sure of himself as he returned to Claire. It was almost an exultant sureness, which left upon him no sign of spiritual or physical torment. He was possessed now by memories which blessed even as they burned. It was as if some where in him were a little song, a part of himself, which said: "I have a room whereunto no one enters save I, alone. There sits a memory on a throne. There my life centers." Carla was the memory. He made no effort to turn away from the truth, or harbor himself in his contemplation of it. Some one had said that memory was a paradise from which Fate could not drive one. And the room which had built itself in his heart could never be leveled or taken away from him. It was indestructible, like a soul.

Claire, in a way, became the keeper at the door. Because of her he had closed it, and because of her he would never open it except to himself. He could conceive of no one but Claire in this sacred place. A long time ago, when he was a boy, there had been in his room a picture of an angel with snowy wings and golden hair. She seemed to be floating through clouds, and he remembered that his first ideas of heaven came from this angel and that she inspired him to ask questions which his mother sometimes found difficult to answer. The picture had always remained in his mind. It recurred to him in thinking of Claire. It was impossible for him to feel resentment against his fate, or even a desire to change it, in going to her. There were occasional women at whose breasts the world found its spiritual glory. Claire, he knew, was one of them—like the angel in his room. It was he who had been the mist in their lives, and this defect in himself he was prepared to remedy—if he could.

He read Claire's telegram many times on the way south. He tried to read between its lines. He tried to understand more clearly the change which had come over her. Derwent had told him how she had watched where the water roared out of the chasm. "Whiter than death, as if she would die unless you came out alive," he had said. And Carla: "She loves you. She wants you." And now her own words on the yellow paper in his hand, entreating him to come to her as quickly as he could. There was a strange slinging in his heart and a dull grief, as if she should love him—at last—like that. After years of waiting, and hoping, and of yearning for a woman to be a part of him—children—a home he had dreamed of—He folded the telegram for a last time and put it in his pocket.

He was seeing the tears in Carla's eyes.

CHAPTER XIII

Paul had told only Claire that he was on his way to her. At the station a familiar face came out of the hurrying streams of humanity to greet him. It was Jimmy Ennerdale, whose presence always gave him greater comfort than that of any other man. He had known Ennerdale for a long time, and Claire had grown up with him like a sister. Jimmy had always seemed older than Paul, with a premature grayness in his hair and a slight stoop in his thin, sensitive body. His affection for Paul possessed the unchangeable quality of the marble out of which he was slowly and persistently chiseling form for himself as a sculptor. He had been working in the West, and Paul had not seen him for a year. Ennerdale had grown older in that time, he thought. His face was thinner, his hair whiter over his temples, his physical tone even less robust than when he had seen him last. He had the same quick, nervous alertness about him, and it did Paul good to see the gladness in his face as they gripped hands. He knew that Claire, unable to meet him herself, had sent Jimmy in her place.

"She is like a child, waiting for you," said Ennerdale, as they rode toward his home. "I was there with mother last evening, and she asked me to meet you. She cried and laughed and is damnable happy. If you don't mind, I'd like to come over when you two have settled down, and have you tell me about this monstrous happen- ing. May 12?"

"You know you don't need an invitation," said Paul. "Come tomorrow." He had an odd feeling of not knowing what was going to happen as he left Ennerdale and entered his home. He could feel himself under a strain caused by the nearness of explanations which it was Claire's right to hear and his duty to make. It would be hard to talk about Carla, as he must, even should Claire in her wisdom ask for nothing.

Claire was waiting for him in her room. This act of thoughtfulness pleased him. She knew that in a peculiarly embarrassing moment they should be alone. Both were sensitive, each a little fearful of what one or the other might betray in their first greeting. He was thinking this when he went to her. As her door closed behind him, his first impression was of a room filled with flowers. Claire, like Carla, loved them. The air was delicately fragrant with their perfume. Claire was bending over a mass of white roses when he entered, and then came toward him with both hands held out. She did not put her arms about him or offer him her lips, yet never had he seen such a light of happiness shining in her eyes. He made a movement to kiss her, but she drew back in such a way that her act seemed scarcely to be repelling him.

"Not now, Paul. Not until we have talked. Then, if you want to kiss me, you may." She was astoundingly free of the tension which he had anticipated, and as she stood with her fingers clasped warmly about his, telling him how glad she was that he was alive, and how doomed to despair and unhappiness she would have been if he had not lived to return to her, he wondered if it were Claire, his wife, who was talking to him, or another Claire—some one he had never known. For she seemed, all at once, to have drawn herself farther away from him than she had ever been, but in such a sweet and friendly way that the change in her seemed one which could not bring hurt with it.

It was Claire's light that was hardest. It was going to take a Joan of Arc courage to say what she had planned to say.

She made him sit near her, so they were facing each other.

"Paul, we are going to be honest. You will promise me that?"

He knew he was preparing to equivocate as he gave his word. A lie to save Claire from hurt was more creditable than truth. The impulse to shield her, to keep from her all suspicion of his love for Carla, swept over him as he looked at her. She was like the flowers on the table, as easily crushed, he thought. More vividly than ever he saw the difference between her and Carla. Carla would fight on through tragedy, even to death. Claire, suffering more, would droop and fade like a petal in a rose, shrinking from the quicker and more physical action which the other would find for herself. He was not analyzing himself, or her. The thought—like a picture—impressed itself upon him, and Claire, gazing at him in these epic, introspective moments, as if partly seeing the swift visioning in his mind, surprised him by saying:

"Paul, I wonder if you know, just how much I honor and respect you. I wonder if you realize how fine you are. I have failed to play my part—as your wife. I have not let you know these things as I should. The fruit in one's life is not yours. It is mine. I think I could have made you love me. Yet I saw the unfairness of it unless I could make myself love you first. I hoped and prayed for that."

"There wasn't love when we were married, on either side. You did not love me, not in the way you wanted to love a woman, and my feeling for you was an immeasurable respect and admiration for an honorable gentleman. It seems trite and superficial to say that the interests of our families brought us together, does it not? But it is true. I wanted to love you. But I discovered—after a little while—that something was in my way."

"I know," he found himself saying. "You couldn't love an animal, Claire."

"I was that, until the day you came to the Mistastash. I have been blind and brutal. God knows I am only half worthy of you!"

"And Carla?"

So softly did his wife speak Carla's name that for a moment it seemed as if he had not heard it.

"We have promised ourselves to be honest," she continued. "Do you remember a letter I wrote you from Paris in which I said I was coming to you and that I was sure a more important thing would happen for us in your woods than any journey, like your promised one around the world, could give?"

"Yes, I remember."

"Do you know—now—why I told you that?"

"I have only wondered."

"It was because I had seen, because I had read between the lines of your letters, because I knew at last a great love had come into your life, and that Carla Haldan had brought it to you. You do not love me. You love Carla. And, loving her, you would sacrifice everything for my sake."

His fabric of lies was gone, his soul laid bare under the gaze of his wife's eyes.

"I want to hear you say it, Paul," she was repeating Carla's words whispered to him in the blackness of the earth. "That is why I came to you there. A woman may hide her love from a man, but not from another woman, and it was impossible for Carla to keep her secret from me. Yours was still more open, though I saw you making a magnificent fight. I know, Paul. But I want to hear it from your lips. I must hear it. Do you love Carla Haldan?"

"Yes, I love her."

"More than any other woman in the world?"

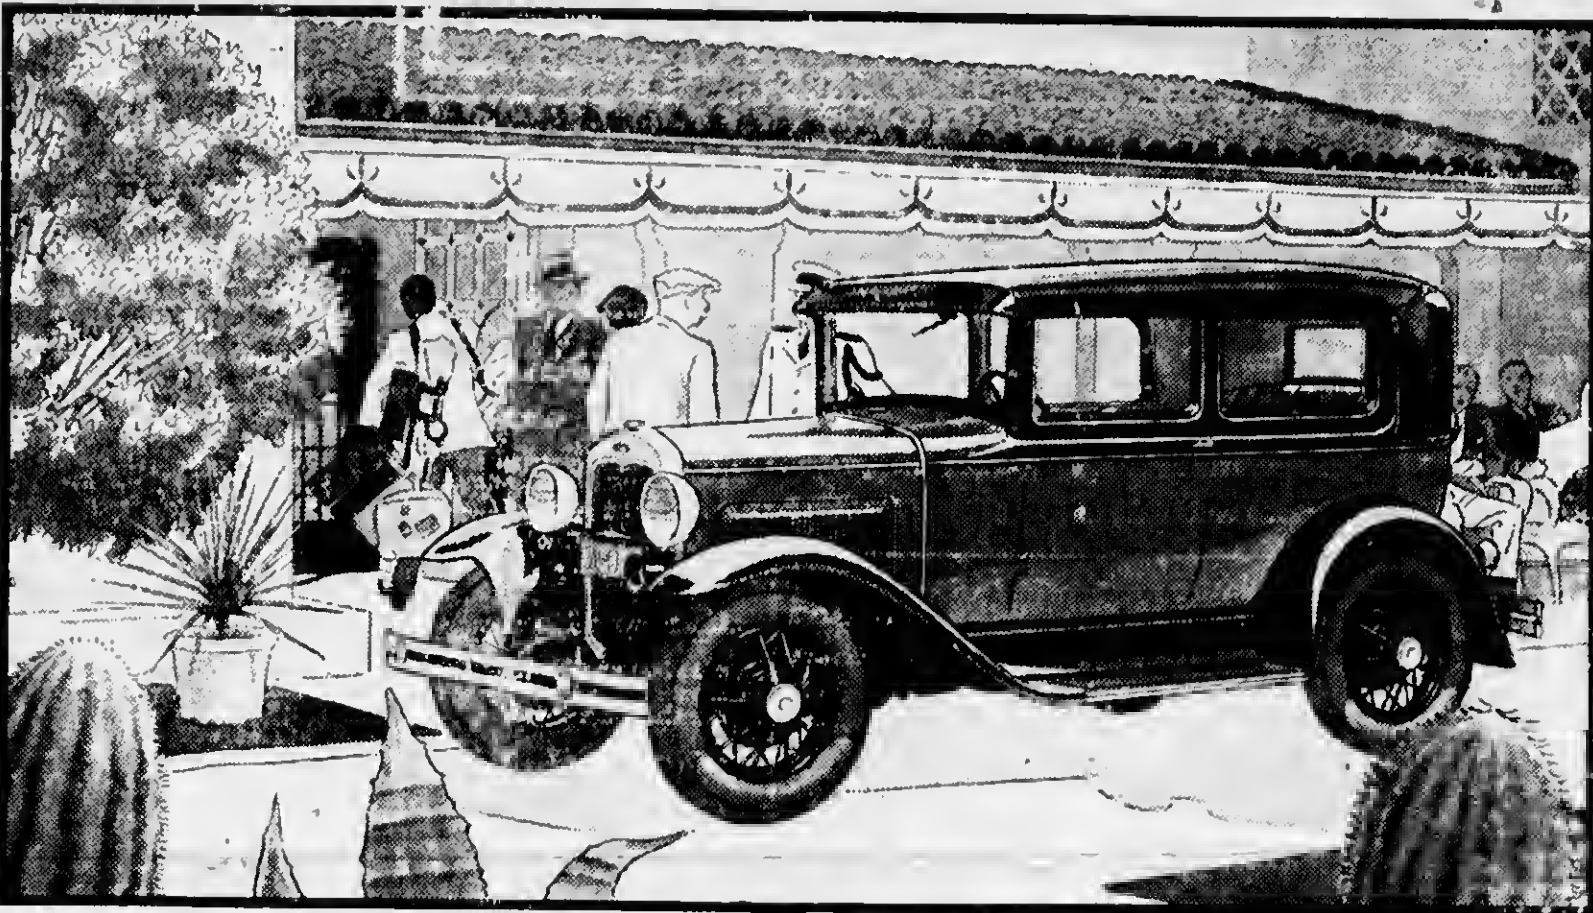

"I could only love one woman in that way."

He was conscious of having struck a deadly blow, a hurt he would rather have died than inflict upon Claire. It had dragged itself from him in spite of his determination, and he waited for his punishment, its effect on her. Claire's eyes did not waver. She did not flinch. A starry, radiant light came into her face, and she gave a breathless, half-articulate cry, not of shock or of pain, but of joy. He saw the blood flushing her cheeks, the tenseness leaving her body, and they sat for a time in silence, neither making an effort to speak.

Even "dyed-in-the-wool" oil engineers get a thrill out of this test . . .

It is a simple experiment, but the dramatic results excite even oil experts themselves.

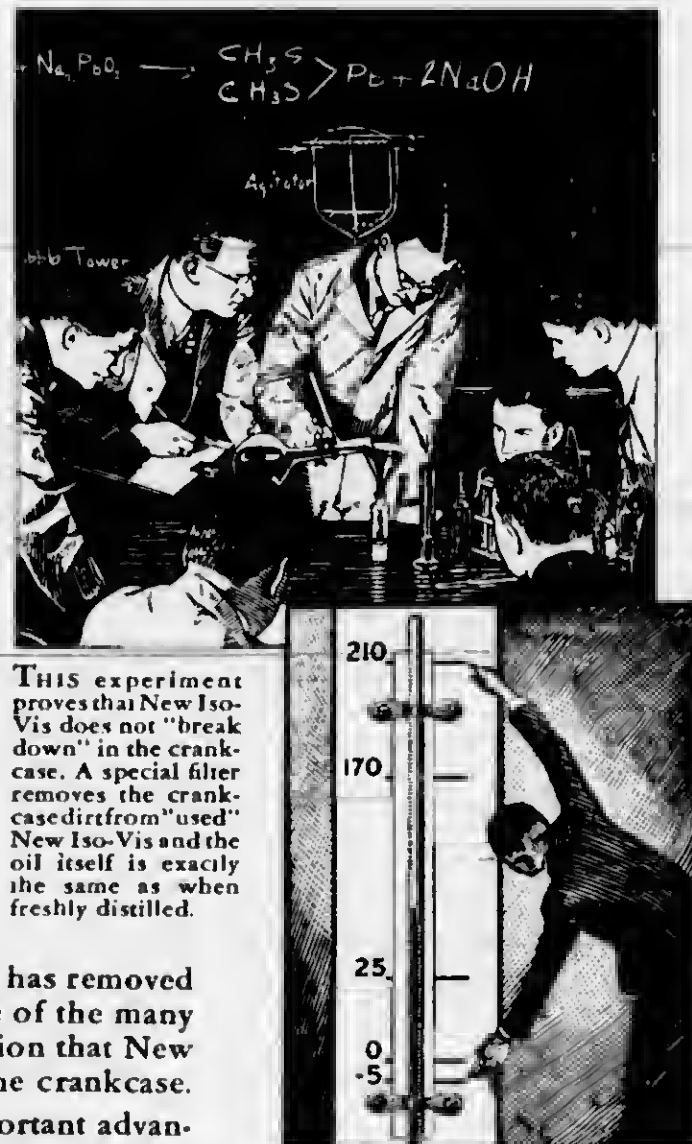

A quart of "used" New Iso-Vis, black with the usual crankcase dirt, is drained from a car after many hundreds of miles of driving. Five minutes later—we have a quart of oil that might have come straight from the refinery. It has the clear amber color. The same heavy body.

Yet it is exactly the same quart of oil that was just taken from the crankcase!

What has happened is simply that a special clay filter has removed the dust and dirt. This is one of the many tests that prove beyond question that New Iso-Vis will not thin out in the crankcase.

New Iso-Vis has other important advantages. It brings a radical reduction of carbon deposit. And it gives lubrication over a wider range of temperatures. This important combination of qualities means less wear and longer life for your engine.

New Iso-Vis Motor Oil is on sale at all Standard Oil dealers and service stations.

This experiment proves that New Iso-Vis does not "break down" in the crankcase. A special filter removes the crankcase dirt from "used" New Iso-Vis and the oil itself is exactly the same as when freshly distilled.

THE LONG lubricating range of New Iso-Vis covers the whole thermometer. Some oils are defeated by heat—others by cold. New Iso-Vis fights friction at both extremes.

MICHIGAN RESORTS TO HAVE RADIO AID

Michigan Tourist Association Program Planned From Chicago.

A Michigan summer scene painted on spacious walls, and the use of plants and summer furniture to add a realistic touch, have attracted wide attention to the Chicago offices of the Michigan Tourist and Resort association, according to Hugh J. Grey, secretary-manager.

The offices are located at 161 No. Michigan blvd. A big Neon electric sign calls attention to the place from the outside.

The radio program is now under way. Two programs a week will be given over WGN, Chicago Tribune station. On Tuesdays between 7 and 7:30 p. m. and Fridays between 10:30 and 11 p. m., a 50-word announcement will be given, calling attention to the Chicago office, and offering free information relative to all sections of Michigan. These programs will continue until Friday, June 20, inclusive.

Starting Wednesday, May 14, over WMAQ, Chicago Daily News station, and continuing every Wednesday for 10 weeks, from 7:15 to 7:30 p. m., the program will open with orchestra theme song, "I Want to Go Back to Michigan." The orchestra will continue playing except for three announcements by Bill Hay, noted announcer for that station.

FLOWER SPECIALIST WILL VISIT COUNTY

Three Meetings Arranged for Charlevoix, East Jordan, Boyne City.

Care and management of the house plants, soils and fertilizers for flowering plants, care of lawns, annuals, perennials, insects and diseases, bulbs, and propagation are some of the subjects that will be discussed at a series of flower meetings to be conducted in the cities of Charlevoix, East Jordan and Boyne City on Monday and Tuesday, May 19 and 20.

These meetings will be of particular interest to the city ladies as well as rural folks who are interested in making their homes attractive by the use of flowers, bulbs and shrubs, and in learning the proper sprays, cultural and soil conditions necessary for growth and development.

We are fortunate in having with us at this time Kenneth Post, extension specialist in floriculture of the Michigan State college who will lead the discussion and answer any questions or problems arising. It has only been recently that a floriculture specialist has been engaged by our State college, and Mr. Post comes to us very highly recommended, so it is hoped a large attendance will be present, for is there anyone who isn't interested in flowers?

The following are the meetings:

Charlevoix court house on Monday afternoon, May 19th, at 2:30 o'clock, eastern standard time.

East Jordan library on Tuesday forenoon, May 20th, at 10 o'clock, eastern standard time.

Boyne City library on Tuesday afternoon, May 20th, at 2:30 o'clock eastern standard time.

A cordial invitation is extended to any group of women, who are studying flowers within their organization and to all contestants in any home garden project or city beautification project that are being sponsored by different communities in the county.

If troubled with headache, dizziness, nervousness, or any other symptom of eyestrain, consult Dr. Leahy, the Optometrist, when he comes Monday, May 26, his last visit here until September.—Adv. 20t2.

FIRE THREATENED EASTPORT VILLAGE

Restaurant and Barn Destroyed There Last Monday Night.

The entire village of Eastport was threatened by fire, when the E. P. Hooper restaurant burned to the ground last Monday night, causing a loss of approximately $3,000 with insurance of $1,000. The fire is believed to have caught from a defective chimney.

The fire spread rapidly across the street to a barn owned by the Mrs. Gates estate and this also was destroyed. The flames ran through the grass, burning over several lots, before it was finally extinguished by conservation officer Andrew J. Dunsmore and a crew of men.

The Central Lake fire department was called, but on account of motor trouble, failed to get on the scene until it was too late to do any good. Had the wind been in the west, the entire village would probably have been destroyed.

The fire was seen for many miles around and a large crowd of spectators was soon on the scene.

Mr. Hooper is moving into his new quarters on U. S. 31 and will be ready for business within a couple of weeks, it is stated.—Central Lake Tarch.

INCONVENIENT, isn't it, to leave your housework in the midst of some important bit of cleaning, in order to answer the telephone at your neighbor's.

It is inconvenient for your neighbor, too.

A telephone is a Comfort, and a Convenience—and it is a Safeguard in case of emergency. It costs less than many of our smaller luxuries and really is a necessity of modern living.

COUNTY NORMAL NEWS.

Notice! County Normal alumni banquet at Hotel Noble Saturday evening, May 24, at 6 o'clock. Price $1.00. Have you made your reservation? If not, send in your ticket at once and insure yourself a pleasant evening.

A majority of the Normal graduates have already secured teaching positions for next year. The others hope to be placed before the end of the year.

A schedule of township day program exhibits has been received and various members of the class have been asked to act as judges. Other members hope to be able to visit some of the rural gatherings.

The Charlevoix County Normal library has been increased in number by 10 books presented to the department by Mrs. Charles Heise. Many thanks to the generous donor.

Last Friday afternoon one of the County Normal students, Miss Ruby Crump, attended Wildwood rural school to help judge the exhibit there. Extensive programs are being made by the three different groups of students in the County Normal to perfect the plans for the Farmers' Institute. The first program on Monday, May 19, 1930, runs as follows: morning, 9 o'clock, an address on "Soils," by a representative of the state department; an address on Home Management by a representative of the home economics department; a tree exhibit in charge of the county agent; pot-luck dinner at 12 o'clock in Charlevoix park. Afternoon, one o'clock, a talk on "Turkeys" by a representative of the largest turkey farm in the United States.

Half day teaching in the training room has commenced again. Miss Dorothy Smith taught Tuesday morning and Miss Carrie Taylor Wednesday afternoon.

Monday marked the beginning of the end, as they say. The last teaching period started then. The final period lasts for only three weeks, the last week being left free to the Normal students.

In all the practice teaching Mrs. Dick has endeavored to have everyone teach first grade reading. At the end of the last term everyone will have taught first reading.

Last Friday afternoon a musical program was arranged in the training room. Mrs. Dick introduced several different kinds of musical instruments to the pupils by means of the victrola. Then Miss LaCount led the pupils in singing several familiar songs.

Last Thursday evening a very enjoyable beach party was sponsored by Miss D. Smith, Mrs. Andrus and Miss Sutton. After a weiner and marshmallow roast singing and games occupied the rest of the evening.

On Thursday afternoon of last week Miss Sutton took charge of the classes while Miss Birge was absent. A little play illustrated brokerage on Wall Street as a part of the arithmetic class.

Spain! Historic old Spain! The land of sunshine and song, tambourines and castanets, beautiful senoritas and thrilling romance! Don't miss "The Belle of Barcelona" Friday evening, May 23rd, at 8:00 p. m. High school gym.—Adv. 2012.

"Adam and Fallen Man" was the subject of the lesson-sermon in all Christian Science churches on Sunday, May 11.

Among the citations which comprised the lesson-sermon was the following from the Bible: "Therefore the Lord God sent him forth from the garden of Eden, to till the ground from whence he was taken" (Gen. 3:23).

The lesson-sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Through discernment of the spiritual opposite of materiality, even the way through Christ, Truth, man will re-open with the key of divine Science the gates of Paradise which human beliefs have closed, and will find himself unfallen, upright, pure, and free, not needing to consult almanacs for the probabilities either of his life or of the weather, not needing to study brainology to learn how much of a man he is" (p. 171).

BARBARA WITHERS HAD BEST ESSAY

WON PRIZE FOR OUTSTANDING PAPER ON HEALTH.

Contest Conducted in Junior High Through Cooperation of Michigan Tuberculosis Assn.

The best paper written in the seventh grade in the essay contest "Protecting Health in Youth," was that prepared by Barbara Withers, according to the announcement of Principal Walter Alexander. The essay contest was developed in cooperation with the Michigan Tuberculosis association to demonstrate the value of health measures taken in youth in the prevention of tuberculosis.

Following is the prize winning essay:

"Protecting Health in Youth."

(By Barbara Withers.)

Tuberculosis is a disease caused by a growth in the lungs. There is a very small germ called the "tubercle bacillus." Some people may only be infected and never be sick with tuberculosis. Sometimes if the trouble has not been let go too far there may be hopes of the person being cured. If a person has been cured, scars are always left, and the germ may be found in these scars long after the person has been cured. Infection usually takes place in early childhood. Yet it may take place at almost any age, but usually beginning between the ages of ten and fifteen. Tuberculosis takes the greatest number of lives during the ages of 20 and 45 years. This is called the "tuberculosis peak," meaning the years it takes the greatest number of lives. The tuberculosis germ grows most rapidly when people overwork or the system is run down, or from dissipation, alcoholic excess, under-nourishment, unhealthy surroundings and from worry. Most of the people who have tuberculosis are weak and tired people. Before anyone becomes suspicious, people say they are lazy. It really isn't because they are lazy, but they are always so weak and tired that they can not work like other people. A person having tuberculosis usually has a slight cough and if this cough lasts for three or four weeks it is time to become suspicious. If a person has been spitting blood and though he has not been ill, the person should be very suspicious. It usually works on the person gradually. A person who is underweight and weak is to be suspicious also. Tuberculosis, if not cured or arrested, takes the enjoyment out of life. A person able to work and play gets much pleasure from life.

Rules to protect against tuberculosis:

Work and rest in a well ventilated room.

Eat clean, nourishing food.

Consult a doctor once a year at least.

OFFICER TELLS WHAT KONJOLA DID FOR HIM

He Found in New and Different Medicine Just What Was Needed to Restore His Health.

MR. DAVID E. SUMNER

"Konjola made me feel like a man remade and when I started taking this medicine I was about as sick and miserable as a man can be and keep going," said Mr. David E. Sumner, 1051 Boston street, Grand Rapids. "My stomach was completely out of order; my kidneys were weak, my back ached so badly I thought I could not stand it another minute. Every night I had to get up numerous times and the loss of sleep put me all out of condition for the day's work. My appetite was poor and I lost in weight and strength.

"To make matters worse, not a medicine I tried did the least bit of good. But what an experience I had when I started taking Konjola! I had not finished the first bottle before I began to feel better—and as the days passed, the improvement became more noticeable. In all, I took five bottles and they restored my health completely. I am eating like a wood-chopper, sleeping fine and that terrible backache is no more. I'll tell the world Konjola is the medicine for me, and I highly recommend it to other sufferers."

Many express amazement at the speed with which Konjola works. It does, but a course of from six to eight bottles is strongly recommended.

Konjola is sold in Charlevoix, Mich., at F. J. Fessenden's drug store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

County Club Champions Announced.

One of the largest events ever held in this county in connection with the boys' and girls' club program, was that of the county Achievement day held in the Charlevoix gymnasium on Saturday, May 10th. This was the first time that all the local champions from each club showed their winning exhibits together, and it made an exhibit of splendid quality indicating the fine workmanship done by these boys and girls.

The program proved to be very interesting to the audience of approximately 125 club members, parents and friends. Walter Gossip, district V. M. C. A. field man of Petoskey, gave a splendid address of special interest to boys and girls. The Brecheisen boys of near Bay Shore, entertained royally with their songs and music. Mrs. Ruth Schubert of Petoskey, formerly one of the state boys' and girls' club leaders, led the group in several songs as well as acting as judge of the clothing club exhibits. Another feature of the program was the style contest, in which each of the local style champions competed for the county championship. It was particularly impressive to see these girls walk out on the stage wearing the dress which they had made themselves, and in which was reflected an excellent choice of color and material. Arthur Schubert, county agricultural agent of Emmet county, judged the boys' handicraft exhibit, and gave a few brief remarks.

The county champions were awarded to the following:

Clothing Clubs.
First year champions, tied, Freda Greiner, Christina Withers, Charlevoix. Members of the Marion Center club.

Second year champion, Bessie Straw, Charlevoix. Member of the Marion Center club.

Style champion, Mary Perron, Charlevoix, member of the Marion Center club.

Handicraft Clubs.

First year junior champion, Lester Stevens, Walloon Lake, member of the Walloon Lake club.

First year senior champions, tied,

Jerome Kondzilla, Walloon Lake, member of the Walloon Lake club; Nelson Kirby, Charlevoix, member of the Norwood club.

Second year champion, Dale Kiser, East Jordan, member of Walker club. Third year champion, Gordon Boyer, East Jordan, member of Walker club.

The Charlevoix county granges were hosts to each of the county champions at their Pomona Grange, held at Deer Lake, Saturday night, and in recognition of the fine work done by each of the county winners were awarded special badges of unusual merit. The county granges can be commended very highly for their interest and cooperation in assisting materially in the success and efficiency of the club program.

Colt Breaking and Multiple Hitch Demonstrations.

Many farmers dread colt breaking more than anything else connected with farming. Often colts are not properly trained and cause much trouble thereafter. Yet it is rather a simple job if a regular colt breaking system is employed.

If you are interested in seeing a colt broken in a very few minutes and actually pulling a wagon, come to the following demonstrations and see H. F. Moxley, specialist of Michigan State college, show you his system, at the farms of:

First demonstration — Clarence Tooley, located about one mile south and west of Advance on Wednesday afternoon, May 21st, at 2 o'clock fast time.

Second demonstration — Orchard Bay farm, located about one mile south and east of Charlevoix on Wednesday afternoon, May 21st, at 2 o'clock fast time.

Also, at the above places several multiple hitch demonstrations will be shown, using 4, 5 and 6 horses. On many farms that are not adapted to the use of tractors, horse power can be used to better advantage by these combinations. Come to your nearest meeting and see the unbroken colts subdued.

AT THE MOVIES.
Mackaill Shines Alone As Star of "Hard to Get."

A picture filled with fun and delicious satire and love and a number of other things, called "Hard to Get," is coming to the Palace Theatre May 15-16.

It is said to be splendid entertainment and it is important because of the fact that it is Dorothy Mackaill's first independent film since her cinematic separation from Jack Mulhall, who used to appear with her in so many First National-Vitaphone offerings. Mulhall is also starring independently now.

The man who's making love to Mrs. Mackaill in "Hard to Get" is another Irish lad, however, Charles Delaney.

"Woman Trap" A Fast Moving Thrill Drama.

If you like the real, true-to-life melodrama such as might be taking place right around you at the present time you'll more than enjoy "Woman Trap," the fastest moving all-talking picture yet shown in Charlevoix.

"Woman Trap" is from the famous stage play "Brothers." With the widened scope of the motion picture it takes on more life and vividness. You will like it because it is human. In the Civil War, brother fought against brother. In life today you find brother fighting against brother. One in the ranks of the guardians of the law and the other in some "racket."

Evlyn Brent and Hal Skelly vie with each other for emotional honors. The rest of the cast is in perfect balance and the dialogue is vivid and intelligent. The picture will be shown at the Palace Theatre May 17 and 18.

The talking pictures are bringing out surprising dramatic talent in some of the youngest players on the screen. Evidence of this fact will be on view at the Palace Theatre May 20-21, when "Fast Life," a new First National-Vitaphone picture, is shown.

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Loretta Young, two of the youngest players in motion pictures, have dramatic roles of great power in this story of the younger generation. Chester Morris, of "Alibi" fame, is also cast in a feature role, the same part he played on the stage.

John Francis Dillon directed this all-dialogue picture.

WHITE PINE RUST CAMPAIGN PLANNED

GOVERNMENT MEN IN NORTH TO PREPARE FOR WORK.

Disease Spread by Black Currant,
Wild Currant and Gooseberry; Control Method Found.

The campaign to rid Michigan of the white pine blister rust spreading plants has again reached Northern Michigan with the arrival at Petoskey Saturday of F. E. Grimes of the Michigan department of agriculture, and W. F. Doyle, of the United States department of agriculture. The two are making a survey of the situation in Michigan and supervising the work of crews of trained men in uprooting of wild currants, wild gooseberries and black currants.

The campaign was carried on at Indian river last year, and much of the time this year has been spent in the upper peninsula, where the most extensive forest infection of white pine blister rust has been found. This large section stretches from Iron River on the south to Marquette on the north. Crews are now busy in that section.

Much effort will be put in Grand Traverse and Charlevoix counties this summer, infection having been discovered there. Another field just reported is at Wolverine and workers will be placed there. Most of the trouble in Emmet county is on the plains east of Brutus and the new plantings of white pine in various parts of the county also are to be inspected.

The white pine blister is spread, not by the pine trees themselves from tree to tree method, but rather by the wild currant and wild gooseberry. The rust will spread for fully a hundred miles from the trees to the bushes, but in finding its way back to other tree victims, does not leap a wide gap. Thus if all the rust spreading wild gooseberries and wild currants are removed from an area from 900 to 1,000 feet around the pine forests, and the cultivated black currants removed from an area a mile from the forest it will be fully protected.

The crews of men are concentrating on the wild gooseberry and wild currants with the 900 or 1,000 feet limit of the forests and on the cultivated black currant within the mile area. Once Michigan is thus cleared of the offending plants her white pine will be fully protected from this disease.

The black rust attacks the needles of the trees, spreads down to the trunk, cuts off the supply of sap and eventually destroys the tree. From that tree it spreads back to the plants and from them to some other pines.

NEW TELEGRAPH MACHINES READY

DUPLIX SIMPLEX OUTFITS
STARTED FRIDAY MORNING.

Use of New Equipment Marked As Important Event in History of Western Union.

Last Friday marked an important turning point in the history of the local office of the Western Union Telegraph Company. Beginning that day, an entirely new system of operation was employed, making it possible to expedite the handling of messages to and from distant points. The equipment installed here is known in telegraph circles as "The Duplex Simplex Automatic Telegraph System."

The familiar clicking of the Morse telegraph instruments will no longer be heard on the circuits terminating in the local office. This is the first importance change in the transmission of telegrams since the Western Union established an independent office in Charlevoix. The new system will treble the capacity of the telegraph circuits. The increase in the telegraph revenues here has warranted the installation of the latest telegraph equipment in use last Friday.

A unit of the Duplex Simplex Automatic Telegraph System consists of two printers and the necessary terminal apparatus connected to a single wire between two stations with a capacity of 120 messages per hour, 60 messages in each direction transmitted simultaneously.

The Simplex printer and keyboard resembles a typewriter except that it is considerably larger in size. The keyboard has the same arrangement of key levers and letters as a typewriter. When the keys are depressed, combinations of impulses of electric current are automatically flashed many miles over the wire, received and interpreted in the form of large Roman letters which are printed upon a ribbon of gummed paper tape at the receiving station.

When telegrams are transmitted, the messages print simultaneously on the sending machine at the sending station and the machine at the receiving station. At the sending station, the tape from the printer falls into a tape receptacle where it can later be referred to if necessary. At the receiving station, the gummed paper tape upon which the messages are received is pulled through a moistener so the tape can be glued to the standard receiving blanks. A small thimble cutter is used by the receiving operator who skillfully applies the tape to the telegraph blanks and cuts the tape wherever necessary to put it in the standard message form.

For the past 20 years, various types of automatic telegraph equipment have been used in telegraph communication in the Western Union offices in larger cities, where an enormous amount of messages are handled daily, but the machines in operation here are the very latest development in printer telegraph equipment. The Simplex printer conducts greatly to speed and accuracy as well as to ease of operation. It has been adopted for general use by the West-

Seventy Voices in Chorus and Well Chosen Cast—Setting and Costumes Are Elaborate.

The May festival is an event in the life of most colleges that is looked forward to with increasing interest from year to year. Some high schools have similar activities. Charlevoix has never yet attempted such an extensive musical program, but the presentation of the "Belle of Barcelona" Friday evening approaches very nearly the requirements of such an event, and it will be long remembered by those who attend.

No expense has been spared in the stage setting and costumes, as this operetta is not being given as a money-making proposition. Preparation has been going on throughout the semester.

The chorus is made up of 70 voices and the cast has been chosen as follows:

Louis de Montero, wealthy plantation owner, Bill Novak; Gloria de Montero, his wife, Angie Scott; Margarita, an accomplished daughter, Dorothy Struthers; Mercedes, her sister, Lilace Johnston; Francisco de la Vega, chief inspector of the custom house, Lee Shapton; Pedro, manager of de Montero's plantation, Dudley Mattson; Emilio, a tiler, Bill Brown; Lieutenant Harold Wright, custom inspector from the United States, Floyd King; Miss Martha Matilda Weatherby, an English governess, Marian McKee; Patrick Malone, companion of Hal, Bob Foster; Dona Marcela, friend of Margarita, Esther Case; Dona Anita, friend of Margarita, Gwendolyn Miller; Don Juan, friend of Emilio, Ralph Lemieux; Don Jose, friend of Emilio, Robert McCall; Captain Colton of the cruiser Montana, David Coulter.

The musical director, Mrs. McKee, has put an untiring effort into the perfecting of this operetta, and with her ability and talent, the production is an assured success. Mrs. A. J. Stelter will accompany the singers at the piano and many of the teachers are assisting in the various details of the work.

The setting of the story is in Spain and the scenes have been made as realistic as possible.

May 23rd is the date, and the school gymnasium the place. Plan to come out and enjoy an evening of music and fun with our high school young people.

TWO INJURIES IN SUNDAY SMASH-UP

Petoskey Youth Arrested as "Hit and Run" Driver.

In a car crash at the corner of State street and Garfield avenue at about 1:30 Sunday morning, Edna Knudsen and Joe Arvilla of Charlevoix, received injuries which later proved to be minor. Both were unconscious when nearby residents reached them, but later recovered. Douglas Knudsen, Edna's brother, escaped injury. The car was badly wrecked.

It is alleged that Thomas McCabe, son of Mr. and Mrs. George McCabe, Petoskey, driver of the other machine involved, left the scene without offering assistance. He was arrested Monday after his identity had been established, and Tuesday morning in Justice Robert Withers' court, waived examination on the charge preferred against him. He was released under $500 bond to appear in circuit court on Monday, May 26th.

The accident was indeed unfortunate for all interested. It is said that both machines were traveling at excessive speed. Within the past two weeks complaints have been made against Arvilla for speeding with a motorcycle. Our young people drive too fast without thinking of the consequences of possible accidents. McCabe's actions, if charges made against him are true, looked hasty. A few minutes time getting an injured person to a hospital may mean the difference between life and death. Both injured persons were unconscious immediately following the accident and it was several minutes before the full extent of their injuries were known.

CHEBOYGAN SPELLERS DEFEATED CHARLEVOIX

Their Five Contestants Best in Each Grade—Written Test This Week.

In an oral spelling contest held last Wednesday evening at the local gymnasium between pupils of the fourth to and including the eighth grades of Charlevoix and Cheboygan schools, the visitors walked away with all honors.

The contests were held under the supervision of Supt. Titus of Cheboygan and M. Otterbein of Charlevoix. A crowd estimated at 250 was in attendance. In every instance, the five spellers chosen from the Cheboygan grades out-spelled the local contestants.

A written contest for all members of the same grades as above mentioned was held on Tuesday of this week. Supt. Otterbein went to Cheboygan to pronounce words for the contestants there, while Supt. Titus acted in a similar capacity here. Results of the contests are not available at this time.

TWO AIR TRIPS DAILY PROMISED

MICH. AIR EXPRESS DOUBLES SERVICE AND REDUCES RATES.

New Schedule and Lower Rates Become Effective Sunday, May 18—Morning Ship at 6:23.

Radical changes in the schedules and rates are announced by Jack Byrne, president of the Michigan Air Express. Starting Monday, May 18, two round trips are being flown daily between Grand Rapids and Petoskey. Both passenger and express rates were to be greatly reduced on the same date.

"The unavoidable preliminary work in the establishment of the airline has all been completed during the past three months," Byrne stated. We deliberately began operating during the winter when conditions would be at their worst for a scheduled airline.

"Three months of work have perfected our system of handling passengers and express. Weather reports from airport to airport while the ship is operating have been made part of the routine of our office.

"In short, during the time when it is most difficult to maintain an airline efficiently, we have put the Michigan Air Express on an absolutely efficient basis.

"The Competition of this preliminary work, and the purchase of two Stinson six-place cabin monoplanes has made the change in schedule and the rate-cut possible."

Starting Sunday, the schedule of ships to and from Charlevoix will become effective as follows:
Northbound, arrive 6:23 a. m., leave 6:28 a. m.; southbound, arrive 7:24 a. m., leave 7:29 a. m.; northbound, arrive 1:07 p. m., leave 1:12 p. m.; southbound, arrive 2:14 p. m., leave 2:19 p. m.

Fog has been bothering the planes making the daily trips to Petoskey lately. Both Friday and the day before the Petoskey airport was so engulfed in fog that the plane pilots could not find the landing field and had to abandon their attempts.

NEW SUMMER CAMP TO OPEN JUNE 28

CAMP MANITOU AT IRONTON FOR ADULT VACATIONISTS.

G. D'Amico, Detroit, Owner of Former Camp Charlevoix Site, Plans Extensive Improvements.

A precedent in Northern Michigan summer camps will be established here June 28th, when Camp Manitou, catering to adult vacationists, is scheduled to be opened by G. D'Amico, wealthy Detroitier and present owner of the former Camp Charlevoix property on the south arm of Lake Charlevoix near Ironton.

Accompanied by Saul H. Rose of Detroit, who will be director of the new camp, Mr. D'Amico made a visit to Charlevoix over last week end to perfect a program of improvements to be made prior to the opening date. It is planned to build additional tennis courts, a volleyball court, a new dock, install sanitary systems, electric lights and hot and cold running water in the group of cottages, landscape the grounds, and, in fact, carry out a general plan of improvements about the property.

Camp Manitou will cater to the adult vacationist. Its clientele will be young married couples and others above the junior summer camp age. Such camps are very popular in eastern states, but as far as is known, Camp Manitou will be the first of its kind in Michigan.

A full athletic program is listed among the attractions offered at Camp Manitou. Swimming, rowing, canoeing, tennis, handball, basketball, volleyball, golf, etc., will be under the direction of well known mid-western college men. In the evening the camp's own band will furnish music for dancing, and social and dramatic directors will conduct a program which covers comedies, vaudeville, burlesque and drama, presented on the camp stage. Other features listed are campfires, hayride parties, masquerade parties, etc.

The camp has accommodations for 150 people. It is expected the visitors will come for one or two week stays and the program is being arranged with that prospect in view. Elaborate plans are being made for the opening week end, which has been set for June 28th.

Mr. D'Amico, owner of Camp Manitou, expects to arrive here June 1 to take over personal supervision of preparations for the summer.

HERALD OPENS AIR DELIVERY

GRAND RAPIDS DAILY ARRIVES MORNINGS BY PLANE.

Large Crowd Headed by Dr. C. J. Winder, Commerce Body President, Greeted Planes Sunday.

Starting last Sunday, May 18th, the Grand Rapids Herald opened a daily airplane delivery to Charlevoix and other Northern Michigan cities.

Plowing through rain squalls and banks of low-hanging clouds, two Michigan Air Express planes, bearing heavy loads of Sunday Herald, opened what is the first airplane delivery service ever attempted by a Michigan daily.

All along the line, at Cadillac, Traverse City, Charlevoix and the Emmet county airport, crowds were out to greet the planes. Pilots Floyd Becker and George Austgen arrived at Charlevoix flying field on schedule time, 7:07 a. m. A good crowd, headed by Dr. C. J. Winder, president of the Charlevoix Association of Commerce, was there to meet them. Members of the Charlevoix Air Club turned out in a body. Other persons were present from Boyne Falls, Boyne City, Ellsworth, Norwood, Central Lake and Bellaire.

There were free Herald for a great many. Dr. Winder, speaking briefly on the merits of the newly inaugurated delivery service said: "While us residents of Charlevoix and the surrounding territory want The Herald to know how much we appreciate this splendid service, yet there is another factor that I want to mention in connection with the airplane delivery of The Herald."

"Charlevoix is noted far and wide as a great summer resort. Its natural beauties, combined with its perfect climate, have brought it a host of summer residents. You people in Grand Rapids perhaps do not realize how valuable this airplane delivery of The Herald will be to these folk and in serving them The Herald will be serving us Charlevoix residents. I take my hat off to The Herald."

The Herald comes off the press each morning at 4:00 o'clock, and all the late news is in the hands of Charlevoix readers three hours later. The new service, more especially because of the very complete financial section carried, should prove very popular with Charlevoix's summer resorters.

The programs and banquets were praised as the finest ever enjoyed and enthusiasm was high. A large number of past presidents and other past officers were present, also numerous state Eastern Star officers.

Over 200 delegates had registered at the bureau of information before the luncheon on Wednesday at the Russell hotel, among this number being the worthy grand matron of the state organization, Sue E. Raudabaugh of Lansing; Otto W. Bishop, worthy grand patron, of Alpena, with Mrs. Bishop; Mrs. Verda Ferguson of Highland Park, past grand Ruth, and Mrs. Gertrude Ellis of Petoskey, past grand Electa.

Mrs. Bonthon has been very active in work of the Meguzee association for many years, and her election as its president comes as a fitting reward for her efforts.

BOYNE CITY ELECTS NEW SCHOOL BOARD

Refuses to Recast Trio Ousted at Recall Election.

By a majority virtually the same as that which on April 28th ousted them from seats on the board of education, former President Dwight B. Herriek, former Treasurer S. B. Neymark and former Secretary Ann Boylan Monday were denied vindication when they again were candidates for places on the board.

A. M. Chipman defeated Herriek, 405 to 337; F. J. Beals defeated Neymark, 449 to 300, and F. E. Newville defeated Boylan, 460 to 289.

The opposition and resultant recall of the trio of officers was the result of alleged maladministration in handling of school funds. No criminal charges were made, however, and a check-up of books by an accounting firm revealed no shortages. The ousted members made numerous appeals to residents in their campaigns.

YOUNG MOTHER HIGHLY PRAISES MODERN KONJOLA

In One Month New Medicine Ended Suffering and Restored Her Health.

MRS. JOSEPH PREMO

"I think Konjola is the most wonderful medicine in the world, and I have reason to think so, for I suffered for a number of years with stomach and kidney troubles and Konjola was the only medicine that gave me more than temporary relief," said Mrs. Joseph Premo, 1224 Johnson street, Saginaw. "Gas formed in my stomach, pressed up around my heart, caused it to palpitate and made it hard for me to get my breath. I had terrible pains in my chest. The pains in my back, resulting from kidney trouble, also were very severe."

"An indorsement of Konjola by a lady I knew, and with whose case I was acquainted, led me to give this splendid medicine a trial. The first bottle proved to me that I had found the right medicine. After taking the treatment for just one month I felt fine. My ailments are gone, pains have vanished, and I have the strength and energy a mother of two children needs. Do you wonder that I am grateful for Konjola?"

Why not let such happy experiences as that of Mrs. Premo point the way to new and glorious health? A complete treatment of from six to eight bottles of Konjola is recommended for thorough relief.

Konjola is sold in Charlevoix, Mich., at F. J. Fessenden's drug store and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

AT THE MOVIES.

"Whoopee Girl" Life of Party in New Drama.

"The Whoopee Girl" who appears for the first time in the Tiffany all-talking production, "Party Girl," showing May 22-23 at the Palace theatre, is the newest star in the galaxy of "it" maidens. In this picture, the alluring damsel is glimpsed in all her glory both at work and at play, it is said.

This story deals with the modern method of doing business at cabarets, restaurants and night clubs, with the offices merely used as a place of contact. Large mercantile organizations dealing with clients from Western centers are nearly all placing girls on their pay-rolls for the purpose of entertaining these prospective customers or availing themselves of "call bureaus" which supply good-looking girls for this purpose.

"Party Girl," which reveals the activities of this new American type, boasts a large cast of film favorites, including Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Jeanette Loff, Marie Prevost, Judith Barrie and John St. Polis.

Raymond Hackett in Cast of "Not So Dumb."

Raymond Hackett, who has made great strides in pictures since his triumphant appearances in "The Trial of Mary Dugan" and "Madame X," plays the role of Brother Willie in Marion Davies' new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer dialogue feature, "Not So Dumb," will be shown at the Palace theatre May 24-25.

Young Hackett, brought from the stage to play the brother role in the picture of the Bayard Veiller play, has made consistent progress since his debut, recently playing opposite Bessie Love in "The Girl in the Show."

Kisses Are Real Kisses in "Most Immoral Lady."

The director of Leatrice Joy's First National starring picture, "A Most Immoral Lady," coming May 27-28 to the Palace theatre, was a believer in real kisses on the screen.

They must look real and sound real.

And in the many rehearsals of the scene, they had to be rehearsed as well, each time!

That was Walter Pidgeon's good luck in "A Most Immoral Lady," in which he plays Miss Joy's leading man.

Both Miss Joy and Pidgeon sing and play the piano in this all-dialogue offering, which is the former's first vehicle under the First National banner.

but be thou partaker of the afflictions of the gospel according to the power of God;" (11 Tim. 1:8).

The lesson-sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Immortal men and women are models of spiritual sense, drawn by perfect Mind and reflecting those higher conceptions of loveliness which transcend all material sense" (p. 247).

CHAPTER XII—Continued.

Then he said:
"I thought I would hurt you. And you are glad!"

"Yes, I am glad. I think God you love Carla."

She rose to her feet, and took a letter from the table. She was trying to keep from crying as she gave it to him.

"I want you to read it and then come back to me," she said. "This evening, if you will, Paul. I lack the courage to tell you things. You will understand when you open it, alone."

He went to the Kierke-Durand building and lost himself in the human stream going up with the elevators. On one of the floors was an office, always ready for him. He shut himself in and locked the door.

He opened the letter. There were many pages, closely written in Carla's hand. With almost childish candor they began to tell him of a woman's fight to triumph over herself. Like an indestructible resilience they breathed the sureness of Carla's faith in herself. Without emotional effort she told him that unless Carla had come into his life she would never have let him know what she was about to reveal. There was no man in the world more worthy of a woman's love than he, she said. Yet, from the beginning, she had been unable to build her respect and admiration into greater things she should have given him. That was one reason why, repelling the thought of making him care greatly for her when she could not love him, she had kept herself away from him so much. One's passion for another, in its holiest form, was guided by a single force. One might stem that and hold it back, but it was impossible to make it die. Such a love was Carla's for him. Then she spoke of another man. It was of Jimmy Emmerdale, the sculptor, who was driving his way so persistently to success. She had accepted Jimmy almost as a brother during her girlhood, but very soon after her marriage the truth had come to her, she said, and had grown stronger with each year. She cared for Emmerdale just as Carla cared for him. It was Paul who might have been her brother, with such frank and unembarrassed simplicity did she confide in him. She knew that Emmerdale loved her, and repeated that a man could not conceal that fact from a woman, though he did not express it in words, and she was sure Jimmy had no idea of her sentiment toward him. This love for Jimmy was the other reason, the more vital of the two, which had held her aloof from Paul. She loved Jimmy's work and wanted to become a part of it. She had never held it to be possible, and had not thought of it in that way until she knew that he loved Carla.

Paul finished, and it seemed as though tiny raindrops were falling in his brain, so clearly could he hear and feel the beating of his pulse. In a few moments the meaning of life came to him in a distant wave. It struck nearer in the slamming of an elevator door. Indistinct voices passed down the hall. From another street, blocks away, the hammering of rivet drivers on new steel rose above the rush and roar of traffic. Paul looked from his window, as if he might see the pit, out of which the same sound had come night and day for three years. His eyes fell upon gloomy, sooty walls. Under him lay an unending fabric of men's toil, a great sea of roofs—strong with wires—craggy with ugly architectural warts, broken with chimneys, streaked with tarred gutters, and with the gaping, shifting mouths of ventilating funnels sucking air into their artificial lungs. He looked down and saw a thousand moving things, in a stream, like ants, every hurrying particle a human soul struggling in the furious twentieth century effort to make itself greater than God. From all this Carla had freed him. She had given him new life, and with it love and happiness. He crushed her letter in his hand as if some pitiful breath might wrench its precious pages from him.

Then he turned to the telephone. It was impossible for him to wait. He wanted to tell her there was one other woman in the world as wonderful as Carla.

In Carla's voice was a trembling note of happiness when he said this. "Dear old Paul," she cried softly. "But you mustn't come to me until evening. I have something which I must do before I see you again."

That night, when he went to his home, Carla was not there. She had left a note for him. "I have gone to see Carla," it said.

No Shadow Is Cast Over Their Happiness Because Carla Cannot Walk.

"Only a woman can make another woman—like Carla—understand."

CHAPTER XIV

And here we find ourselves where we began, with the lovely Crippled Lady on her porch at Peribonka.

There have been changes since the Crippled Lady was borne from the hospital to the place, near her mother, where she wants to live. The pit is no longer a pit, but a mighty force driving its energy in unending streams through high-tension wires. The Mississippi may rumble and roar and growl, but it is a slave, severely shackled, and will probably go on laboring for its human masters for all time. This change—or development—was expected, anticipated by experts almost to the day and hour. But others were not. The world, for instance, accepting a very small corner of it as the whole, could not understand why a man like Paul Kierke should deliberately sever himself from the huge prestige and wealth built by his father's success, and, as the story went, bear away with him all his personal possessions in a trunk and a handbag. It could understand, quite easily, how a husband and wife might end their marital relationship, but it was puzzled and shocked that a woman like Carla Kierke should throw herself away—soon afterward, on a stoop-shouldered, prematurely aging man who was possessed of nothing on earth but an admirable passion for shaping things out of marble.

Carla always sits on her porch so that she is looking up the river toward the north. Paul is there, working out a part of the dream which absorbs them both. Thirty miles beyond the green and blue-black edge of wilderness which she can see Paul has a timber concession, and fifteen men working with him, where a little while before he might have had fifteen thousand. But these fifteen men, and what they are planning to do with the concession, mean more to Paul and Carla than all the millions in the world.

"It is not necessary to slaughter Nature, or even harm her, in order to possess for ourselves some of her products," Paul says in a paper he is writing for a pulp-wood journal. "There is such a thing as harvesting lumber and having a better forest each year instead of a diminished one. Nature wants to fraternize with us, and will, when we cease to sack and plunder her like vandals."

Next year the fifteen men will be increased to fifty, but now camps are being built and just enough timber harvested to cover the expense of the work. Paul labors with his ax, along with the others, from morning until night.

every Friday he comes down the river to Carla.

Carla knows that she is going to get strong and well. This mental attitude, her awareness and optimism, together with her great happiness, has overcome the doubt of physicians. She is beginning to stand a little, with Paul's arms about her, and their two previous days a week together are filled with wonderful plans of what she is going to do in another year. Wherever Paul is, there she will also be. That is the point from which they always start in building their castles.

No shadow is cast over their happiness because Carla cannot walk. Paul wheels her about the village in the big chair, and not a cottage is missed in their visits. They go as far as the little picturesque oil cheese factory and down the hill to the still older wharf where the boat comes in from across the lake. Doctor Derwent, who is at Mistassini, has allowed Carla to go twice to the monastery, in Paul's launch, and if October is fine she will make her first trip to his congenial during that month. Paul takes her over the soft, sandy roads to the edge of the blueberry plains in a buggy, and then carries her in his arms to a place where she can help him pick fruit for their Sunday dinner. He will never give up carrying her like that, he says, even when she is strong again.

Peribonka has grown happier with them. Even Maria Chapdelaine is younger, and Samuel has forgotten his financial losses.

So Carla wrote to Carla:

"It is glorious here. I love September."

[THE END.]

Monday, May 26, is the date when Dr. Leahy, the Optometrist, will be at the Hotel Charlevoix. Last visit until September.—Adv. 2012.

Here is the proof that convinced these "Doubting Thomas" experts

LESS THAN the ordinary wear was found in the pistons after a 9000 mile test run with this improved motor oil—New Iso-Vis.

ALL THE piled-up evidence from hundreds of laboratory tests was not enough. The experts wanted the proof of a practical road test showing how New Iso-Vis Motor Oil protects the moving parts in an engine.

So this engine had been rushed through a test of 9000 miles. And now the micrometer reported less than normal wear... the bearing wear was less than 1/1000 of an inch. The experts were convinced.

Here are the reasons for the high lubricating value of New Iso-Vis:

- 1 New Iso-Vis will not thin out. It is made proof against dilution by a special patented process.
- 2 New Iso-Vis leaves but little carbon. It is Wholly Distilled and contains no undistilled parts of the crude.

- 3 New Iso-Vis lubricates effectively at engine temperatures both far above and below normal.
- Have your crankcase drained, flushed and refilled with New Iso-Vis at any Standard Oil dealer or service station.

New ISO-VIS 30's quart
The New Polarine also is produced by our new refining process—giving it an efficiency which is exceeded only by New Iso-Vis. The price is 25c a quart.

Passageway of Mole Is Popular

Continue Active During the Winter, but Do Little Damage to Plants.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Moles, contrary to the opinion of many, do not eat roots, bulbs and seeds of plants in important quantities. They cause damage in the garden by tearing plant roots and by fluffing up the soil until it dries out too rapidly. Indirectly, too, they are responsible for the activities of other small animals, such as mice, which do eat roots, tubers and bulbs. The mole runways in the garden are favorable passageways for these little mammals. The mole itself lives principally on insects, earthworms, white grubs, and other larvae and pupae. But the mole gets—and deserves—some of the blame for the destruction done by others that follow its tunnels.

Gas and Poison Useless.

Poisons and poisonous gases are almost useless against moles, the bureau of the biological survey finds. Specialists in this branch of the United States Department of Agriculture say this is because of the highly developed sense of smell of moles, which are thus compensated more or less for poor eyesight. Also the fact that the moles feed on live insects and earthworms makes it difficult to introduce poison into food that they are willing to eat.

Active During Winter.

Moles continue active through the winter, but in that season their tunnels run so deep that they rarely do much damage. Trapping seems to be the most effective way of disposing of moles, although it is slow and requires patience. Three types of traps are in common use—the clover or loop, the scissor jaw, and the spike or prong trap. The last is used most commonly, but the loop trap has proved far more effective if carefully set, and does not injure the pet.

Ways of Manufacturing Commercial Sour Cream

Experiments on the methods of manufacturing commercial sour cream are being conducted by the dairy department of the Pennsylvania agricultural experiment station at State college.

This product is also known as "Dutch sour cream" because of its extensive use by Holland people. It is not restricted to them entirely, being also very popular with the Slavics, generally, and to a lesser extent with the Germans, Austrians and Bohemians.

The sour cream is, when properly made, a thick-bodied, smooth product with a clean, acid flavor. It finds use as a dressing for vegetables, either cooked or raw, as well as being the important ingredient in certain typical cold vegetable mixtures not unlike salads.

The most difficult problem in making commercial sour cream is to produce a body thick enough and smooth enough to satisfy the customers. The experiments at State college show that there are many factors to consider when a high quality product is desired. This work is expected to be of considerable aid to the milk dealers who are attempting to supply the market, says F. J. Doan of the dairy manufacturing department.

Woods Savings Bank, Says Forest Officer

Timber Conservation Becomes Economic Need.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Timber is a farm savings bank to be drawn upon in times of extra need, says W. R. Mattoon, extension forester of the forest service, United States Department of Agriculture. The trees are the capital or principal; new growth is the interest. Each day the interest is added—and the cashier cannot run away.

Farm woodlands have many times been the means of lifting a mortgage, or making the difference between profit and loss on the farm balance sheet. Mattoon says. Timber and wood are required for the successful operation of the farm, and most farmers have some lands better adapted to tree growth than cultivated crops. The growing of timber is therefore legitimately a part of the regular farm program. Timber conservation has come to be a matter of economic necessity. No farmer can afford to pay taxes on idle land.

If the woods bank is drawn on only to the extent of cutting the growth, or interest, the capital remains untouched, and the investment continues undiminished. Some useful hints in using farm timber rightly, in cutting for continuous growth, had in marketable farm timber are given in Department of Agriculture Leaflet No. 29, "The Farm Woods—A Savings Bank." Just off the government presses. Copies of this leaflet can be procured by writing to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington.

Artificial Manure Made From Farm-Grown Crops

Manure equal in quality to the best barnyard fertilizer can be made from farm-grown materials and without the aid of horses or other farm animals, according to a series of experiments that have been carried on by the soils department of the University of Missouri for the past two years. Ordinary wheat or oats straw is the material and a simple, inexpensive chemical mixture, combined with rain, is the chief manufacturing agent which changes the straw to manure within two or three months after it is threshed.

The cost of the artificial manure varies between 65 and 85 cents per ton, according to the experiments carried out to date.

The process is briefly this: A simple chemical mixture of 45 per cent ammonium sulphate, 40 per cent agricultural limestone and 15 per cent superphosphate is mixed with the straw at threshing time at the rate of 150 pounds to a ton of straw. The straw is blown into flat piles not over five or six feet deep in order that it may take up water readily from rains and start the rotting brought about by the chemicals through their effect on the bacteria and molds in the straw. The length of time necessary to change the straw into manure depends on the depth of the piles of straw and the amount of rainfall, as water is one of the very necessary chemical agents in the process of rotting.

Modified Rag-Doll Seed-Corn Tester Easily Made

More than a million ears of corn were tested in the spring of 1928 in community testers by the rag doll method, according to Purdue university. Plans for such testers can be secured from the university at Lafayette, Ind.

To make the modified rag-doll seed-corn tester, use a piece of heavy waterproof paper, 12 inches wide and about 52 inches long. On this lay a cloth the same width and about 48 inches long. Three sections of ordinary paper hand towels are equally good. The cloth or paper should be thoroughly wet and at least five kernels from each ear be laid in rows on the doll, which will accommodate 20 ears. The dolls are rolled and set in a heated container where the temperature can be held at about 80 degrees and the dolls can be tested daily. After seven days the dolls will be ready to read.

Agricultural Hints

If you can get good seed now, buy it. Seed prices are expected to be high this spring.

Milk your cows immediately before instead of after feeding them and you will avoid acidosis.

Remember that radons in storage need a good temperature, dry atmosphere, and plenty of ventilation.

A warned hog horse starts the good husbandman on next year's farm tasks by giving him a chance to put all implements in order.

Sweet clover improves the soil so much that it runs itself out of a home by making the ground more suitable to other plants which can then crowd it off the ground.

Time spent during the winter in cleaning and grading seed oats, seed corn, and sorghum seed is time well invested. It is always advisable to have a germination test made of all seed that is to be used for planting.

Eradication of Rodents on Western Range Land

During a recent conference of Western live stock specialists at the United States Range-Like Stock experiment station, Miles City, Mont., opportunity was afforded to measure the results of modern methods of freeing range lands of rodent destruction, recommended by the bureau of biological survey of the United States Department of Agriculture. Three years ago some 4,000 acres of the range was badly infested with prairie dogs and pocket gophers. It was estimated at that time that more than 2,000 acres of it was totally ruined for grazing by either cattle or sheep. Those in charge shipped in some cats, poisoned it, and distributed it over this section of the range. Today there is an abundance of range grasses, with scarcely any evidence of the former presence of the rodents. The forester for that district estimated that the vegetation is today nine or ten times more valuable over the entire region than before the eradication campaign began.

White, district president of the foreign organization, extended greetings to the sister society, drawing parallels of endeavor with the same worthy object in view. Mrs. F. D. Sheep Meetings the Next Event.
All sheep owners and prospective purchasers are not only invited, but strongly urged to attend a series of meetings to be held on Monday, May 26th.

Delmar LaVoi, extension specialist of Michigan State college, will be present, and the main speaker of the following two meetings:

Monday forenoon, May 26th, at 10 o'clock, fast time, at farm of Wilbur Spidle, East Jordan, located about one mile north of Rock Elm grange hall.

Monday afternoon, May 26th, at 2:30 o'clock, fast time, at farm of Lige O'Brien, Charlevoix, located about one mile south of pavement on Barnard road.

The summer care and management of the farm flock will be stressed at these meetings. Also, the control of parasites, which are taking a great loss in many flocks in the county. Mr. LaVoi will show the proper methods of castrating and docking of lambs, which means better and more growthy lambs to sell.

If you have any particular problems with your flock of sheep, be sure to attend your nearest meeting, and no doubt, the speaker can help you in their solution.

Monday, May 26th, is the day and date. Don't forget!

Summer Club Program in Full Swing.

Considerable work is being done in formulating plans for the various projects that are available for boys and girls interested in club work.

It is very gratifying to note the number of boys and girls who are contemplating club projects this year. Of the three projects being organized, beans seem to be meeting with popular favor, with corn and potatoes next. From present plans about seven boys are going to have one acre of potatoes, a dozen or more are interested in corn, and around 30 will be working on beans.

In the live stock projects there will be around 20 interested in the calf club project, and five or six anxious to organize a pig club. While no definite organization has been accomplished as yet we have splendid prospects of having eight or nine canning clubs, which will carry a membership of around 60. All in all we expect to have a much larger group of summer club boys and girls than ever before in the county. Many of the boys and girls who participated in our highly successful winter program will make up the membership in the above mentioned clubs.

A series of meetings are scheduled this week to perfect the organizations. The following new communities are sponsoring club work this summer: Bay Shore, Norwood, Horton's Bay and fronton, and the above meetings will be located at these points.

Remember that a cordial invitation is extended to any boy or girl in the county between the ages of ten and twenty to join our happy workers. If you have not been approached, by all means, inform your county agent, so that he can help you in organizing your community.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

Thrips May Damage State Fruit Crops.

An insect, the flower thrips, which is not usually present in Michigan in sufficient numbers to cause damage to fruits or crops is reported to be so abundant this year that the entomology department at Michigan State college advises the use of control measures to prevent injuries to fruit.

The last previous years when damage was done by the insect in this state were 1918 and 1919. Especially favorable weather conditions or the absence of natural enemies apparently permit the thrips to multiply rapidly in certain years.

Damage to fruit can be prevented by the use of nicotine, either as a spray or as a dust. The nicotine can be applied as a special spray or can be included in the regular early sprays. Peaches should be sprayed as soon as the shucks fall, and raspberries should receive the spray before the plants blossom.

Detailed directions for the proper mixing of sprays for the control of thrips can be obtained from the entomology department at the college or from county agricultural agents.

Most of the reports of the presence of thrips have been made from the western section of the state, but it is probably present in all parts. It is a tiny insect which will escape notice unless the plants upon which it is feeding are closely inspected.

Name Club Members for National Camp.

Four Michigan 4-H club members who have done exceptionally good work in past projects, Isabelle McKellar, Freeland; Verna Dalke, Pinconning; Ludell Cheney, Mason; and Robert Johnson, West Ishpeming, have been chosen by state club leaders to be Michigan's representatives at the national club encampment at Washington, D. C., June 18 to 24.

Two other club members will represent their state at the leadership training school at Springfield, Mass. These two, Ingrid Mattson, Iron River, and Cyril Spike, Ypsilanti, have shown exceptional ability in community leadership and their attendance at the school will add to their ability to aid the younger people in their neighborhoods.

More Michigan club members will be chosen by leaders in the counties to go as county delegates to the Washington camp. This state is entitled to send 50 boys and girls to the encampment, but the number making the trip will depend upon the willingness of groups within the counties to finance the journey.

Seed Pieces Affect Yields of Potatoes

The planting of small-sized seed potato pieces decreases the size of the crop and increases the number of tubers which are affected with hollow heart, according to data obtained in two years of experiments conducted by the farm crops department of Michigan State college.

The tests were made at the Rossmana Brothers farm at Lakeview, the W. K. Kellogg farm at Augusta, and the College farm, East Lansing. Certified Russet Rural seed was used in all of the trials.

The sizes of pieces used were one-half ounce, one ounce, one and one-half ounce, and two ounce. The average yields in bushels per acre obtained for the two years were: with one-half ounce pieces, 91.4; with one ounce, 108.7; with one and one-half ounce, 123.4, and with two ounce, 129.4.

No hollow heart was found in any of the potatoes grown in 1929, which was due to favorable weather conditions. In 1928, the crop grown from the half ounce pieces contained twice as many hollow potatoes as the crop grown from the one and one-half ounce pieces.

The seed should be cut in thick pieces to avoid drying out in the soil after it is planted. Approximately 15 bushels of seed cut one and one-half ounce size will be needed to plant one acre.

Young Peoples' meeting at 6:30.
Evening service at 7:30 every Sunday.

Prayer meeting every Wednesday evening at 7:30. Brother Howe will preach next Sunday evening and the pastor the following Sunday evening.

The Ladies' Aid will meet with Mrs. Arthur Guild on Thursday afternoon.

Friday evening the young people are all invited to the home of Mrs. William C. Palmer for their business meeting and social gathering.

We have just closed the most successful revival meeting that has ever been held here. The evangelist, Rev. A. I. Bridwell, returned to his home in Michigan City, Ind., last Sunday night, to remain there a few days and then begin another revival in Louisiana next Sunday.

It is estimated that about 300 people heard him preach while he was in Charlevoix. His unique methods of preaching and also presenting the Gospel to the vision by using beautiful hand painted pictures prove very effective and as a result of these efforts about 35 people took a stand for the Lord publicly and a number expect to be baptized the first Sunday in June.

We extend a cordial invitation to all to attend all of our regular services.

1930 BEST SEASON FOR MAPLE SIRUP

Production Was Far Ahead of 1929 Figures According to Report.

Michigan producers of maple sirup and sugar have experienced one of the most profitable seasons in the history of the industry, according to Verne H. Church, state agricultural statistician.

Mr. Church estimated the season's production at 297,000 gallons of sirup and 49,000 pounds of sugar, compared with 163,000 gallons and 40,000 pounds in 1929. This production had a value of $759,160, compared with $437,800 in the previous year.

Weather conditions were favorable throughout the main producing sections, and this fact, coupled with cheaper labor and attractive prices, appears to have encouraged a renewed interest in this industry. It is estimated 330,000 trees were tapped this year. This was 105 per cent of the number of 1929 and the largest number since 1918.

Warm weather prevailed quite generally from Feb. 17 to Feb. 25 and many producers started tapping at that time. Alternate freezing and thawing in March also was favorable and the run was the longest since 1926. The average date of tapping for the entire state was March 2. The season closed April 2.

The average production per tree was reported as the equivalent of 2.61 pounds of sugar, as compared with last year's low yield of 1.52 pounds and 2 pounds in 1928. The total production in terms of sugar was 2,427,300 pounds. Ninety-eight per cent of this was marketed in the form of sirup.

The average quality was 98 per cent, or 3 per cent higher than that reported last year and 2 per cent above the 1928 production. Few storms occurred in the season and the runs consequently were of a nearly uniform excellence.

Constitution Changes

Three amendments to the Constitution became effective during President Wilson's term—the seventeenth, eighteenth and nineteenth. The seventeenth, providing for the direct election of senators, had been submitted to the states for ratification during President Taft's administration, but went into effect in May, 1913. The eighteenth, or liquor prohibition amendment, and the nineteenth, giving anti-suffrage to women, were proposed, ratified and became effective in 1920.

There are said to be more Mormons in London than in Salt Lake City. But maybe their wives don't know it.

A WONDERFUL WORLD.

A little more praise and a little less blame.
A little more virtue, a little less shame.
A little more thought for the other man's rights.
A little less self in our chase for delights.
A little more loving, a little less hate.
Are all that is needed to make the world great.

TIPSTER SHEETS.

"With an increased activity of the market the faking tipsters are at it again.

"So-called 'inside information' is being spewed out in great volume from the manufactories of lies, half-truths, evasions and hyperbole that work overtime in a bull market.

"More financial suicides, wrecks and irretrievable losses have been created by listening to these false prophets than we even care to compute. The tipster is the parasite of the market, the tool of the financial world, the slave of greed and cupid-ity.

"A relentless war is being waged against him for every honest and sound financial organization stands squarely under the slogan, 'The Tipster Must Go!'

"But he cannot thrive—cannot even exist—if the investing and speculating public will do nothing more than to simply ignore him."

That is good advice to follow—coming as it does from a "tipster sheet" being sent out from one of our largest cities by the hundred thousands. In spite of the warning they themselves give there will be many suckers who will take hold of their bait. By the time these dupes awaken to the fact they have been taken for a financial ride the tipsters have moved to a new location, perhaps to another city. Take them at their word—leave them alone. Take the advice of your banker or broker—what a lot of heartaches it will save you later on.

STATEWIDE CAR TESTS.

There seems to be no indication that the Michigan Safety Council is going to conduct a statewide car test this spring, similar to that of other years. If none is contemplated a mistake is being made. Testing cars for safe driving is just as essential as having traffic laws regulating the conduct of motorists.

If later it is decided to hold such a test it should be under the direct supervision of the state police—then it will get somewhere. With no desire to be critical past campaigns have seemed to be without an impelling force—they were headed nowhere and accomplished but little.

Before starting a statewide test the entire campaign should be mapped out. Instructions should be in the hands of traffic officers in every part of the state, there should be no duplication of effort. The heaviest motor season of the year is just ahead. There is danger in the car that is unfit for safe driving—official car testing would remove these hazards. Human life is too precious to let this threat go unchallenged.

DON'T BE CARELESS.

Co-operation will help to keep fires out of Michigan forest lands this year. As a part of this plan asking co-operation the Department of Conservation is placing thousands of signs in strategic places throughout the state warning motorists and travelers that carelessness leaves behind a tragic tale of burned areas and timber losses.

Michigan is a beautiful spot to gaze upon during the summer months. Don't let any carelessness on your part cause its beauty to be destroyed. If you travel in the out-of-way places, seeking rest and quiet, follow the rules of "safety first" laid down by the department. See that your camp fires are thoroughly extinguished before leaving, don't throw lighted matches, cigars, cigarettes, out of automobile or railroad car windows.

It is the easiest thing in the world to start a fire when the earth is dry as tinder. Only the utmost care will prevent this happening. Good citizenship should prompt every individual to exercise the greater vigilance while traveling through dangerous places.

STILL FIGHTING TUBERCULOSIS.

Tuberculosis no longer leads all other diseases in its trail of danger and death. In Michigan it stands fourth. But the Michigan Tuberculosis Association, working with the National Association in promotion of a spring early diagnosis campaign, points out that while tuberculosis may be on the run, it mows down many an innocent bystander in its flight.

The campaign now going on is to protect children. The point is that since it seems impossible to keep the infection entirely away, the next best thing is to find out as early as possible what youngsters are likely to yield to it. A skin test, perhaps followed by an X-ray picture, will tell the story pretty clearly. When the susceptible children are discovered (probably two in every hundred) they can be safeguarded. Don't be afraid of tuberculosis, but give your children protection against it.

HE MUST PAY FOR LIGHT.

Through various parts of the United States there is considerable development in the business of supplying electrical current to farms. Electrical lines are being extended into rural sections.

Heretofore such extensions have been considered impracticable for engineering or business reasons. But these are days when utilities are stressing the sale of electrical current.

Electricity on the farm is just as useful as in the city. The farmer will be a large user of electrical energy if it may be brought to him at a reasonable cost.

But all the modern things which mean added expense on the farm mean that agriculture must have an added income. That is what we must think about.—Grand Rapids (Minn.) Herald-Review.

THEY SWARM IN SPRINGTIME.

From many communities come complaints of the peddler evil. Swarms of these so-called salesmen are pouring out of the cities at the present time invading the smaller cities and villages. They are selling everything from sharpeners to broadcloth smuggled in on some foreign battleship. Rarely ever does the householder get a square deal.

If the person who calls at your door happens to be a resident of this community, is known to you, then it is a different matter entirely. In that case you will without doubt get your money's worth.

Strangers should be given short shrift. You have no guarantee that any statement made by them regarding their wares is true. Invariably if you listen to their blandishments you are the loser. In no case does it pay to take a chance.

Don't encourage them—don't let them take up your time. Your home town merchant will serve you in a much more satisfactory manner.

LIVE AND BE HAPPY.

The drowning season is upon us. The spring comes, the lakes are open. Boys go out onto rafts and boats, fishermen crowd the water and later in the fall the duck hunters come.

And with all of the sport and the good times come very sad days. They have already begun. Bonts tip over, the waves come too high, somebody becomes careless, human lives are lost. A day or a year of pleasure is easily turned into a day or year of sorrow.

So when you play this summer, whatever you do, play safe. Do not take chances in deep water, with big waves, with leaky boats and dangerous guns.

Be careful and be happy.

MOTOR SERVICE ON SUNDAY.

An automobile man thinks week-ending motorists are a pretty dumb lot.

"How many scores of cars," he says, "have you seen on any nice Sunday, standing in line at messy greasing and filling stations, while Father tramps impatiently chewing his cigar and the family swelters in the waiting car? Most of the drivers do not seem to realize that they are spending the most valuable thing they possess—their leisure time—and are taking a chance of having their maintenance work half done and their repairs ruined by employing this costly and haphazard type of service."

Why not, he wants to know, have such things taken care of during the week, along with any little repair work needed, so that when the family goes out for a pleasant week end drive there will be some pleasure in it?—Bemidji (Minn.) Sentinel.

TELL EVERYTHING.

The census taker is in our midst. On the first day of the month an army of men and women all over the nation began asking questions.

It is not the census taker, but your good old Uncle Sam that wants this information. He wishes to know all about you and your family, your farm, your cows, your horses, your pigs. He is counting up everything that after a while the United States will know how large and how rich it is.

Be courteous to the census enumerator. Give him all the help you can. Eventually this mass of information will be correlated and from it many things will be gleaned for the good of the nation. Your willingness to assist will stamp you as a good citizen.

PLEASE BE CAREFUL.

The trailing arbutus, one of the loveliest wild flowers known, is beginning to flower. Braving the cold northwest winds, its fragrant pink and white blossoms can be found in many pine groves.

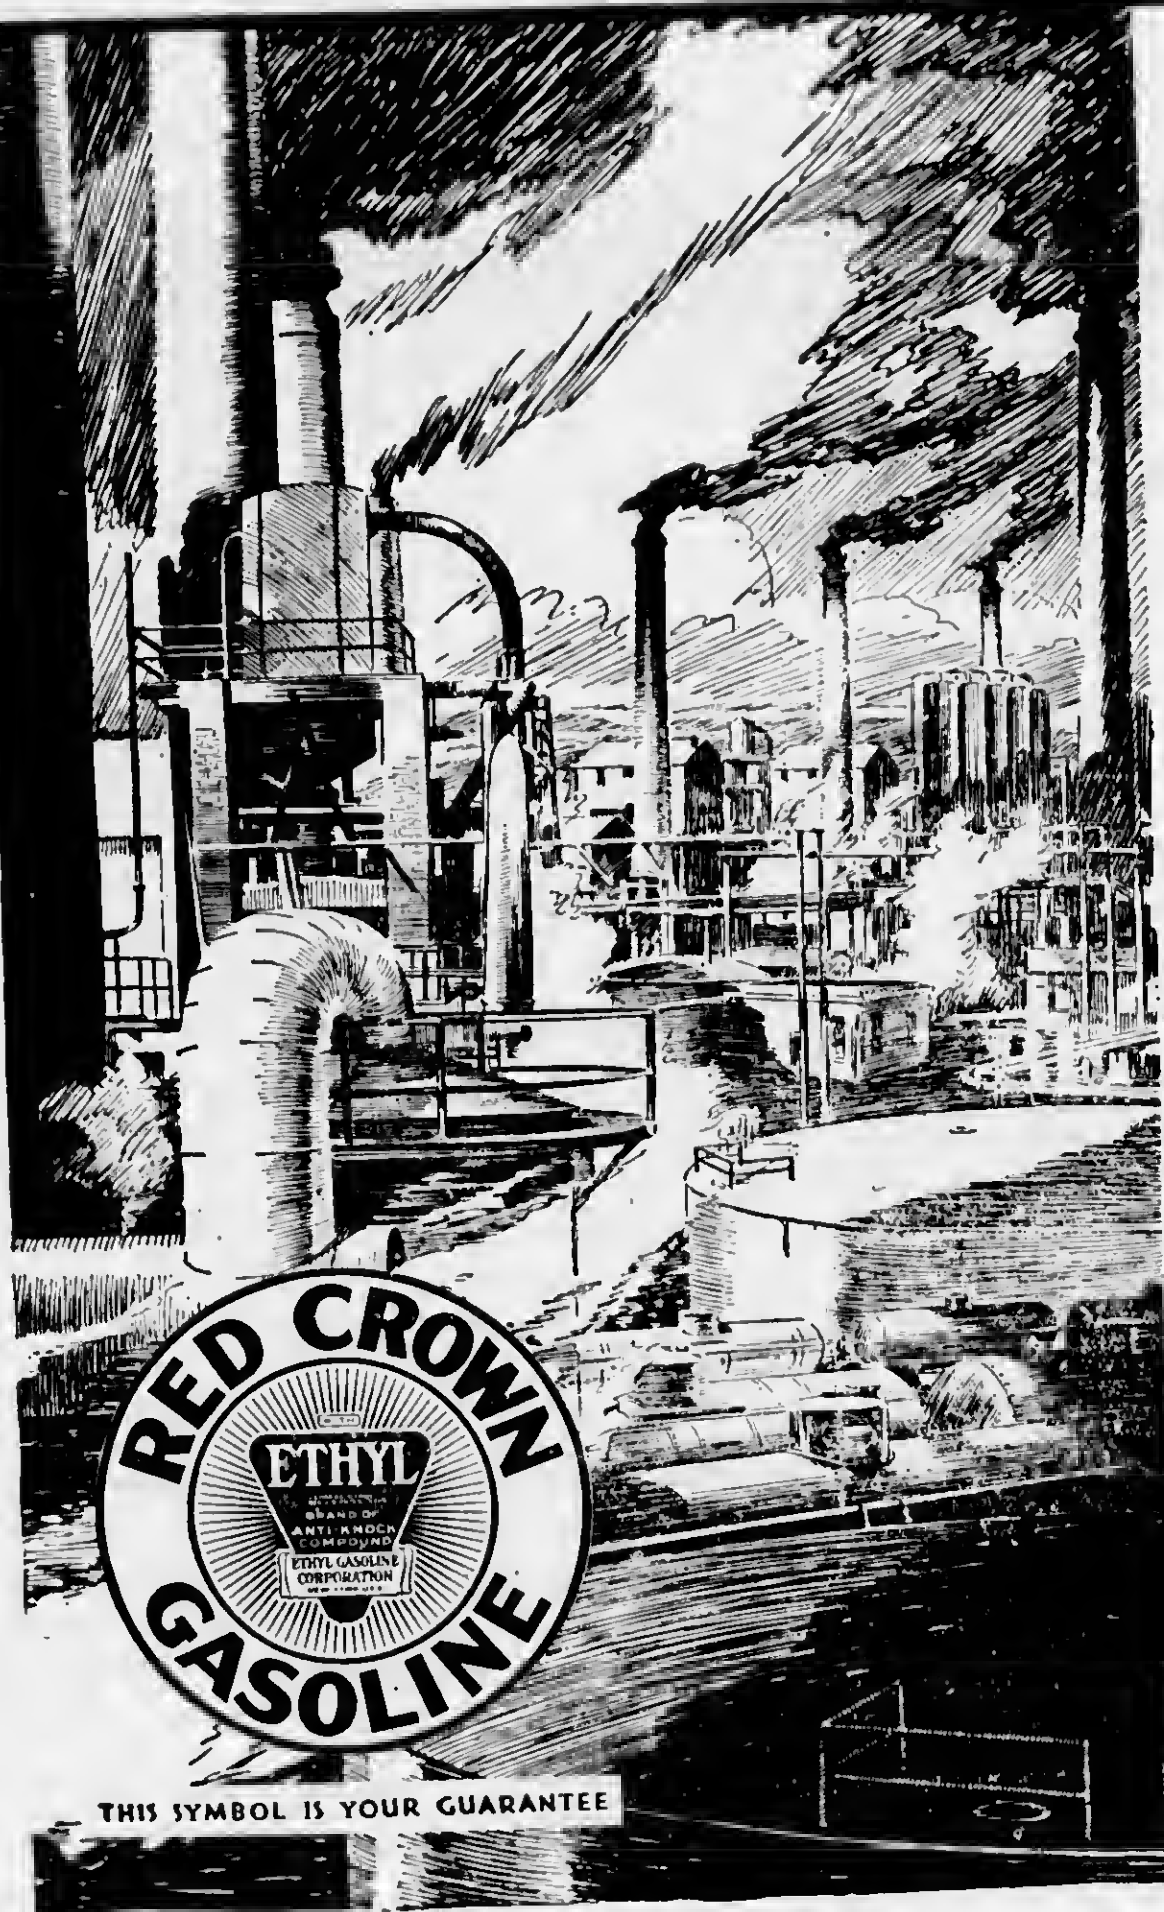

The arbutus is not easily transplanted. It must grow in its setting of pine needles and sand. If a plant is pulled up by the roots, it is gone, never to be replaced. When you gather arbutus, use a sharp knife, or better still, a pair of shears, and cut off the sprays.

THE TEMPERED BLADE.

The man in old age is like a sword in a shop window. Men that look upon the perfect blade do not imagine the process by which it was completed. Man is a sword, daily life is the workshop, and God is the artificer; and those cares which beat upon the anvil, and file the edge, and eat in, acid-like, the inscription upon his hilt—these are the very things that fashion the man.—Beecher.

FARM STOCK

HULLED OATS ARE BEST FOR SWINE

Valuable Because They Produce Growthy Pigs.

An average of the 1927 and 1928 tests at the Ohio experiment station gives hulled oats a value 40 per cent greater than corn when the corn was left out of the ration entirely and 62 per cent more pound for pound when used as only a partial substitute for corn. Hulled oats proved profitable in these tests despite the comparatively high price at which whole oats were changed, 48 cents, against 91 cents for corn.

The most efficient ration ever fed at the Ohio station, according to Holmstrom and Gerlaugh, was that of hulled oats, tankage and alfalfa meal in 1927 when less than 300 pounds of feed produced 100 pounds of gain. A higher quality, more efficient protein in the grain or kernel of the oat grain, makes hulled oats more valuable than corn for hogs and is responsible for more rapid gains and more pounds per unit of feed.

Although the 1928 tests at Ohio were not quite as favorable for hulled oats as those during the preceding year, a lot of pigs fed hulled oats, corn, tankage, and linseed meal, ground alfalfa and minerals, gained more rapidly than any lot on test. This same lot had the smallest feed requirement for each 100 pounds of gain with the exception of one other, that in which the corn was replaced by hulled oats. Despite their higher efficiency, hulled oats proved a little too expensive in 1928, partly because of the high price at which oats were charged and partly because of the expense of hulling. Unlike previous results, gains from their use cost slightly more than with corn as the only grain.

At both the Iowa and Illinois stations, hulled oats proved more efficient than corn. Each of these stations recommended their use if they can be obtained at the same price per pound as corn, and possibly at a price slightly higher. Like Ohio, they have had best results by substituting hulled oats for only part of the corn.

Pure-bred men find hulled oats particularly valuable because they produce growthy pigs which weigh well and measure well with the tape line. Hogs fed for market can sometimes be pushed along more rapidly with this efficient feed and sold before the usual drop in prices comes during the fall months.

How to Care for Ewe Flock During Winter

Breeding ewes deserve a good ration and good care during the winter. Experience has shown that their principal feed should be a legume hay, says W. E. Morris, a live stock specialist of the University of Minnesota. When such hay is not available in quantity it can be limited to two pounds per head a day by feeding in addition roughages of prairie hay, oat straw, or corn stover supplemented with corn silage or roots such as turnips, mangels, or sugar beets. Roots and silage add to the desirability of the ration, but should not be fed in excess of two pounds a day per head. If poor roughages only are available a little grain should be fed along with them.

Six weeks before lambing, a half pound of oats, corn or barley should be added to the ration of the breeding ewe and should be continued until pastures are good. If the ewe is thin about one pound of grain should be fed daily. As lambing time approaches the ewes become heavy and do not like to exercise. By spreading the hay some distance from the barn and sheds they will be made to take the needed exercise. Rapid driving or chasing should not be permitted.

Making Success With the Sheep on Farms

Farmers who contemplate entering the sheep business will do well to study carefully the requirements for success. One of the first things needed on any farm where sheep production is to be entered into is good fences of woven wire, which will hold sheep. Barbed or smooth wire cannot be used satisfactorily. A 36-inch woven-wire fence at the ground with two or three strands of wire is commonly used. No farmer should engage in sheep production with the idea that little attention needs to be paid to his animals, for the wants of sheep are numerous and varied, and frequent attention is required to forestall conditions that will result in ill health or lack of thrift.

Young Animals Favored

The young growing animal makes gain in weight cheaper than the mature animal. It usually pays to provide plenty of feed for the young stock even though it is necessary to feed grain when pasture is short. Much young stock is stunted, especially after weaning, because it does not get enough feed to maintain the normal growth. Rapid growth is possible only when young animals are supplied with plenty of feed to build bone and muscle.

EXTENSIVE CAMPAIGN AGAINST FOREST FIRE

Warning Tags Will Be Placed On Every Car Crossing Straits.

Twenty thousand cloth and cardboard signs are now being placed along highways, in state tourist camps, in railroad cars, at fire towers, and at other places where they may be seen by the public, by the Forest Fire Division of the Department of Conservation as part of its 1930 educational campaign for forest fire prevention.

In cooperation with the railroads, the Forest Fire Division is placing 3,000 cards in railroad cars warning passengers against throwing lighted cigars, cigarettes or tobacco out of the windows.

Thousands of signs are being placed at strategic places along the highways warning against fire. Thousands of small signs are being placed along wood trails and through the woods. Several hundred signs are being placed in tourist camps outlining fire laws.

The oil fields of the state will be placarded, warning against smoking and the danger of oil fires.

During periods of great fire hazard, when the woods are tinder dry and forest fires start at the least provocation, tags will be placed on every car crossing the Straits of Mackinac. The tags will be attached by men on the State Ferries. The cards will warn motorists of the special danger from fires and it is believed that they will have considerable effect in helping reduce the larger number of roadside fires that cost thousands of dollars every year to suppress.

METHODIST CHURCH

Memorial Sunday will be recognized this week in the church services. At 10:30 the sermon will be "A Fitting Memorial." We must remember the work committed to our hands, "from falling hands they tossed the torch, be ours to raise it high. If we break faith with those who died, they will not sleep though poppies grow in Flanders fields."

At 12 o'clock noon church school assemblies with a class suited to your needs.

Miss Bodfish leads Epworth League at 6:30 and we expect to have Boyne City League visit us. A social hour precedes the devotional service.

A praise hour comes at 7:30 and since John Wesley's spiritual birthday came on May 24, we shall think of how best we may continue his contribution to the world's religious life. This Thursday the Literary and Sewing club will visit Mrs. R. Atcherson at Acme. All members invited. The Sunday school wishes the public to reserve Sunday, June 1st, for attendance at the annual Children's Day pageant entitled, "The Glittering Gate," at the 10:30 service.

CHORUS MUSICALE A GREAT SUCCESS

GIVEN FRIDAY NIGHT BEFORE APPRECIATIVE AUDIENCE.

Repeated Tuesday Evening Because of Numerous Requests—Acting Reflected Careful Direction.

"The Belle of Barcelona," the high school operetta given under the direction of Mrs. McKee at the gymnasium Friday night was a pronounced success. This production was marked by a brilliant and artistic finish not often attained by a high school group.

The scene of the opera was laid in the Plaza del Rey in Barcelona, Spain, and the stage was decorated in such a way as to make the setting very realistic. Garlands of flowers hung from benches and lattice work and lanterns mellowed the effect of the stage lighting. A roof in the background was cleverly devised.

The time was the festival of the Toreadors, and the Spanish students were especially joyous because of the return of their friend, Margarita, from a finishing school in Madrid. The part of Margarita was played by Dorothy Struthers in a charming manner. Miss Struthers has a clear soprano voice and a gracious way that fitted her especially for this attractive role.

Bill Novak and Angie Scott appeared as Margarita's parents, who had arranged their daughter's marriage to a nobleman. They were typical aristocrats and their portrayal of the standards of the wealthy plantation owners in Spain was excellent.

De la Vega, enacted by Lee Shapton, was the nobleman to whom Senor and Senora de Montero wished Margarita married. He was scheming to get de Montero's wealth and property. The character of the nobleman was vividly portrayed, and Lee's rich bass voice and clever acting gave him a place of distinction on the stage.

Floyd King was the hero. Lieutenant Harold A. Wright, customs inspector from the United States had met Margarita at a ball given in Washington. They had fallen in love but were suddenly separated when Margarita's father was recalled to Spain. When Lieutenant Wright was sent by the United States to Spain on business, he visited Barcelona and met Margarita again. After many complications Lieutenant Wright traced the villain of De la Vega until he was able to arrest him. Floyd was a dignified and impressive looking soldier and did honor to the United States flag. His solo and duets were particularly well rendered.

Dudley Mattson as Pedro, manager of De Montero plantation, was under the influence of De la Vega. He has a smooth tenor voice and a natural manner on the stage which enabled him to act successfully like a conscience-stricken manager.

Pat Malone, a red headed Irishman, was impersonated by Bob Foster. The audience was convulsed with laughter at his original wit and clever way of hitting off situations. He was a real humorist. His courtship of Miss Wetherby, Margarita's English governess, was the surprise of the evening. Marian McKee as Miss Wetherby, gave evidence of dramatic ability and appeared very sophisticated. In a well rendered solo, she explained that she was a governess, a proper English governess, while Patrick longed for a woman to sooth his woes, wash his vittles and cook his clothes.

David Coulter was captain of the United States marines and made a very impressive officer. Esther Case and Gwendolen Miller, Robert McCull and Ralph Lemieux were Spanish young people and filled their parts in a very creditable manner. Gwendolen, as Dona Anita, gave a very graceful and pleasing Spanish dance. Bill Brown was Emilio, a brave torreador who was a suitor of Mercedes (Lilace Johnston), a sister of Margarita. Both of these characters took an attractive place in the story, and their duet was especially well rendered.

Particular mention should be made of the chorus work which formed the background of the entertainment. Sweetness of tone and accuracy of time characterized this feature, and their ensemble work was excellent.

The costumes were of rich material and of elaborate design, and added much to making the story realistic.

WILLIAM R. O'NEILL
Valdictorian

Between the acts special dancing numbers were featured by Edna Wyers, Janet Livingston, Julia Glados, Byrnee Lamphere, Marjorie Partridge, and Alice Usher.

The accompaniment was played by Mrs. Stelter at the piano, and Mrs. Soule on violin. Beautiful bouquets expressing the appreciation of the glee clubs were received by Dorothy Struthers, Mrs. McKee, Mrs. Soule, and Mrs. Stelter.

The entertainment was such a success that numerous requests were received asking for a repetition, and it was put on again Tuesday night. "The Belle of Barcelona" will long be remembered by the community.

CHARLEVOIX TENNIS CLUB ELECTS

OFFICERS CHOSEN AT ANNUAL MEETING TUESDAY.

Date of Charlevoix Open Set for Week of July 7—Michigan Riviera Week of August 18th.

Preliminary plans for the annual Charlevoix open tennis tourney and the now nationally recognized Michigan Riviera championships were discussed at the annual meeting of the Charlevoix Tennis Club, held Tuesday afternoon at the Vassar cottage, summer home of Andrew I. Creamer on The Inn grounds.

Officers of the club for 1930 were elected as follows: president, Archie L. Livingston; vice-president, Harry A. Craig; sec., Kenneth Usher; treas., George Becman. It was with reluctance that members accepted the refusal of Mr. Creamer to continue as club president after two years in that office. However, they look forward to a successful year under the guidance of Mr. Livingston, who has been very active in local tennis affairs for many years.

The week of July 7th was set as the definite date of the annual Charlevoix open. This event usually has been held late in August, either previous to or after the Michigan Riviera. Under the present arrangement, it will provide an attraction for early July, filling in a period prior to the Great Lakes Open Championship at the Belvedere Golf club. While largely a local and regional affair, the Charlevoix open has in past years attracted a large entry and provided some very excellent matches.

A change in date from August 11th to the week of August 18th, has been made for the annual Michigan Riviera tennis championships. This change was made in anticipation of the entry of several Davis cup stars, who by that time, will have finished play in Europe and returned to this country. It is the aim of the club to have the most prominent field of tennis stars competing this year in the history of the Riviera event.

Both events will be held in the Inn clay courts, which have been generously provided for local tournaments by the hotel management since tennis was inaugurated as a major entertainment feature in Charlevoix's summer program.

Directors of the Charlevoix Tennis club will be chosen and other plans which must necessarily be completed before opening of the tennis season, will be given attention at a meeting of the club in the near future.

MORE SMELT CREEKS COMING

STATE FINDS THIS FISH IS INCREASING RAPIDLY.

Experts Believe He May Be Of Much Harm to Whitefish. To Help Feed Lake Trout.

Spread of smelt all over the Great Lakes is assuming such proportions that state and federal agencies will make a comprehensive study of the situation this summer. Carl L. Hubbs, of the University of Michigan, states in a letter published this week by the Michigan Fisherman.

Hubbs sees possibility that the species, which were originally brought to the Great Lakes to supply food for whitefish, may turn about and eat small whitefish and other valuable fish.

"On April 29, E. F. Jahr took a smelt in Saginaw bay," Hubbs' letter reads. "To the local fisherman this fish was a stranger, but the specimen was sent to the Institute for Fisheries Research at Ann Arbor and was there definitely identified as a ripe female smelt. Previous reports of the occasional capture of a smelt in Saginaw bay have been received, but this was the first verified report. The smelt which have been taken in Lake Huron off Cheboygan, Rogers City, Rockport, Alpena, etc., are probably the vanguard of a large population to come. They represent the spread of the species, probably originally from the annual escapement out of Crystal Lake.

"In Lake Michigan, the species is also working southward, for the Wisconsin conservation commission recently took a ripe male in a fyke net set for yellow pickerel spawns at Manitowoc. In Green Bay the smelt is apparently increasing rapidly. In Lake Charlevoix the smelt have been known for more than a year, and this spring runs developed in the tributaries of that lake, to many times larger than the famous run in Cold creek out of Crystal Lake.

"Real concern naturally develops over the possible effect of the smelt on the commercial fisheries. Some of the food fishes may benefit. This is especially likely for the lake trout, which may take to a smelt diet. On the other hand, the smelt is a very voracious little fish, which may develop a destructive appetite for young whitefish and other valuable kinds. It is not known what the smelt will feed on or what will feed on it in the Great Lakes. Experience tells us that it will probably increase rapidly in numbers in the lakes. No sound estimate of its harmful or beneficial effects can be given off-hand.

"The situation is serious enough to demand immediate and active investigation. The U. S. Bureau of Fisheries Research of the University of Michigan, at Ann Arbor, are joining hands to push this investigation this summer. Any fishermen having any information on the smelt is urged to communicate his information to the institute named above."

In addition the natural migrations of smelt, the state department of conservation at Lansing has received reports of their being transplanted into many inland lakes by sportsmen aiming to duplicate in their home communities the annual "run" at Boyne City and Beulah.

BOYNE CITY SCHOOL HEAD HAS RESIGNED

Trouble With School Board Ends Fine Eight-Year Record.

Superintendent of Schools William L. Fuehrer, of Boyne City public schools, has resigned his position. The resignation is effective at the close of this year, according to word here Saturday.

The resignation is said to have come as a result of election of three new members to the board of education of that city, all of whom are from the group opposed to past policies of the school management.

STATE STUDYING DEER SITUATION

MAY OPEN COUNTIES CLOSED PAST FIVE YEARS.

Conservation Department Has Many Petitions Asking Closed Period Be Extended Further.

"Pending an investigation of the deer situation in the several counties in which closing orders will expire during this year or next, so that essential facts may be obtained and so that a consistent policy may be formulated and put into effect at one time, rather than separately by individual counties," the conservation commission at its May meeting postponed definite action on a request from Emmet county that its closing order be continued.

The Emmet county board of supervisors, in a petition to the commission, asked that the closing order prohibiting killing of deer in that area for a five year period, be continued.

"We note with pride," the petition said, "the increasing number of deer in our county and believe it to be the wish of a majority of the resident people of Emmet county that the hunting and killing be further prohibited within said county."

Closing orders for several of the counties in the northern part of the lower peninsula expire this year and next. Certain areas in several counties will be open to hunting this year unless the closing orders are renewed. Unless action is taken by the Department of Conservation or the legislature, Charlevoix, Emmet, and all counties south of townline 20 will automatically re-open to deer and bear hunting in November, 1931.

The commission has recently received several petitions similar to that sent in from Emmet county, and expects others. It has also received petitions asking that certain closed counties be declared open to hunting when the present closing orders expire. Such petitions were based on the argument that closed counties tend to result in serious over-hunting in the adjoining "open" counties.

With tourist and similar interests seeking local closed deer seasons and other interests seeking more open hunting territory, the conservation commission will seriously consider the entire situation in an endeavor to arrive at an equitable policy and plan.

KONJOLA PUTS GRATEFUL MAN BACK ON JOB

Suffered Ten Years From Stomach Trouble — Pays Splendid Tribute to New Medicine.

MR. O. E. MITTELBUSCHER.

"Read of my amazing experience with Konjola and then judge for yourself as to its merits," said Mr. O. E. Mittelbuscher, 4638 Cope street, Detroit. "I suffered from stomach trouble in various forms for ten years. Practically everything I ate caused me to have cramping spells and my stomach bloated with gas. For weeks at a time I was not able to eat any solid foods, nor drink anything cold. I was restless at night and became very nervous. Continually, I suffered from headaches and was only able to work part time."

"I first heard of Konjola through the recommendation of friends. I decided to find out what it would do for me. Before I finished the second bottle my condition improved wonderfully. I continued with the treatment until I had taken six bottles, and at the end of that time I was eating whatever I pleased without the slightest distress. My nerves were calmed and headaches disappeared. It has been four months since I quit taking Konjola and I have regained my strength. I have not lost a day's work since I completed the treatment."

Although many sufferers are greatly benefited within a week or two, it is best to take Konjola for six or eight weeks to obtain thorough results.

Konjola is sold in Charlevoix, Mich., at F. J. Fessenden's drug store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

COUNTY NORMAL NEWS.

During the last two weeks much interest has been aroused among the normal students by the various exhibits held in the rural schools of Charlevoix county. One person from the normal is asked to judge the exhibit at one school with two other outside judges.

The schedule for judging is as follows: Miss Crump at Wildwood in Evangeline township on May 9; Mrs. Andrus at Knop in Wilson township on May 21; Miss Richardson at Clarion in Melrose township on May 23; Miss Taylor at Ironton in Evangeline township on May 26; Miss Abbey at Bay Shore in Hayes township on May 27; Miss LaCount at Barnard in Marion township on May 28.

The plans for the annual exhibit of the Charlevoix public schools have been completed and work is progressing very rapidly on the arrangement of the exhibit. Both the training and normal rooms have assumed the appearance of being quite "dressed up." A visit to the exhibits in these rooms will prove to be a source of endless pleasure and information to the observer.

Half-day teaching has again been resumed in the training room. Last week Miss Trimble, Miss Crump and Miss Taylor taught a half day. Miss Jalls taught Tuesday afternoon in the training room.

Everyone is preparing himself for the state music test which is to be given on Thursday of this week.

Last week was devoted to a study of Michigan in particular. On one day everyone made maps of Michigan, each person's map representing something different, such as "population," "rainfall," "climate," "products," "largest cities," and "state representative, senatorial and judicial districts."

In correlation with the map work of Michigan, everyone wrote a theme on different subjects concerning Michigan. Some of the topics were: "Michigan Poets," "Michigan Indians," "Michigan Wild Flowers," "Michigan Lakes and Waterways," "Independent Michigan," and "Salt."

The class in agriculture is studying birds and trees. Each one has selected one bird and one tree which he must tell the class about. Much valuable information is being gained this way. As a part of their "tree talk," Miss Sutton and Miss Richardson are arranging a free exhibit of ten evergreen trees. This will be presented on Tuesday.

Training Room.

Last Tuesday afternoon the first grade of the training room under the direction of Miss Sutton and Miss LaCount accompanied Miss Phillips and her first grade on a nature trip through the woods and to the beach. The little folks learned a great deal as well as having enjoyed themselves immensely.

After the nature study the first grade, under the direction of the student teachers, made a little reading chart, telling of all the things they had seen. Everyone enjoyed reading the chart when it was finished.

AT THE MOVIES.

Colorful Film.

"The Isle of Lost Ships," showing at the Palace Theatre May 29 and 30, is a colorful adventure film, dealing with shipwreck, mutiny, mystery, flight and escape, underwater thrills and grotesque, dangerous humans stranded in the Sargasso Sea. Virginia Valli, Jason Robards and Noah Beery are featured. It's a First National picture.

Battle of Blondes in "Johnny Jones." When blonde meets blonde, then comes the tug of war! Alice Day, golden-haired heroine tries for the love of Eddie Buzzell with Edna Murphy, golden-haired vamp, in "Little Johnny Jones," the new First National picture at the Palace Theatre May 31st and June 1st.

The thrills of a melodrama flash across the screen, but the story is very human. Eddie Buzzell, Broadway's pint-sized favorite musical comedian, sings many clever song hits and proves his dramatic ability in the title role. He is supported by a splendid cast.

Mervyn LeRoy directed "Little Johnny Jones," which is based on the famous musical comedy of the same title by George M. Cohan.

Jason Robards made his screen debut with Mae Murray in "The Gilded Lily" and now he is giving her leading support in her first talking and singing picture, "Peacock Alley," the Tiffany production recorded by RCA Photophone and showing at the Palace Theatre June 2-3.

His recent talking pictures are "On Trial" and "The Gambler." In "Peacock Alley" he portrays a successful young district attorney who comes from Texas to marry an actress and gets tangled in a drama of peacock alley.

WHY SPARK PLUGS SHOULD BE CLEAN

Must Be Kept Free of Excess Carbon and Oil to Function Properly.

Spark plugs to function properly must be kept free of excess carbon and oil formations. Cleaning is easily done. Simply fill the lower part of the plug with alcohol, or any liquid metal polish, and allow to stand for a few seconds; take a piece of wire covered with one thickness of cloth and rub the carbon from the insulator; then wipe clean and dry thoroughly before replacing in the engine.

Use Cloth or Knife.

In cleaning the sparking points use emery cloth or a knife.

In cases where the electrode is badly worn away cleaning with emery cloth is of no avail; likewise when the insulator is coated heavily the best and most economical remedy is to change plugs since the coating cannot be cleaned off readily.

When spark plugs are severely worn loss of power is often evident and eventually missing of the engine will occur which in turn produces the following major troubles:

1. Oil pumping, causing formation of carbon and sticky valves.
2. Poor starting and excessive drain on the battery.
3. Poor running; loss of power especially on hills.
4. Higher gasoline consumption.
5. Larger engine repair expense.
6. Poor driving satisfaction.

Spark plugs as a rule should be changed every 10,000 miles.

Good Results at Ohio Station Have Been Obtained.

Cane molasses in the poultry ration possesses certain distinct advantages over corn, when substituted for that grain in quantities up to 10 per cent of the ration. This has been established by two years of experimental work by the poultry husbandry department of the Ohio State university. The molasses has replaced corn on a pound-for-pound basis. "It has given equally good results in raising for stalling and growing chickens, laying hens and fattening birds," says Prof. A. R. Winter of the poultry department, in discussing the results of the tests.

In a test with laying hens, those fed on a ration containing 5 per cent of molasses laid 16.93 per cent more eggs than a group fed with corn and no molasses. At the same time the mortality among them was only 5 per cent as compared to 12.5 per cent among the hens which got no molasses. The test was carried on during the fall and winter months.

Growing chicks, at eight weeks of age, weighed 17.7 per cent more when fed a 5 per cent molasses ration, and suffered a mortality of only 7.32 per cent as against 12.30 per cent for the chicks which received corn instead of molasses. When fed 10 per cent molasses the chicks weighed only 16.5 per cent more, but the mortality had been reduced to 4.88 per cent.

"The cane molasses carries some vitamin B and furnishes carbohydrates in easily available form," says Professor Winter. "The potassium salts in the product serve as a mild laxative. It is believed that the carbohydrates create a condition in the intestine unfavorable to the development of coccidiosis and other harmful bacteria. This theory is under investigation at the present time."

Milk Solids Favored

for All Kinds of Fowl

Skin milk solids are fundamental in the poultry ration, recommended by Massachusetts Agricultural college. In Extension Leaflet No. 6, "Laying mash formula is: 100 pounds bran, 100 pounds middlings, 200 pounds yellow corn meal, 100 pounds ground oats, 50 pounds meat scrap, 25 pounds powdered milk, 25 pounds alfalfa leaf meal, 5 pounds fine salt, 25 pounds steamed bone meal; and the grain formula is 100 pounds each of cracked corn, whole corn, wheat, or barley and oats. In addition the leaflet recommends: "Feed skin milk whenever available. . . . When all the skin milk the bird will consume is available, meat scrap need not be fed." For chicks, the laying mash with an additional 25 pounds of dry skin milk is recommended, together with chick grain, 200 pounds fine cracked corn, and 100 pounds cracked wheat. Milk solids in the laying mash amount to 4 per cent; in the chick mash to 8 per cent.

Sprouted Oats Needed

by the Laying Hens

"Sprouted oats for laying hens" is a formula that should be in every poultryman's feeding guide, says G. L. Stevenson, of the South Dakota State college. It is not very expensive either. However, it does require a warm room or basement.

Equipment needed for sprouting oats may be homemade. The boxes should be shallow, not over three or four inches deep. In preparing the oats for sprouting, it should be soaked overnight in a bucket or tub. A few drops of formaldehyde added to the water in which the oats are soaked will prevent mold from developing. Moldy grain is often fatal to poultry.

After the oats have been soaked and drained it may be spread out in the boxes and kept in a warm room or in a heated sprouting device. In a few days when the oats sprout have attained a length of two or three inches, they will be ready for feeding.

Broody Hen Care

When several broody hens are sitting in coops close against one another, it may save much potential trouble if each bird is tethered by a long, thin cord from one leg to her nest-box. This will insure that, after her spell off duty, she joins her own nest and not a neighbor's, as she is otherwise liable to do. A hen may settle down for a short time on a strange nest, but soon she finds out her mistake, jumps up, and so allows the eggs to be chilled.

Use for Vitamine D

Vitamine D, which is found in cod liver oil, is useful in helping to properly assimilate minerals. This vitamin is furnished by the direct rays of sunshine. During the winter months, sunshine does not contain as many of these helpful rays as in summer. When sunshine passes through ordinary glass a great deal of the helpful influence is lost. These two factors make it possible to utilize cod liver oil to advantage in winter rations for laying hens.

UNITED STATES OF EUROPE.
The last French troops of occupation leave the Rhine. The war is over.

The international bank at Basel takes charge of German reparations, according to the Young plan. The foundation is laid for what may grow into a permanent, co-operative financial system among European nations.

At the same time, Briand, the most enlightened statesman of the Old World, launches his plan for a United States of Europe. In this lies the possibility of making the Old World new.

Briand's scheme is naturally compared with the United States of America. This country is admitted to have furnished him with the idea and pattern. We are great and prosperous, he says, because we are 48 sovereignties functioning as one. He wants Europe to function likewise economically, and even politically as far as possible.

He would sweep away frontiers and give industry and trade free scope. There would be no more tariff barriers, no hindrance to the free movement of goods and people. All would co-operate for the benefit of all, by some loose federal system not yet worked out.

We may thank Europe for the compliment, and wish her well.

ANGLERS WAIT OPENING OF BASS SEASON

All Inland Lakes of State May Be Fished June 25th.

With the trout season now well under way, Michigan's bass fishermen are preparing for the opening of the season on their favorite fish.

June 25th, when all inland lakes will be open to fishing, the season will open on all bass, bluegills, and sunfish. The size limit for black bass is not less than ten inches and white bass, not less than seven inches. The day's catch limit for black bass is five, and 25 in a day as an aggregate of all other kinds of bass, bluegills, sunfish and perch.

"The bass season is opening ten days later this year than in 1929," Fred A. Westerman, head of the Fish Division of the Department of Conservation said, "but we do not anticipate violations through ignorance of the new regulations. The later season will more nearly assure anglers that they are not catching bass during their spawning season. The ten days later season will undoubtedly mean an increase in the number of bass in our lakes because of the increased protection given spawning fish."

WILL ORGANIZE TWO LOCAL BASEBALL 9'S

Indian Team Opens Season Here With Belleaire on Sunday, June 8.

Leo Powers has taken over the managerial reins for the Indian organization. He announces that the season-opener will be played at Charlevoix on June 8th with Belleaire.

It is also understood that another team, composed of college and local players, will be organized within a short time. In addition, Mr. Powers announces that several boxing shows will be put on in Charlevoix under the auspices of the American Legion.

SEIZED FIVE MILES SMALL MESHED NETS

Patrol No. 1 Takes Equipment of Wisconsin Operators.

Five miles of gill nets, valued at more than $2,000 were confiscated by the Department of Conservation when the Commercial Fisheries Patrol No. 1, under command of Captain Charles J. Allers, discovered the unlicensed nets in Michigan waters near the Beaver Islands.

The nets were taken to the warehouse operated by the Division of Fisheries at Cheboygan.

According to tags on the nets, they were owned by Wisconsin fishermen and had been laid far over on the Michigan side of Lake Michigan.

The nets were seized on the grounds that they were being used in Michigan waters without the necessary Michigan commercial fishermen's license.

One's Own Rooftree Makes for Ambition

Although home ownership has increased measurably during the last few years as the result of educational programs carried on by realtors and savings associations, the majority of American families still pay rent. Only about 35 per cent of American families are under their own rooftrees. This proportion could be largely increased in the opinion of a city real estate manager. If as much stress were placed on the spiritual values as on the mere financial value of home ownership.

"Assuming that the purchase is properly financed," he says, "the material advantage of home ownership over renting is indisputable. To my mind, however, the greater benefit is the enrichment of life itself that comes with planting one's own roots in the soil."

"A strange and wonderful experience comes to the man, who for the first time, owns his home. Hitherto he has been a nomad, living in other people's houses, subject to their regulations, whims and legal requirements. He may live in them a long time and never become a part of them nor they of him. But let him acquire the land and the house that stands on it—and forthwith he begins to grow in an amazing number of ways. He becomes established. He becomes identified with that piece of land and that house. It is his. It is part of it and it becomes part of him in many senses. It acquires the marks of his tastes. Its design, furnishings, upkeep and gardens all become symbols of himself."

"So many people hope to own their own homes eventually and set it as a goal in their lives, but delay too long. The time to begin owning a home is when you can get enough credit to go into debt for it. This provides a spur to ambition; a point on which he can focus his expenditures so that they bring him the greatest return in health and happiness."

Housewives! Which Benefits You Most?

The Itinerant Peddler or YOUR MERCHANT?

The peddler is here today and gone tomorrow. Through "high pressure" salesmanship, he persuades trusting housewives to accept his sometimes questionable merchandise at what he calls a "ridiculously low price."

Guard yourself against the wiles of the peddler. Too often, there is great disappointment in the goods bought. Or the housewife finds herself unsuspectingly "tricked" into a greater obligation than she contemplated. Or she never hears anything more after her "first deposit."

The peddler wants your dollar—that's all. There is no need for conscientious or honest service on his part.

On the other hand - -

Your merchant is here in Charlevoix to stay. He knows that he can succeed only by gaining your confidence and good will—by selling you quality merchandise at honest prices, and, nine times out of ten—if you'll make value comparisons—you'll find his goods just as cheap and generally cheaper than the usual peddler "trash."

Your merchant is interested in your welfare. The taxes he pays and the contributions he makes help to give you and your families advantages that make for physical, educational, moral and civic progress.

Play fair with your merchants. They have invested heavily in Charlevoix because of their confidence in you. Keep that confidence intact by purchasing at home—where you get the most for your money.

We, the undersigned, Believers in Charlevoix, heartily endorse the above:

DAIRY FACTS

WATER SUPPLY IS IMPORTANT ITEM

Cow Must Have It to Aid in Digesting Food for Milk.

(By G. A. Wittmann, Purdue University)

The importance of a liberal supply of pure fresh water for the dairy herd during the winter season should be given careful consideration on every farm. Many herds are undersupplied at this time.

There are more than eight gallons of water in each 100 pounds of milk. The cow must have water to assist in digesting the food which makes the milk. Then the body gives off moisture in addition to the other needs. It requires nearly seven pounds of water for each quart of milk which a cow produces.

This must come from the feed or the water trough. During the winter season a large part of the ration consumed is dry roughage. This necessitates the drinking of larger amounts of water than if pasture were a part of the daily feed. When the water consumed is insufficient the effect is not long in reaching the milk pull.

Watering the milking herd once daily is not often enough. Such a practice forces the cow to consume five, eight or perhaps ten gallons at one time. Although the stomach of the cow is larger than that of any other of our farm animals, taking this large quantity of liquid into the stomach at one time tends to interfere with the digestion of the feed. This is especially true if the temperature of the water is near the freezing point.

Water at a low temperature must be raised to approximately body temperature before it can be assimilated by the tissues. Heat must be absorbed from the body to accomplish this, inasmuch as part of the feed which an animal eats goes for the production of heat and energy, the consumption of large amounts of cold water tends to increase the food supply used for this purpose.

Dairy cattle in milk should be supplied with water not colder than 50 degrees Fahrenheit. Even in winter water pumped from the well will not be colder, but as it stands in the trough on a cold day the temperature approaches the freezing point. Many dairymen are finding the tank heater a very profitable investment for the dairy herd where a water system is not installed in the barn.

The expense for fuel required to heat the water consumed by the stock is almost negligible. Some dairymen use corn cobs for the purpose. It is poor policy to use a well balanced ration to increase the milk flow when the herd is not receiving enough water. The water supply is an important item on the dairy farm in winter.

DAIRY FARMER OF FUTURE IS ALIVE

Will Not Permit Cow to Eat Up Profits of Another.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture)

The dairy farmer of the future will own a modern farmhouse. He will be supported by a high-producing herd of well-bred dairy cattle, which will be fed largely from luxuriant, home-grown crops, raised on well-tilled fertile soil. In short, the dairy farmer of the future will know how to live better and will live up to the best that he knows. That is the prophecy of J. C. McDevell, of the bureau of dairy industry, United States Department of Agriculture.

"The dairy farmer of today is progressive," he says, "but in many cases he is passively progressive. He knows what to do but he does not always do it. The farmer of the future will never allow one cow to eat up the profits of another cow is making. He will allow only high-producing and profitable dairy cows on his fertile farm."

"At the present time the average dairy herd produces about 150 pounds of butterfat a year per cow. The time will come when our dairy herds will double that production. This, however, will not result in overproduction of dairy products, because we shall then keep fewer and better cows. By doubling the average production per cow, it is possible to triple the average income over cost of feed. Thus the dairy farmer will make more money."

"But why do dairy farmers want more money? They want it in order that they and their families may have a better living, which includes better homes and better schools. The time is coming when our dairy farmers and their families are going to have not only a good living and the advantages of the open country but also many of the opportunities and conveniences that are now enjoyed by the people of the cities."

Washing Udder Helpful in Stimulating Yield

When cows are stalled much of the time the udders and rear quarters usually become more or less soiled. This can be prevented in a measure by clipping the long hair around those parts but even then frequent washing is necessary.

If the best quality milk is to be produced the udder should be washed before each milking. One man should go through the barn with a soft cloth and a pail of warm water doing this just before milking is started.

Such a plan not only insures cleanliness but it induces the cow to let her milk down more freely so that when the milker comes to her the udder is ready for the process of milking. Some cows are slow to "give down" and for them the massaging or manipulation of the udder that is inevitable in the process of washing is especially useful.

Sterilizing Utensils Is Recommended for Dairy

Utensils such as cans and pails may be sterilized by inverting them over a steam jet, although this system is not to be recommended for general farm use. The effectiveness of the jet will depend upon the size of the opening through which the steam is ejected, and the length of time the utensils are steamed. It usually requires about a half a minute to steam a ten-gallon can thoroughly if the steam-gauge pressure is 20 to 25 pounds. If a steam jet is used, the utensils should be steamed until they are too hot to handle with the bare hands. After treatment in this manner, they will become dry from their own heat if placed right side up and uncovered for a few minutes before they are inverted on the rack.

Grading Up Dairy Herd by Using Pure-Bred Sire

At what rate will a grade animal be "bred up" by the use of a pure-bred sire and the resulting offspring of each cross? The offspring from the first cross of a pure-bred sire on a grade female will be 50 per cent grade and 50 per cent pure-bred. This offspring then bred to a pure-bred sire will produce an offspring whose make-up is 25 per cent grade and 75 per cent pure-bred. By continuously repeating this operation, the grade blood will theoretically be bred out, though for practical reasons such an animal can never become eligible. In the seventh generation the animal will be 98.219 per cent pure-bred.

Oak Trees Are Favored for Roadside Planting

Oak trees, of which there are species native to nearly all parts of the country, are more generally used for roadside planting than any other kind of tree, says the bureau of public roads of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Maples are next in importance for a large part of the country, but as the most-used species are not well adapted for the purpose, the selection must be carefully made.

For the cooler dry regions the most promising trees are the green ash, common locust, hackberry, thornless honey-loest, and poplars, with box-elder, willows, and poplars for the extremes of cold and drought.

In warm, dry climates the eucalyptus, or gums, the palms, the Jerusalem thorn, and the mesquite are good.

Only thorny, vigorous trees, with healthy foliage, look well on country roads. To secure this type for any location it is usually best to select native varieties, although trees from localities with similar growing conditions are frequently satisfactory.

Dairy Facts

It costs money to grow foods for cows.

For washing and closing utensils, a clean, safe water supply is absolutely necessary.

The dishcloth may be justly charged with being responsible for a lot of the unclean utensils now being used to handle milk and cream.

The main essentials in housing dairy cows in winter are to keep them dry, out of the wind and drafts and to provide plenty of fresh air and sunlight.

With good breeding to produce cows of high production, never hesitate to give an individual all the feed she can efficiently convert into milk and butterfat.

Milk that has curdled will separate with difficulty. Previous to separating, such milk should be thoroughly mixed by pouring from one can to another, breaking up the curd as finely as possible, so as not to clog the machine.

Do not neglect cooling your milk and cream even though the weather is cold. Since cold water will cool your milk or cream 21 times as fast as air, it is important to always set your milk in cold water regardless of the temperature of the air.

BANKERS REPORT DROP IN SAVINGS

Lure of Stock Market, Partly, to Blame, but Slackened Speculation Expected to Bring Return to Thrift.

The first recession in the nation's savings account in banks in the twenty years during which records in this field have been kept by the American Bankers Association was disclosed for last year in the recent annual compilation prepared by its Savings Bank Division. The shrinkage amounted to over $195,000,000, on the basis of figures for the year ending June 29, 1929, whereas a year earlier the reported increase was over $2,300,000,000, the largest ever recorded. The number of savings depositors also decreased during the year covered by more than 500,000 accounts. The lure of the stock market and affiliated activities are cited as part of the explanation for these changes.

The association's statement says that savings deposits in banks and trust companies of continental United States on June 29, 1929, stood at $28,217,656,000. The recession in savings, it declares, indicates a fundamental change in the savings situation, irrespective of whether it is temporary or not.

How Savings Used to Grow
 "In 1926 savings deposits increased $1,562,000,000, in 1927, almost $1,400,000,000 and in 1928 over $2,300,000,000," it says. "It appears now that some influences in one year have taken the gain that might reasonably have been expected in savings deposits for 1929 and lowered them from the high mark of the preceding year. This recession is not one coming as a result of a drought, famine, unemployment or conditions outside of the United States."

"A year ago it was stated: 'The year closing June 30, 1929, registered the largest gain in savings deposits in banks and trust companies of continental United States ever recorded in the history of this country.' What a difference one year makes! From a gain of more than 24 billions of dollars in savings deposits to a loss of almost 200 millions!"

"The loss in savings deposits is reflected also in the loss of savings depositors. The year 1929 showed a total of 52,664,127 depositors, against 53,183,348 for 1928, a loss of 519,221."

"Industrial production was much higher last year than the preceding year. Factory payrolls were considerably greater. In production, employment and trade, advances were made over the preceding year. In the farm areas the improvement noted for 1928 did not recede in 1929 and the livestock industry in all its branches was prosperous."

The Causes of the Drop
 "The causes of the recession are possibly multiple. There is scarcely any reason to doubt that one of the important factors draining away savings and decreasing depositors has been the lure of profits to be made in stocks. For a number of years the people have been regaled with stories of profits made in stocks in all types of companies. During the last few years there has been a spurious philosophy preached that panics such as formerly occurred were no longer possible."

"If it was the lure of profits in stocks which caused the recession in savings, then a factor in future savings will be the success attendant upon this venture of savings depositors in stocks. If the experiment did not prove generally successful, then another year will doubtless witness an increase in savings deposits as well as in savings depositors."

HELPING YOUNG FOLK TO BECOME BANKERS

Through the American Institute of Banking, which is the American Bankers Association's educational section, the banking profession is educating 35,000 bank men and women in the technical and scientific departments of their work. These students are enabled by this institute, which is entirely non-commercial in its operations, to obtain a grasp of the finer points of banking without interrupting their employment or interfering with their earnings, in their bank jobs.

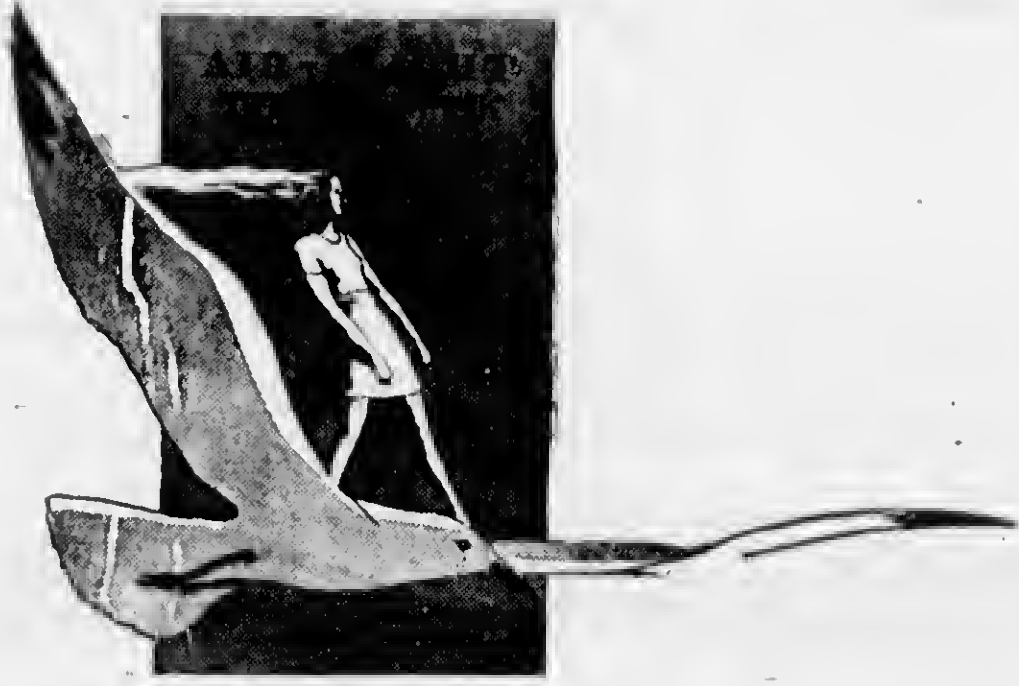

The courses given, including banking economics and law and bank administration in all the departments, have been worked out under the direction of senior college educators and the lectures are always given by practical men, such as lawyers in the legal courses, experts in banking operations and college professors in the economics courses. There are chapters with meeting rooms in over 200 cities and also a number of smaller study groups are fostered with correspondence aid.

It has been said that the A. I. B., as it is familiarly known throughout the banking field, is the greatest adult educational organization in the world and is supplying the banking business with the largest supply of trained workers each year that any comparable line of business is receiving. The organization holds an annual convention attended by hundreds of young bank workers as well as senior bank officers actively interested in furthering the institute's educational work, at which numerous technical subjects of practical banking application are presented and discussed. This year's convention will be held at Denver, Colorado, June 16 to 20.

"ALL A MAN HATH"

What greater sacrifice than that of our country's heroes who laid down their lives in defense of our nation. What more fitting than that this country set aside one day each year in their honor. What more proper than that as loyal Americans we observe that—May 30th—in a way that bespeaks no doubt of the place they hold in our memory.

TREES.

I think that I shall never see
A poem lovely as a tree.
A tree whose hungry mouth is prest Against the earth's sweet flowing breast;
A tree that looks at God all day,
And lifts her leafy arms to pray;
A tree that may in Summer wear
A nest of robins in her hair;
Upon whose bosom snow has lain;
Who intimately lives with rain.
Poems are made by fools like me,
But only God can make a tree.
—Joyce Kilmer.

The removal of the century old pine tree on Lewis street, just off Dixon avenue, brings to mind the poem of Joyce Kilmer. No more appropriate reference to this unfortunate incident can be made.

Have Something Left

It is a wise man who shows a profit for his work every week, the man who has something left from his earnings after all his expenses are paid.

Naturally, fore-thought and planning are necessary in many instances if this profit is to be shown.

We can all spend all we make if we are careless, but a little careful planning will enable us to have "something left" in a savings account, to show as a profit for our labors.

Start next pay day; bank your profit in a savings account, then continue the practice, and this profit will earn added profit.

THE DONKEY AGE.

Any man who has reached the tender age of 50 carries around with him the humiliating memory of four or five odd occasions on which he made an ass of himself. Most of them occurred before the 30th year.

In nearly every instance the cause of the trouble was his own conceit, his cocksureness, sharpness or overweening pride in his own opinion.

Two classes of men are particularly prone to donkey behavior: one is the young man who, through his position as buyer, is tempted to take advantage of others because no one is looking; the other is the young salesman who has made good quickly and falls for the idea that everybody in the plant except himself is a dunce.

When such a buyer and such a salesman reach a reasonable age and mellow down a bit, they find a lot of people they are a little ashamed to look in the eye. But we all have to pass through that donkey age before we reform.

The younger buyer will live more happily if he shoots straight and exercises sportsmanship; the younger salesman may well keep in mind that the friendship of the superintendent, the foreman and the boys in the plant is the greatest asset he has.

IT IS NOT ESSENTIAL.

We place too much stress upon money. The best things in life are not those things which cost the most.

In the matter of public health, money may be essential to treat disease, but not so necessary to prevent it. The essentials to good health are exercise, fresh air, sleep and plain food. Exercise is free to those who have energy enough to seek it. Fresh air abounds—except in a few of the larger cities where the summer heat oppresses. Plain food costs money, but not as much as many foods of the expensive sort. More people should eat more of that which costs less. And sleep is cheap too. Most people burn the candle from both ends and complain of being tired.

In happiness there is no need for expense. Those whose pleasures are based upon too strong a financial basis or demand, are living falsely. Happiness must be found in one's own attitude. Then the common things of life become sources of entertainment and pleasure.

Money, to some extent, is essential. Too many stress its importance too strongly. —Grand Rapids (Minn.) Herald-Review.

"A GOOD FIVE-CENT NICKLE."

"What this country needs," remarked some anonymous philosopher in a recent magazine, "is a good five-cent nickel." And thousands will agree that the five-cent piece is not what it was back in the days when we were in knickerbockers. Leaving aside the highly controversial uses of that coin they were once legal tender for a glass of something that just at this season of the year used to be heralded by the hanging out of pictorial representations of goats with particularly long chin whiskers, it is shocking to realize how few articles can still be purchased for this next-to-the-smallest American coin. Considering this, we continue with a tender smile at the circulation manager, it is cheering to remember that this weekly can still be purchased for five cents a number, and now that we have called that fact to your attention in this refined and courteous manner we have no doubt that the new subscriptions will pour in at an even faster rate than heretofore. —Grand Rapids Chronicle.

AUTOS AND WILDFLOWERS.

The American Automobile Association has taken up the defense of native wildflowers in all parts of the country. It appeals to motorists to spare the lovely flowers growing along roadsides and in woods made accessible by automobiles. Unless drastic steps are taken," says the appeal, "to protect this shrubbery which adorns the hillsides and valleys, the time will come when it will be no more. The car owners, who more than anyone else have been responsible for the ruthless destruction, should make amends by joining the campaign for preservation. They have more to gain than any other group from the preservation of these heralds of the spring."

The last point is one that needs more emphasis. By despoiling the scenery each spring these motorists are gradually wiping it out so that in future springs there will be nothing lovely to see as one drives through the country.

JAPANESE DEPRESSION.

Americans who think business and employment in this country are in a bad way should take a look at Japan. That country was very prosperous for several years after the war, and much envied. Then came the tumble. Now, according to the head of the labor department at Tokyo:

"There seems to be little hope of the present financial depression abating in the near future. Industrial disputes are increasing at an alarming rate. Thousands of workers have been replaced by machines, thousands of others have lost their jobs through consolidation, and those remaining at work are threatened by the growing tendency to reduce wages."

There is a great deal of unemployment in America, too, resulting from lower demand for goods, and replacement of machines for men. But we have virtually no labor disputes and consolidations and substitutions of very few wage reductions.

Our situation, no doubt, is much better fundamentally than Japan's. We seem to be a couple of jumps ahead of her in industrial development. Capital and labor understand each other better and work together better. It is generally held now by American business men that it does not pay to cut wages, because that reduces the buying power of consumers. There is more feeling of responsibility among employers for providing work. And the American temperament is more hopeful.

HOME-BUILDING.

The National Building Survey Conference has been urging, for some months, the remodeling and modernization of old homes rather than the building of new ones. Money-lending institutions have been co-operating with this policy. Thus, while there have been large sums spent all over the country in making existing homes more attractive and livable, there has been much less new construction than usual.

The principle of remodeling is sound, and should not be applied merely in dull times. There has been too much sacrifice of good American homes in a blind quest for novelty. But along with preserving the old there must always be new construction, lest we stand still or slip back.

It is reassuring to learn that the national surplus or "carry-over" of new homes built last year has now been pretty well "absorbed," as a real estate man expresses it, and thus the ground is cleared for further building. Financing is being made easier, and from now on it is expected that the market for lots and houses will be better.

TEMPERANCE TEACHING.

Quite aside from their approval or disapproval of Dwight Morrow's stand on the eighteenth amendment, many persons should take to heart this statement of his:

"I look forward to the time when the old leaders in the temperance movement—the churches and the schools and the social workers—will appreciate that they have not reached a final solution of a world-old problem by the present eighteenth amendment."

It has seemed to many thoughtful persons that there was a definite and unfortunate relapse from temperance education and training at the time of the adoption and ratification of the prohibition amendment. Emphasis switched over to law-enforcement, penalizing law-breakers, increasing police work, playing politics with prohibition, and so on. All of these things must be reckoned with, of course, but they should not take the place of honest, thoughtful, constructive temperance teaching.

Safety Bull Pen Demonstration.
The use of a safety bull pen for confining the herd sire is frequently the only feasible means of retaining a valuable animal, and at the same time remove all danger of injuries or death to the owner of the animal.

To show how easily and cheaply one of these pens can be built plans have been definitely made to have agricultural engineering specialists from Michigan State college construct one on the farm of Arlo Wick-ersham, Charlevoix, located opposite Nowland lake, on Monday, June 2nd.

The worth of a herd sire can not be determined until some of his heifers have freshened. By that time, the average bull is a potential menace to the life of the person handling him.

The safety bull pen permits the animal to get sufficient exercise, and at the same time is so constructed that no one has to be in the same pen with the animal at any time.

A safety bull pen can be built in one day by two men, and the construction cost is low. Any farmer can build one after seeing the one constructed at the farm of Arlo Wick-ersham.

Specialists in dairy husbandry from Michigan State college will be present at the meeting to be held at the time the pen is built. The importance of the herd sire in increasing the production of the dairy herd will be discussed.

leaves contain about two-thirds of the feeding value of the alfalfa plant, hay should be put in the stack or mow with as many leaves as possible. This can be done only with a minimum amount of handling after the hay begins to dry. It should be raked before it becomes brittle and most of the curing done in windrow or shock.
